THE "ZETETIC" TREATMENT OF MEDICINE, ON THE BASIS OF FREE PHOSPHORUS.

This system, founded by Dr. BIRLEY after over half a century's experience and research, is recommended to the notice of all seeking the restoration or maintenance of health. About twenty different compounds have already been tabulated suitable for most diseases.

The "Zetetic" treatment is particularly adapted to the restoration of health impaired by foreign climates or exhaustive duties.

The "Ironised" Phosphorus is largely used by those whose profession entails arduous work.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 2, 1884.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Dec. 14; Madras and Allahabad, Dec. 12; Calcutta, Dec. 11.

MUCH of the Times telegram this week is taken up with the discussion of the merits and demerits of the "concordat" that has been arrived at between Lord Ripon's Government and the Opposition on the subject of the Ilbert Bill. And Sir George Campbell has written an important letter to the Times on the same subject. The Times correspondent states—and we entirely agree with him—that the Anglo-Indian community accept the arrangement as "the next best thing to the total withdrawal of the Bill." On the other hand, the gist of Sir George Campbell's letter to the Times is, that in the eyes of English Radicals, Lord Ripon's arrangement is far worse than the total withdrawal of the Bill. So, again, last week Mr. F. S. Chapman told us that the proposed arrangement is a very bad one, whilst total withdrawal would have been a very good one.

So, also, the Indian Mirror, as one of the organs of the little clique of native agitators, says that, "the proposed modifications will place European British subjects in a more enviable position than would the total abandonment of the Bill."

HERE, then, we find a remarkable consensus of opinion. Anglo-Indians, Natives, Indian officials, English Radicals, all agree in saying that total withdrawal would have been better than Lord Ripon's proposals—or, as some prefer to put it, that Lord Ripon's proposals are worse than total withdrawal.

WHOSE influence, then, is it that prevented total withdrawal? We pause for a reply.

THE two most pleasing items of the week's budget are, first, the fact that the native aristocracy of Bengal "refused to countenance" any attempt to get up a Native agitation against the settlement; and, secondly, that in a meeting of the National Mahomedan Association of Calcutta, approval has been expressed of the settlement, notwithstanding an inflammatory address from a young barrister, whose name is not given.

It appears that we owe the "concordat" mainly to the good offices of Sir Auckland Colvin and Mr. Evans.

WE deal in our leading columns with the important meeting held at Calcutta last Saturday to protest against the Bengal Tenancy Bill.

THE enormous increase in the sale of Council Bills during the past year is a serious fact well worthy of the serious attention of economists. The following is an exceedingly interesting and able account of the Silver Market during the past year, which has been issued by Messrs. Mocatta and Goldsmid:—

"The price of bar silver, which during the latter part of 1882 had fallen rapidly from 52d. to 50d. per oz. standard, began to recover at the beginning of January last, and by the middle of March had reached 51 3-16d., the highest point attained during the year. The market then became weaker, and in May the price had fallen to 50 1-16d., from which there has been a gradual recovery, with occasional relapses, up to the present time, when we quote 51d. with a firm appearance. The average for the year is 50 9-16d., which compares unfavourably with that of preceding years; in 1880 it was 52 3-16d.; in 1881, 51 1/4d.; and in 1882, 51 13-16d. per oz. It is, however, not surprising that the average price of silver should have been somewhat lower than last year, considering that during the greater part of 1882 the India Council maintained a minimum of 1s. 8d. per rupee for the sale of their weekly drawings, and consequently, only disposed of about £13,000,000 during the year; while for the past twelve months they have sold freely at such rates as the market could afford, and have accordingly placed their drafts to the extent of £19,500,000. Notwithstanding this large increase in the sales of Council bills and transfers, the shipments of silver from England to India, £3,900,000, have been very nearly equal to those of the previous year, £4,233,000; but in 1882 there were large sums, in all about £2,000,000, shipped from Venice to India, whereas there have been none this year. It is probable that a lower price would have been touched, but for the fact that there have been, at times when the Indian demand was in abeyance, orders for Spain, as well as for home coinage, which absorbed the arrivals.

"As has been the case for some years past, the price of Mexican dollars has varied in almost exact proportion with that of bar silver—at, or at a very small fraction above, their melting value. The average for the year has been 49 3/4d., against 50 11-16d. in 1882. The quantity of dollars refined here has not been so large as last year, the demand for China and the Straits having been sufficient to take off nearly the whole of the imports, which have amounted to £3,350,000, while the shipments to the East have been £3,100,000, as against £1,900,000 in 1882.

"The imports and exports of silver in bars and coin for the last seven years have been as under:—

| | | Imports. | Exports. |
|------|-----|-------------|-------------|
| 1877 | ... | £20,000,000 | £19,000,000 |
| 1878 | ... | 11,000,000 | 11,250,000 |
| 1879 | ... | 10,500,000 | 11,000,000 |
| 1880 | ... | 6,500,000 | 7,250,000 |
| 1881 | ... | 6,700,000 | 7,000,000 |
| 1882 | ... | 9,100,000 | 8,950,000 |
| 1883 | ... | 9,300,000 | 8,700,000 |

"In the early part of the year there was a temporary demand for gold for export to America and Holland, which, besides absorbing all arrivals, caused the withdrawal from the Bank of England of about two millions sterling: but from May to October, with the exception of moderate amounts taken for India, the Bank received all imports, amounting to about four and a half millions. Since then, however, considerable sums have been sent to Egypt and South America, and one or two moderate shipments have been made to Spain and the United States.

"The orders for fine gold in small bars for India, though not individually large, have been continuous, and amount to over a million sterling.

"The gold operations have been on a smaller scale than for some years past, as will be seen by the subjoined table of imports and exports for the last seven years:—

| | | Imports. | Exports. |
|------|-----|-------------|-------------|
| 1877 | ... | £15,000,000 | £20,000,000 |
| 1878 | ... | 21,000,000 | 14,000,000 |
| 1879 | ... | 13,250,000 | 16,500,000 |
| 1880 | ... | 9,000,000 | 11,500,000 |
| 1881 | ... | 10,000,000 | 15,500,000 |
| 1882 | ... | 14,350,000 | 12,100,000 |
| 1883 | ... | 7,700,000 | 6,525,000 |

"The falling off in the total amount of imports is chiefly due to the absence of any shipments from the United States; the sum received thence in 1882 was over six millions sterling. The receipts from Australia have also declined by about three-quarters of a million. The imports of gold from South Africa have increased considerably during the last three months, but have scarcely yet become appreciable."

THE news from Afghanistan is very serious. The Amir has sustained a great disaster in the Mangal Hills bordering on the Kuram Valley, the force which he had sent against the recalcitrant Mangals having been entrapped into an ambushade and utterly routed.

THE Times of Jan. 2 contains an interesting letter from Dr. G. W. Leitner on the Mahdi, considered in relation to the Khalifat.

WE are informed that some Indian papers, referring to a review of "Education in the Punjab," that appeared by mistake in our columns, and was subsequently disavowed, have attributed its authorship to an officer of the Punjab Education Department. This is a mistake; and the actual writer, who is prepared to be personally referred to for verification of this statement, desires us to state that he is entirely unacquainted with the officer whose work he was criticising, and that he regrets that we took such a severe view of his criticism.

WE take the following obituary for the week ending Dec. 14, from the Times of India:—Rev. C. Centres, B.Sc.,

Professor of Physical Sciences at St. John's College, Trichonopoly; Major James Bell, L.4, R.A., Mooltan; Captain Edward Holwell Short, of the European Veteran Battalion, at Nagalore.

WE take the following with respect to the Freight Market from the Englishman of Dec. 11, 1883:—

"The past has been a week of even greater depression than the previous ones, and rates have suffered a further decline both by Canal and Cape. There is an absolute scarcity of all sorts of produce here, but that it is still in the country is proved by the reports from Bombay. There, owing to the reductions in the G.I.P. Railway rates, large quantities of produce are arriving daily from the interior, whilst here the E.I. Railway terminus is empty, and almost nothing arriving. Four vessels have been fixed during the week—three for London, and one for West Indies. Our unfixed tonnage has decreased to 43,000 tons."

WE take the following with respect to the Tea Market from Messrs. William Moran and Co's. Market Report:—

"On the December 6 10,360 chests were offered, and 9,621 sold. There was less demand, except for a few Darjeelings, and prices were about half to one anna lower for all Assam and Cachar lines over, say seven annas."

THE following on the same subject is from Messrs. Carritt and Co's Fortnightly Market Report:—

"Public sales were held on the November 29, when 8,458 packages were offered and sold. The quality generally was desirable, and all descriptions met with good inquiry at an advance in price of $\frac{1}{4}$ d. to 1d. on teas without point in cup, and 1d. to 2d. on good liquoring sorts. On the December 6, 10,360 packages were catalogued, of which 9,621 found buyers. The quality was not quite so satisfactory as before, and prices were weaker, in consequence of the depression of the home market reported by wire. There was good competition, however, at a general reduction of $\frac{1}{4}$ d. to 1d. per lb. on all grades."

THE following is Messrs. J. Thomas & Co's Indigo Report:—

"Three public sales have been held since the departure of last mail, at which 2,818 chests were offered, out of which 2,722 found buyers. Prices have been maintained for ordinary and middling qualities, but good and fine, of which there was rather a large proportion offered, have sold somewhat easier, showing us a decline of about Rs.5 per maund. With the private sales, the total quantity out of the market is about 67,000 maunds, or nearly half the estimated crop, against 53,000 at the same time last year."

ON the same subjects, Messrs. Moran & Co. report:—

"Business during the past week has been somewhat interrupted by the heavy rain which fell on the 4th and 5th December. We have not so far heard of this rain having extended to any part of Behar, where it would have been very beneficial, nor to more than one or two of the districts of Lower Bengal."

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

THE following is the official summary of the reports of the Agricultural Department on the state of the weather and prospects of the crops throughout India, for the week ending Dec. 3:—

"During the past week there has been light rain in British Burma, Assam, and Eastern Bengal, but none elsewhere. In Madras and Mysore harvesting is still going on. Standing crops are in good condition. In Bombay the kharif harvest is nearly over, and the rabi crops are doing well; but in two districts cotton has been injured by late rains. The river is now rising in Sindh. In the Berars and Hyderabad cotton is being picked and the kharif harvested, and the prospects of the rabi are favourable. In Central India and Rajputana rain is required for the rabi crops in parts; but general prospects continue good. In the Punjab and North Western Provinces and Oudh rabi sowings have been nearly finished, and are germinating fairly well, but rain is wanted. Cloudy weather has prevailed in the Northern districts, but no rain has fallen. In the Central Provinces the prospect of the rabi crop are reported to be very favourable. In Bengal there has been a change of weather, the sky being overcast, and slight showers having fallen. General prospects continue unfavourable; the rabi sowings having been greatly affected by want of rain, much land has been left unsown, and the outturn of the rice crop, which is now being harvested, is expected to be very poor in all save the Eastern districts and Orissa. In British Burma the prospects of the rice crop, which has been sown over a larger area than usual, are generally good, but some loss has been caused in the Arakkan Division and Bassein by excessive rain. Slight small-pox and fever are prevalent in most provinces, and sporadic outbreaks of cholera still occur in Southern India; otherwise the public health is good. Prices continue to fluctuate in Bengal."

The following is the report for Bengal:—

"The weather was cloudy in almost all districts, and there was a slight rainfall in Chittagong, the 24 Pergunnahs, Burdwan, and Cuttaek; it is still raining in Calcutta; the general prospects of the crops continue to be very unfavourable; the cold-weather crops are generally much in need of rain, so also is sugar-cane in some places; a good deal of land is said to have remained unsown with cold-weather crops on account of the continued drought; the earlier kind of the rice crop is being harvested, and the later kind is ripening; the rice crop, as already reported, will yield a very poor outturn; in some districts the average outturn will not exceed four annas; Eastern Bengal and Orissa will have a fair crop, but even in these parts it will be much below the average in some places; in some districts the prices continue to rise, in others they have fallen slightly, and in others again they remain stationary; fever is still prevalent in several districts."

TELEGRAPHIC INTELLIGENCE.

THE Times forwarded the following telegram on Thursday, dated Calcutta Dec. 27:—

"The following communiqué appears in to-day's Calcutta papers:—

"We are requested to contradict the rumour that the Viceroy had decided on the immediate disestablishment of the English Church in India. We understood that the circumstances which probably gave rise to the rumour are the following:—For some years past questions have been annually put in Parliament to the Government, on the subject of payments made on account of ecclesiastical establishments in India, and, in consequence communications have been made by the Secretary of State to the Indian Government, which necessitated consideration of the question how far the obligations of the State extend in regard to the provision of spiritual ministrations for Europeans, and especially its own employés. Considerable differences of opinion were bound to exist, and no conclusion has been come to. In fact, the matter has not gone beyond the discussion of general principles, and until these general principles are settled, no question affecting the amount of the existing grant can come before the Indian Government for practical consideration."

"In the circumstances, it would be well if the Secretary of State would publish the despatches which have passed between him and the Indian Government on the subject, as well as the communications which show the existence of considerable difference of opinion, and would state which members of the Indian Government expressed those differences."

THE following is the usual weekly telegram from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, dated Dec. 30:—

"The compromise, or, as the local newspapers call it, the 'concordat' between the Government and the Anglo-Indian Defence Association in the matter of the Ilbert Bill, has been much discussed during the past week. The Anglo-Indian press and public, with few exceptions, accept it as a fairly satisfactory settlement of the question, and as the next best thing to the total withdrawal of the Bill. The native journals, on the other hand, and the small section of noisy agitators who control their policy, denounce it in no measured terms. Their line of argument affords a striking proof of the real sentiments which actuated the native support of the Bill. They find fault with the compromise solely because it leaves the Europeans in possession of certain safeguards. Thus, the Indian Mirror, a journal which has taken a leading part in fomenting agitation and race-feeling, complains that the proposed modifications will place European British subjects in a more enviable position than would the total abandonment of the Bill. And even the Hindoo Patriot, a generally moderate organ, heads an article on the subject with the words 'Peace with dishonour,' and says that the Anglo-Indians have now more than they wanted, in a more extensive right of trial by jury than they enjoy in their own country."

"It seems clear, however, that men of moderate views, including all the real leaders of native society, are willing to accept the compromise as a way out of the difficulty. It is, I believe, the fact that a well-known agitator proposed to get up a meeting of protest, but that the native aristocracy refused to countenance the attempt. The Times of India states that a similar meeting was proposed to be held at Bombay, and that it also was abandoned."

"The National Mahomedan Association of Calcutta held a meeting to consider the question last Thursday. A young barrister who was present denounced the compromise in strong terms, and was called to order. One of the leading members of the Mahomedan community expressed himself as satisfied with the arrangement; and eventually the discussion was adjourned till after the next meeting of the Legislative Council.

"It has been asserted by some newspapers that modifications were first proposed by the Defence Association. It may, therefore, be well to state the true history of the compromise. The Defence Association made no proposals whatever, but confined itself to expressing its objections to the Bill. Some time ago, however, informal negotiations were opened between Sir Auckland Colvin, on behalf of the Government, and the Hon. Mr. Evans, Independent Member of the Legislative Council. The latter proposed, as an arrangement likely to be accepted by the Opposition, the addition to the Bill of a clause giving prisoners the option of claiming a trial before a European magistrate. The Government rejected this proposal, and Sir Auckland Colvin then suggested an extension of the jury system. After some discussion, he and Mr. Evans arrived at a scheme, which the latter laid before the Defence Association, who accepted it on behalf of the Opposition.

"A discussion on the subject will doubtless occur at Friday's meeting of the Legislative Council, when the Bill is to be referred to a Select Committee.

"A great meeting of the landholders of Bengal and Behar was held in the Town Hall yesterday, for the purpose of protesting against the Rent Bill. The Maharajah of Darbhanga presided. Hindoos, Mahomedans, and Europeans from all parts of the province attended, and the number of those present is said to have been about 3,000. Letters of apology from the Maharajahs of Oudh Behar and Burdwan and others were read. A number of gentlemen addressed the meeting, and six resolutions strongly condemning the Bill were passed unanimously.

"The exhibition is now rapidly approaching completion, and the jurors will commence the work of awarding the prizes in the course of the next few days. The number of visitors during the Christmas holidays was very large. On Christmas Day the attendance exceeded 30,000. The Jewellery Court, which was only opened last Monday, appears to be the chief centre of attraction, and it contains probably the finest display of the kind ever offered to the public view. Next in interest comes the Indian Court, which occupies a separate building on the Maidan, and is connected with the European and Australian Courts by a bridge over the Chowringhee-road. The entrance to this court is under a splendid stone archway of carved Gwalior work, which has been presented by the Maharajah Sindhia to the South Kensington Museum, and which is temporarily erected here. It consists of seventy-two tons of carved stone, and has a height of 33ft. The design is taken partly from some Jain cave temples, and partly from old palaces at Gwalior. The position of the arch is unfortunate, it being so placed that it is impossible to obtain a full view of it from any point. Passing under this archway, the visitor finds himself in a long building, the northern portion of which is styled the Calcutta Court, and is given up to the local tradesmen, while the transepts and the southern portion are allotted to Bengal and the other provinces, and to the Economic Court, for the display of food stuffs. The most conspicuous feature in the transepts consists of two enormous lay figures of elephants, erected for the purpose of displaying some very gorgeous howdahs and trappings. The entrance to the Economic Court is appropriately marked by a rice trophy—a handsome pillar, tastefully adorned with globular bottles containing specimens of the different kinds of rice grown in the country.

"The Indian provincial courts are somewhat unequal, but it may safely be affirmed that, taken together, they present a more complete and varied display of Indian arts and manufacturers than was ever before attempted. It is, however, a matter for great regret that it was found impossible to postpone the exhibition for another year. The buildings have been run up hurriedly, and the exhibits were hurriedly got together. It is greatly to the credit of the Executive Committee that they did so well in the short time at their disposal. Had they been allowed another year, the exhibition would have been infinitely better in every respect. I believe they did desire to hold it next winter, but the promoter, Mr. Joubert, was unable to accede to the suggestion.

"It appears probable that the force sent to coerce the Akhas to recover the captives will meet with resistance. It has already had some fighting. The Akhas promised the political officers to deliver up the prisoners, but it would seem that this promise was only given for the purpose of deception, and with the view of enabling them to surprise our troops. A telegram from the special correspondent of the Englishman states that on the night of the 23rd inst. the Akhas made three attacks on the camp of the flying column under Major Beresford. The troops formed square and repulsed them; our loss being one man killed, and a havildar and seven men wounded. Traces of blood showed that the Akhas had carried off their dead and wounded. It is stated that the two surviving prisoners are kindly treated, and that the Akhas have set them to work to teach the children of the tribe.

"The expedition to Bikaner has met with no resistance thus far. Some of the refractory Thakurs have already submitted, and it is likely that the rest will follow their example.

"The force sent by the Ameer to coerce the Mongols has fallen into an ambuscade near Kuram Valley, and been utterly routed. Mirokh Shah, the Ameer's representative, was killed. It is stated that the Ameer means to reinforce the local garrisons, with a view of enforcing his authority.

"Sir Robert Sandeman arrived at Kharan on Monday last, and was received by the Sirdar Azad Khan with every sign of satisfaction, a salute being fired in his honour. The health of the troops and the mission is generally good. This is the first time that British officers have visited the Khan.

"A Rangoon newspaper states that King Thebaw and Queen Scoopayalaf visited Sagin Fort, on the opposite side of the Irrawaddy, on the 19th inst. They went on board of a Burmese steamer, which was beautifully decorated, and which was accompanied by the whole of the Burmese fleet. Their Majesties were distinctly seen from the British steamers, and King Thebaw was observed intently gazing at the British ensign, which he saw for the first time. It is forty years since a Burmese king has been across the river.

"A Colombo telegram states that Colquhoun left that place on the 21st inst., for Siam, on an exploring expedition. He will start from Bangkok, while another party, under Mr. Hallett, will commence operations with reference to Burma."

The following telegram from the same correspondent, dated Jan. 1, 1884, is published in the Times of this morning:—

"The disturbances in Bikaner are at an end. The rebellious Thakurs have submitted, and the expeditionary force is now returning, after having blown up the fort at Bidasar, the stronghold of Bahadoor Singh, one of the rebels.

"The Maharajah of Kolapore died last week at Ahmednugger. He was declared insane some time ago, and has since been in confinement. While struggling with his keeper, he fell and ruptured his spleen, death ensuing almost immediately. The body was conveyed to Kolapore for cremation.

"The Viceroy will probably go to Hyderabad in February, for the purpose of installing the Nizam on the latter attaining his majority."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

MILITARY HANDBOOKS.*

A WORK of some little importance and of great value to all students of military matters is being carried out by Colonel C. B. Brackenbury, formerly superintending officer of Garrison Instruction. This gentleman, whose literary attainments and skill are well known, is editing a series of works on the various branches of military study, each book being written by an officer selected and known for his close knowledge of the subject he undertakes. In this way there have been published "Military Surveying and Reconnaissance," by Col. Hutchinson, and Major MacGregor—"Tactics," by Col. Wilkinson-Shaw—"Field Artillery," by Major Sisson Pratt, R.A.—"Military Administration," by Major Buxton, and "Military Law," by Major Pratt. These form a series, valuable not only to military men, but others who wish acquaintance with such subjects, and would be of special value to literary men, whose studies must frequently comprise military subjects. The Gibbon of the future need no longer rely solely on the few months, training as a militia officer, to which that historian attached so much credit.

The volume on Military Administration which has just lately been published is copious and curious; curious for the way in which all the devious paths of routine and red tape have been hunted out and clearly brought to light, but chiefly curious for the unusually open speaking of both the author and the editor. The author says, "The British War Office aspires to governing paternally a host of grown-up children scattered all over the world." And, again, "If the Home Secretary had the pretension to manage the household affairs of every citizen, to pay his rent, his butchers' bill, his housemaids' wages, on the production of 'vouchers,' what should we think of the economy of such a method? Would it be likely to beget thrifty habits in householders? From such a picture, exaggerated and absurd as it is, we may nevertheless form some idea of the extravagance which attends Army Administration." The editor, in the preface says, "We tie up in tight folds, during peace, the limbs of our minor officials, headless of their cries, and the absurdity of our doings. When war comes, the bands are suddenly cast off, and we say, 'Go and administer before the enemy.' It is monstrous to abuse our officials afterwards if their muscles turn out to be feeble, and they hobble like Chinese women."

* "Military Handbooks for Officers and Noncommissioned Officers. No. IV. Elements of Military Administration, by Major J. W. Buxton. No. V. Military Law, by Major Sisson C. Pratt, R.A." London: Kegan, Paul, Trench, and Co. 1883.

Officers of the Army as servants of the Queen and her Government can seldom permit themselves to publicly write thus of the mode of government they are under, unless the case is clearly and logically proved. The plain speaking here seems to be completely justified, but readers should form their opinions for themselves. The question of reform of our Army Administration is one open to either political party. It is a matter of vast importance to our nation that the Army it pays for should be administered in a manner calculated to make our wars short and inexpensive, instead of the reverse. Owing, however, to the ignorance of the mass of voters in such points, it can never become a popular political cry, and probably will, therefore, be constantly shelved, till some great disaster opens the eyes of the people.

Of the little volume on Military Law, which is the latest issued, we can only say that the best appears to have been done to make clear a law that ought to be simplicity itself, but that is involved owing to constant, and referring to their frequent, changes we might also say, in constant regulations.

CAMPAIGNING JESTS.*

CAMPAIGNING Jests are very good in their way, and at a time when men are excited and easily amused, a little fun will go very far. But it is carrying a jest a little too far to write out the small jokes which amuse men at such a time, copy some letters from a friend in the rear of the army, commencing "Dear old chappie," show that the writer went over a considerable amount of the new country, and saw nothing worth reading, and then entitle the book "Kohat, Kuram, and Khost!" There is scarcely any information of any kind of the named provinces—certainly, the writer's opportunities were small—and the ground of the campaigning has been already covered by Dr. Duke, in his work on the Kabul campaign. The binding of the book is very good, and of a pretty blue colour.

SIR GEORGE YULE ON THE HYDERABAD AND GHANDA RAILWAY.

THE Times of Monday, Dec. 31, we are sorry to observe, publishes the following letter from Sir George Yule.

The following letter refers to His Highness the Nizam's Guaranteed State Railways Company (Limited). This financial operation has, we understand, been proposed in more than one quarter during the past two years, but was declined unless the issue could be secured by the guarantee of the Indian Government, which was not to be obtained:—

"30, Clanricarde-gardens, Bayswater.

"SIR,—Regarding you as the most powerful protector of the investing public, I deem it my duty alike in their interest and in that of the native State, to send for your information, and for what use you choose to make of it, copy of a letter addressed to the Viceroy of India on the subject of an appeal just now being made for a capital of two millions sterling.

"I was long Political Resident at the Court of the Nizam, and am now a member of the committee of the shareholders of the Nizam's State Railway Company in London, and I hold myself in readiness to give you any further information and explanations you may desire.

"I may briefly state that I endorse Mr. Keay's statement that the resources of the Hyderabad State are unequal to the burden of £200,000 per annum proposed to be laid upon it, and that sooner or later the shareholders must be prepared for a failure of income. But it is held by some that the construction of this railway is of immense strategic importance to the English Government, and it is, consequently, being forced on, regardless of the wishes of the Nizam's Council and of the Nizam himself, who is within three months of attaining his majority, and whose first act might be to repudiate all responsibility for this engagement.

"I have addressed Lord Kimberley, strongly pointing out what will be thought in India if the English force this financial scheme on the Nizam's Government, just on the eve of the Sovereign attaining majority. And I have sent a copy of the enclosure to the National Provincial Bank, the bankers for the proposed issue, so that they may be fully warned of the responsibility they are taking in assisting an issue under such conditions as are here stated.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
"G. U. YULE."

THE following reply to the above letter appears in this morning's Times:—

"His Highness the Nizam's Guaranteed State Railways Company (Limited), 7, Great Winchester-street, London, E.C., Jan. 1.

"Sir,—Referring to Sir George Yule's letter in your City Article of the 31st ult., it is right that the public should be aware that Sir George last year strongly urged the late Sir

Salar Jung to carry out a scheme in all essential particulars the same as that now brought forward by my company. In a long letter, dated November, 14, 1882, when Sir Salar Jung had declined the terms of the original project negotiated by his own agent in London, Sir George wrote as follows:—

"I am exceedingly sorry that the result of his (the agent's) negotiations has not met with your approval, though I doubt not that you must have considered you have strong grounds for the course you have taken, but I beseech you to reconsider the matter. Railways you must have, sooner or later, there is no escape from that necessity, and if you do not do what is so urgently required for the benefit of your country and its master, and which is expected of you by all people, some one else will be called on to do it."

"Whether, in consequence of this strong expression of Sir George Yule's opinion, or for other reasons, I cannot say, but Sir Salar Jung did reconsider the matter, and the Nizam's Government, in accordance with his wishes, sent the Sirdar Diler Jung to England to complete the arrangement. The result has been the formation of the present company.

"Why Sir George Yule has so soon and so completely changed his opinion I am at a loss to understand. Sir George ceased to be a Political Resident at Hyderabad nearly twenty years ago. His successor, Sir Richard Meade, is a director of the present company. A later Political Resident, Sir Stuart Bayley, now a member of the Governor General's Council, in his report of Dec. 26, 1881, expressed the highest possible opinion of the railway scheme. The next Resident, Mr. Jones, took the same view, and the present Resident not only approves the scheme, but, in writing on Nov. 13, 1883, to the Sirdar Diler Jung, says:—

"Mr. Seymour Keay has addressed a gratuitous and unfounded protest against the plan to His Excellency the Viceroy. But he is very ignorant of the facts, and assumes that even the commonest precautions have not been taken."

"The assertion that the construction of the new railways is 'being forced on, regardless of the wishes of the Nizam's Council and of the Nizam himself,' is absolutely untrue. The memorandum by Sir Salar Jung, of which a copy is annexed, is sufficient evidence against the assertion.

"With reference to Sir George Yule's theory, that the first act of the Nizam on attaining his majority might be to repudiate all responsibility for this engagement, it seems extraordinary that an old Political Resident should suggest that it would be possible for the Nizam to repudiate obligations contracted by his Council of Regency, with the sanction, approbation, and authority of Her Majesty's Secretary of State and the Government of India. He must know that such repudiation is impossible.

"Sir George Yule's action is the more surprising seeing that your columns to-day contain a circular signed by him, recommending to the consideration of the English shareholders of the existing Nizam's railway the offer of the Nizam's Government, by which they would co-operate in carrying out the scheme he professes to condemn.

"I may add that you are under a misconception in supposing that the financial operation last year—the only one which has preceded the present project—was not carried out, owing to the absence of the guarantee of the Indian Government. Such a guarantee was never asked for or contemplated by either of the negotiating parties.

"Finally, I would ask in what better method could the surplus revenues of the Nizam's Government be employed than in guaranteeing a system of railways which, in the words of a recent Political Resident, 'would simply be the making of the eastern portion of His Highness's dominions.'

"I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

"G. H. M. BATTEN, Secretary."

Extract from memorandum by His Excellency Sir Salar Jung, of Jan. 10, 1883:—

"As the Government of India, the Secretary of State, and the Resident have already expressed their approval of terms far less favourable to the State, and have left it entirely to me to decide whether I should accept them in the interest of His Highness's Government, I shall, as I have mentioned above, lose no time in sanctioning the acceptance of the schemes as soon as I hear from the Resident of the Government of India's approval of my proceedings, and will then depute Sirdar Diler Jung to England to close with the offers made, and see the scheme floated with the kind and friendly assistance of Her Majesty's Secretary of State."

SIR GEORGE CAMPBELL AS AN ADVOCATE OF THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE ILBERT BILL.

THE following letter, which has just been addressed by Sir George Campbell to the Times, would have been of immense public value if it had been published some five or six months ago—say, in time to have prevented Sir George Campbell himself from taking any part in Mr. Bright's mischievous meeting at Willis's Rooms:—

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

SIR,—Will you allow one who has watched much but said little about the Ilbert Bill, to make, through the Times, one appeal to those with whom the matter may rest simply to withdraw the Bill, rather than carry out the arrangement now proposed? It seems plain that a small anomaly and inconvenience is to be remedied by creating a much greater anomaly and a very serious administrative inconvenience. It comes to this—of 100 district magistrates, ninety-nine are Europeans, one is a native. It is an anomaly and pro tanto inconvenience that the native should not have the same powers as the Europeans of the same office and rank. We will remedy that by levelling down the ninety-nine Europeans, and practically saying they shall no longer exercise the powers which they have exercised without complaint for a dozen years. We create the extraordinary anomaly that the chief magistrate of the district is the only man debarred from exercising that jurisdiction over Europeans in regard to minor offences which is still to be freely exercised by his subordinates.

"The present state of things is a non-fulfilment of the provisions of the Act of 1883, and an inconvenience. The practical effect of the reduced Ilbert Bill would be very small indeed. If any one could have anticipated the strength of the opposition, it would be generally agreed to be better to bear the present ills than thus to stir the matter. If was the violent and unbridled character of the agitation against so small a measure which made it, in my judgment, a very great evil to withdraw it, looking to the circumstances of our position in India. I shared the belief that it would never do to allow a small section of the community not really seriously hurt to dictate in such a way to the Government. I thought the compromise announced by Lord Northbrook quite the right thing, and made sure that the two Governments at home and in India would show a united and firm front, and speedily settle the matter. It soon appeared that it was far otherwise. The Government have negotiated, and come to terms by conceding far more than was originally demanded. I will not dwell on the political evils of a surrender—that is done, and cannot be undone. But I do wish to show the effect of the proposed new arrangement.

"There are, we know, many drawbacks to and difficulties about trial by jury where races are intermixed and antagonisms occur. In India the system is only partially introduced, and much safeguarded. Still, the feeling of Europeans for this form of trial is so strong, that no objection is made to the privilege being accorded to them in all serious cases—that is, conceded even to Europeans and Americans who are not British subjects. But all over the world minor offences are tried without so cumbrous a machinery, and in India the jurisdiction over Europeans in minor cases has long been vested in selected European magistrates.

"The chief of the magistrates is the district magistrate—the most experienced, the highest in rank—who supervises and controls the others, and distributes the work among them. Now, the jurisdiction over minor offences committed by Europeans is to be wholly taken away from this chief magistrate, while it is left to his subordinate—a most extraordinary anomaly. To save his dignity, a very cumbrous expedient has been resorted to. He is, nominally, to have current jurisdiction with the sessions judge over a small part of the cases triable in the court of the latter, which he may try with a jury. I say 'nominally,' because he will never exercise that power. There is no reason why he should. He scarcely at all acts judicially, only in exceptional cases. His functions are principally executive and the distribution of judicial work. He has no machinery for jury trials, and no time for them. There is no possible reason why cases hitherto tried by sessions judges should not go to their courts, as before, and such can be much better tried there. On the other hand, owing to the position of Europeans in India, and the political and social questions involved, it frequently happens that minor cases in which Europeans are concerned, such as assault and high-handed violence on a small scale, are just the exceptional cases which it is desirable that the magistrate of greatest weight, experience, and political responsibility should try—cases arising out of disputes between indigo factories and ryots in Behar, for instance. These are the cases which the chief magistrate may no longer try, and grave injury to the public service will result. In some districts there may be no subordinate European magistrate of sufficient position—in very many, no other magistrate may be available in whom the parties would have anything like the same confidence. These are the inconveniences which we are to incur in ninety-nine cases, in order to avoid a possible inconvenience in one case. Either way there will be anomaly; but in the case of the few native district magistrates, the practical inconvenience may be obviated by taking care that there is in those districts a well qualified European magistrate of the second degree.—Your obedient servant,

"December 28.

"GEORGE CAMPBELL."

THE CENTRAL INDIA AGENCY.

A PASSAGE in one of the most widely read of Macaulay's Essays will be remembered in connection with the reports which Indian officials are called upon to write at stated intervals for the information of the Supreme Government, and it would be affectation to deny that these voluminous documents, which record the cold facts and describe the simple progress of the English administration in India, do not find many readers at the time of their publication, and are soon consigned to an oblivion from which very few will be rescued by even the most indefatigable historian and seeker after truth. Yet without something more than a passing acquaintance with these administrative chronicles, one should be slow, unless gifted with something of Mr. Bright's exceptional self-complacency, to pass an opinion on what is happening among the masses of the people, or as to how far British rule, and be it remembered native rule also, is doing the work which can alone make it endure. The reluctance to go to the original source of information is in the case of these Indian reports seldom weakened, it must be admitted, by the charm of the official's style, or by his power in drawing general principles from his details. He has much to tell of local interest, and he is expected to fill a certain number of pages. But he generally does it in his own way, without any hope to excite interest in his story, and without the wish, if not the capacity, to attain any high standard of excellence. The report which has recently been published on the affairs of the Central India Agency is as different from the ordinary run of such documents as it could be. Sir Lepel Griffin, who did little more than sign his name at the foot of the preceding report, so well employed the intervening twelvemonth, that he visited every part of the Agency, and in his last report has thus been able to give a complete and most instructive account of the three important States, and the many minor chiefdoms which came under his political control. But this merit acquires for us an additional value from the literary skill and happy insight into the conditions of British power in India, which reveal themselves in every line of his summary. We can easily imagine that the Viceroy derived much valuable knowledge from the perusal, not only of this document as published, but also of those confidential or plain-speaking passages which are never allowed to see the light of day, on the present condition of the great States of Gwalior, Indore, and Bhopal, even though Lord Ripon does not seem to have much faith in the one condition which makes these reports more instructive than laudatory, the superiority of English administration over native. With the assistance of Sir Lepel Griffin, we propose to briefly consider the actual state of affairs in Central India, in order that we may rescue one of these administrative histories from an unmerited doom, and also that we may show what has been accomplished of late in an increasingly important part of India. Sir Lepel Griffin, who has already done so much to show that the present generation of those Anglo-Indians, who bear the burden of our administration in the East, is not unworthy of the school of Bismarck and Metcalfe, of Metcalfe and Lawrence, has certainly succeeded in rendering our task one of pleasure.

The Central India Agency ranks, if we consider either its position occupying the country intervening between Bombay and the Gangetic Valley, or its population, including nearly ten millions of the most remarkable races in the Peninsula, or its political conditions embracing the two great Mahratta States, one important Hindoo State, and numerous others of varying degrees of importance, among the chief administrative divisions of India. The causes which have kept it somewhat behind the age promise to operate with less and less force as time goes on. Communications are improving every day, the natural resources of a wealthy but backward region are being slowly but surely developed, and the Mahratta race is unquestionably reasserting that prominent position to which its natural cleverness, as well as its supposed strength of character, gave it a right. Up to the present, the affairs of the Punjab have so entirely engrossed attention, that there has not been much leisure to devote to matters in Central India, but the advent of a quiet time on the North West leaves ample opportunity to consider the present condition of a portion of India in which we must always be largely interested, although the exercise of the authority of the Paramount Power is conducted more in a political direction than an administrative. To those who wish to institute a comparison between the advantages of English and native rule, there cannot possibly be a more favourable opportunity of doing so than is afforded by this report on the Central India Agency. If native rule has a fair chance of displaying its merits anywhere, it is in the dominions of the powerful and not imprudent rulers—Scindiah, Holkar, and the Begum of Bhopal. There it has not only all the advantages of native initiative and control, but the additional incentive of emulation with Englishmen comes into force. If native rule fails, as it does fail, to so much as compete on anything approaching terms of equality with our administration in this region, where all the conditions are favourable to it, and where it has astute and fairly well-meaning princes to direct it, its inferiority in the many other places where those favourable conditions are absent, can easily be imagined.

Let us quote some of Sir Lepel Griffin's passages describing the present condition of things in Central India. They are taken from different parts of his introductory report:—

"Although the political division of India, which is known under the name of the Central India Agency, is entirely composed of native states of different degrees of dependence on the Imperial Government; and although the British officers officially connected with these have no direct concern with their internal administration, yet it must not be supposed that this great tract of country, comprising in round numbers 75,000 square miles, with a population of about 9½ millions, can be unaffected by the changes which are so rapidly taking place in British India, or can maintain for ever the isolation which, until the last few years, it had successfully preserved. In spite of the strong conservatism of many of the princes and chiefs, and notwithstanding that many States are far removed from the main lines on which progress and civilisation advance, yet all are being drawn year by year, more within the ever-widening circle of progress.

Central India is divided into seventy chiefships of greater or less importance, the ruling power being—in four Marathas, in seven Mahomedan, in seventeen Bundela, in thirty-three Rajput and Bhilala, and in nine Brahmin and other clans. Situated in the very heart of India, through which the most important lines of trade to the sea from the rich provinces of Upper India must pass, possessing rich and abundant mines of iron and coal in close juxtaposition, an unequalled climate, and a soil so fertile that in Malwa famine is historically unknown, and the future of Central India must be a brilliant one, and, although the direct advantages of the development of the country will accrue to the native princes, who virtually own the soil, yet to the Imperial Government, with its external commerce and its railway systems, the progress and prosperity of Central India will be of hardly secondary importance.

The reports of the various officers are full of complaints on two points, the onerous nature of the transit dues, and the dilatoriness of native officials, and particularly those of the Maharajah Scindiah, in carrying out measures of reform. On the former point Sir Lepel speaks with great force and directness, and it can hardly be supposed that his weighty observations on the subject will fall upon deaf ears, either at Simla or at the various native capitals implicated in his charges.

"Nothing retards the progress of Central India so much as the system of transit duties, which are everywhere in force except in the Bundelkhand and Bagelkhand agencies. Here they have been gradually abolished by the patient and long continued labours of Dr. Stratton. From Jhansi in the west to the eastern boundary of Rewah, goods can now pass on the main lines of road free of tax or toll. But the relation of the States of Bundelkhand to the Imperial Government is different from that of the remainder of Central India. Their subordination is more complete. The influence which could be justly applied in Bundelkhand to advance a measure of Imperial policy or public importance and advantage, such as the abolition of transit duties, would be out of place with the great States of Gwalior, Indore, and Bhopal, which can only be induced to accept measures of reform by such persuasion as the circumstance of the case will allow from a conviction of the advantages which would follow to themselves, or from a desire to earn the approbation of the Imperial Government."

The question of these transit duties is so important, as may be judged from the fact that more than eighteen rupees are levied on a cart of sugar passing through the dominions of Holkar and Scindiah, and twenty-four rupees on one of English cloth, that we shall follow up this quotation with another, expressing Sir Lepel Griffin's views on the subject:—

"Should the three larger States be willing to accept the immediate loss of revenue which would result from the loss of transit duties. The smaller States would very speedily follow their example. But it would be manifestly inequitable for the Government to press on the petty States a reform which the greater princes altogether refused to accept, and I regret to have to record that although the subject of transit duties has during the past year received my most anxious attention, and although the Government of India have, on more than one occasion, expressed their strong desire to see these duties modified, regulated, and ultimately abolished, little or no progress has yet been made in this direction. So far as their immediate advantage is concerned, there is much to be said on the chiefs' side of the question. The transit duty which falls upon through traffic appears to native princes the least objectionable way of adding to their revenue by taxing other than their own subjects, who have probably been already burdened to the full extent of their powers of endurance."

The italics are ours, and it is instructive to recollect that the principal reason of the Mahratta chiefs desiring to have as large a revenue as possible is, that they may thereby be able to maintain a vast military establishment in comparison with their wants and political responsibility. But the question of the transit duties levied beyond our administrative frontiers is one that affects very closely our own immediate concerns, and a consideration of the following facts will show that a solution in the direction of progress and enlightened policy cannot long be postponed:—

"The question is an exceedingly difficult one to deal with, but there can be little doubt that in some way or other, by equitable arrangement with the British Government, or by a liberal modification of their own financial system, transit duties on trade must before long cease. It is impossible that this important tract of Central India, through which so many of the main trade routes proceed, can remain shut up in the commercial isolation which heavy and often prohibitive transit dues create. Until their abolition there can be little real progress. The railways pay no dividend, and roads made by the Imperial Government, and maintained at great annual cost, are left without traffic."

We have left ourselves but little space to devote to the numerous other points of interest which Sir Lepel Griffin puts before us in an attractive manner to reflect upon. Although the Maharajah Scindiah is in the main well-intentioned, he lacks the business capacity or the zeal in reform to press upon his officials the necessity for despatch in matters of administration; but as the agent for the Governor General truly writes, "the improvement of the administration, and the advance of the poverty-stricken people of Gwalior, can only be affected by the Maharajah himself," while the obligation to take the initiative rests very heavily upon him. Nor can it be said that in the neighbouring States of Indore, which enjoys the one advantage of being governed by a man of thoroughly business-like capacity, things are on a very solid foundation when such a case as the following can hardly be described as out of the common:—

"The administration of criminal and civil justice is ordinarily good; where, however, the claims of the State are concerned, there is reason to believe that justice is not certain. In one important case the direct interference of the agency was necessary—the native representative of the Bombay House of Sassoon, himself a British subject, having been arrested, and his property attached for debts alleged to be due to the Maharajah, when many years ago trading under another name in Bombay. This arbitrary procedure was adopted, although the debt had long passed the period of limitation, was altogether denied, and a counter claim against the Indore State for a large amount was asserted, and although the matter had already been referred to arbitration and withdrawn by the Maharajah. However, the release of this agent and the restoration of his property was demanded, and after some hesitation on the part of the Durbar, was granted."

We should like to have said something about the introduction of alien mercenaries into these States, which is going on almost as extensively as that of Arabs was a few years ago into Hyderabad, but that and many other interesting matters must be left for a future occasion. Sir Lepel Griffin's report, like the reports of some other Anglo-Indian officials who have not lost sight of the main fact that their work in India is to do good to the people, and not to question the strict logic of their right to be in India at all, may prove to be of great advantage at a time when India's moral rights are urged even at the expense of her best interests. A perusal of it, with the comparison it suggests, between our administration and that of some of the best managed native States, may be recommended to Liberal members before Parliament reassembles. They will hardly be able to deny that the work of which Sir Lepel Griffin is the latest chronicler has to be done, and that it is a grand and necessary work in itself; nor will they succeed in convincing many that it is likely to be better done by the best trained natives than by our own English officials. In the hands of a few Bengali students the result can only be an egregious failure. Sir Lepel Griffin, like every other successful Indian officer, is content to deal with facts; and their most appropriate motto is to be found in one of General John Jacob's maxims—"We are in India by virtue of our superiority; we must be worthy of it, and we must keep it."

THE INDIAN WHEAT TRADE.

THE Bombay Chamber of Commerce have been in communication with the Indian Government with regard to the admixture of dirt, other grain, and foreign substances with the wheat of the country. In their memorandum the Chamber stated that they were unable to say whether any adulteration goes on by the buyer of the crop after it is reaped, but they were inclined to think this was the case; but if the Government were of opinion that the adulteration takes place by the middlemen, steps should be taken to show them that the course is against their own interests, and that by delivering their crops at the various large marts in a cleaner and less adulterated state they would obtain higher prices. While, however, these efforts were being made by the trade, the mercantile community looked to the Government for assistance in improving the quality of Indian wheat by the adoption of measures calculated to induce a more careful and systematic cultivation, which, on account of the Imperial importance of the trade, the Government, in the opinion of the Bombay Chamber, were bound to encourage. With the view of improving the cultivation of wheat and preventing admixture, the Bombay Chamber suggested that prizes should be given for the best farmed fields. In addition they suggested that stringent orders should be given to all subordinate European or native revenue officers by the various collectors to make known in every village, either by placard, advertisement, or batahi, or by personal influence the advantage to cultivators of reaping pure and unmixed grain, and the advantage of separating at seed time the soft from the hard grains, the white from the red, and of sowing them in separate fields. It was a question whether any Government expenditure could be better made than in supplying cultivators gratis for a year or two with pure, soft white, soft red, and hard wheat for sowing. A large amount of pure qualities of each description could be supplied for 10,000 rupees every year, and the Bombay Chamber offered their services in the matter if the Government would bear the necessary expense of hiring places for the picking out of all grains of a different description and of buying the purest lots of wheat in the first instance for the operation. The Government have now ordered that copies of the Bombay Chamber's memorial shall be forwarded to the Provincial Commissioners, with a request that they will call the attention of the subordinate officers of wheat-producing districts in their respective divisions to the suggestions made, with a view to their being carried into effect as far as practicable. The Bombay Government add:—"His Excellency in Council fully recognises the propriety of Government taking measures for improving the quality of the wheat grown in this Presidency, and is prepared to spend a moderate sum from the public revenues for this object. The subject should be actively taken up by the Director of Agriculture, who should distribute useful information among the producers and intermediate agents who deal with the wheat crop, and place before them samples of the wheats which are most in demand for export, and should also supply seed of pure quality gratis or at a low rate to selected cultivators in the wheat-growing districts, with suitable precautions that it is used to the best advantage. Small prizes may also be awarded for the most approved cultivation. A sum not exceeding 10,000 rupees may be appropriated yearly in this way until further notice, and the action taken in the matter should be carefully reported by the Director from time to time. The Director should maintain communication with the Chamber of Commerce on this important subject, and any sum which the Chamber may appropriate to the same objects may probably be best expended under the Director's supervision."

THE VICEROY'S SPEECH ON THE ILBERT BILL.

THE Imperial Legislative Council met on Friday, December 7, at Government House, at eleven o'clock. Present: His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General presiding; the Honourable J. Gibbs, the Honourable Sir Stewart Bayley, the Honourable C. P. Ilbert, the Honourable Gibbon, the Honourable W. W. Hunter, the Honourable Doorga Churn Law, the Honourable H. J. Reynolds, the Honourable G. H. P. Evans, the Honourable Robert Miller, the Honourable Raja Shiva Persad, the Honourable Rai Kristodas Pal, the Honourable J. W. Quinton, and the Honourable Syed Amir Ali.

With regard to the amendment of the Criminal Procedure Code, his Excellency the President said:—I would ask the members of this Legislative Council to remain for a short time, while I make a statement upon the important subject of the Bill which is now before the Council, for the amendment of the Criminal Procedure Code. The course which I am taking upon this occasion is, no doubt, not provided for by the rules of business of this Council, but it is not without precedent, and it cannot be doubted that it is advantageous upon a special occasion, that the Viceroy should reserve to himself the right to make on behalf of Government a statement in this Council, although no question is technically before the Council in reference to a matter which is pending consideration. And I am the more justified, as it seems to me, in taking this somewhat unusual course, because I have observed that complaints have been made in many quarters of the silence of the Government upon this question during the last few months, and that it has been said that before this, the Government should have given some explanation to the public of the steps which they had been taking in regard to this matter. I, and I am sure, all my colleagues greatly regret that it should have been thought by any one that the Government of India have in any respect acted with a want of consideration for the feelings of the opponents of this measure, or with any want of courtesy to those who had addressed representations to the Government upon the subject. I can truly say that nothing could be farther from our intention than any such want of courtesy or consideration; and I hope I may be pardoned for saying that those who know me would know also that nothing can be farther from my personal character and disposition than to treat those opposed to me on any public measure with either want of courtesy or consideration. The statement I am now about to make will show, as it seems to me, conclusively, that this is the case in regard to the complaints of which I have just spoken, because that statement will establish clearly that the Government were not, until the last few days, in a position to make any public declaration whatever of any part of their proceedings in regard to this matter. And even now, what I have to say may be regarded as somewhat premature, and must in some respects be incomplete, because in the absence of two important members of the Executive Council who have not yet arrived in Calcutta, viz., his Excellency the Commander in Chief, and Lieut. General the Hon. T. F. Wilson, various matters connected with the measure itself and the mode of procedure with regard to it ought not to be determined by the Government. I am not even now in a position to say more than that certain points remain for the consideration of the Executive Council. Nevertheless, under the circumstances to which I have adverted, I have thought it right not to delay to state to this Council at its first meeting here, what has been the action of the Government in regard to this Bill since the conclusion of the sittings of the Legislative Council in this city last March. But as there is no question before the Council upon this occasion, and as, therefore, at present, there is no opportunity for a discussion, I feel bound to abstain from anything like controversy or argument, and to confine myself for the present as much as possible to a bare statement of facts. It will be in the recollection of this Council that the last step which was taken with respect to this Bill on March 9 last, was to order that it should be referred in the usual manner to the local Governments for consideration and report. That reference was duly made, and in course of time the opinions of the local Governments began to come in. As they came in they were, of course, each of them carefully examined by the members of the Government. The last of the reports of the local Governments reached Simla on July 24th, and after it arrived the Government lost no time in carefully and deliberately considering the course which they thought ought to be pursued in regard to this measure, and this, after a full and careful examination and consideration of the various opinions which had been offered upon it. And they were in a position to address the Secretary of State on the subject after full deliberation on Aug. 10 last. I do not think that any one will say, looking to the great importance of this question, and the necessity of proceeding with all due deliberation in regard to it, that any time was lost by the Government, after having received the last opinion on July 24, in communicating to the Secretary of State their views on the question, in a despatch sent off from Simla on Aug. 10 following. In that despatch, the Government of India, while expressing their opinion that the principle upon which the Bill is founded ought not to be abandoned, proposed certain modifications of the measure calculated, as they hoped, to remove the objections which had been raised to some of its proposals, upon grounds which did not bring forward any question of principle. Those modifications were as follow. They proposed that the jurisdiction to be conferred by the Bill upon native magistrates over European British subjects should be confined ex officio to district magistrates and sessions judges. They proposed to leave unchanged the power at present vested in local Governments, with respect to the appointment of Justices of the Peace, and to adopt a suggestion of Sir Charles Turner, Chief Justice of Madras, to maintain section 526 of the Criminal Procedure Code. That section enacts that "whenever it is made to appear that a fair and impartial inquiry cannot be had in any criminal court, or that some question of law of unusual difficulty is likely to arise," the High Court may transfer a case to another Court, or to itself. Sir Charles Turner suggested that the High Court should be authorised to make the transfer if it is made to appear, "that it is expedient for the ends of justice," and that it is desirable to supply a defect in the code by directing that in any case in which prior to the commencement of the hearing, the Government, the complainant, or the accused shall notify to the Court its or his intention to make an application under section 526, the Court shall adjourn the hearing for such reasonable time as may be required to enable an application to be made, and an order obtained thereon. These were the modifications which were suggested in our despatch of 10 August to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State. In accordance with what I said just now, I shall not on the present occasion enter into any argument on these points. Whenever an opportunity for debate arises, the Government will be quite ready to state the grounds upon which they suggested these modifications, and the views they entertain in respect to the effect which they would have upon the provisions of the Bill. That, in brief, was the nature of the proposals contained in the despatch. To make the statement clear and full, I ought to say that my honourable friend and colleague, General Wilson, in regard to this despatch, retained the position he has taken up in regard to this measure. The despatch went home, as I have said, on August 10. It was considered by H.M.'s Government, and by the Secretary of State in Council, and in a despatch, dated November 8 last, the latter expressed his concurrence in the proposals of the Government of India. That despatch reached Calcutta last Saturday (December 1), and this consequently is the earliest opportunity which has been afforded me, since that despatch came into my hands, of making any statement in regard to this matter. There is also another question connected, not with the substance of this measure, but a matter of proceeding in regard to it to which I wish to refer to on this the earliest opportunity. In the month of Sept. last, the Government received a memorial from the Anglo-Indian Defence Association, which contained two requests. The first was that all the papers in connection with this Bill which had been received from the local Governments should be published at once; and the second, that further proceedings in regard to this Bill should be stayed until Parliament had an opportunity of expressing its opinion upon the subject. In the reply which was sent to that memorial, the memorialists were informed that their first request had already been complied with, and that the papers in question had already been published in the Gazette, as they were published on September 8 last. They were published at the earliest moment that it was possible to do so. We only waited to hear that the Secretary of State had no objection to their publication at that moment. The second request of the memorialists, viz., that any further proceedings in regard to this Bill should be put off until Parliament had an opportunity of discussing the question, before pronouncing an opinion upon it, related to a matter which is of necessity in the hands of H.M.'s Government. It is a matter altogether beyond the scope of the Government of India, and the cabinet can alone determine what course can be taken upon any question in forwarding the proceedings to either House of Parliament. By the next mail the memorial was forwarded to the Secretary of State, and his opinion upon that question was asked by the Government of India. In the same despatch in which the Secretary of State replies to our general proposals, he replies also to that particular request of the Anglo-Indian Defence Association, and he informs us that H.M.'s Government do not see any good reason why a measure lying within your Legislative Council, and already before that body, should be postponed till Parliament meets; and, he concludes, that the Bill will be taken up during the ordinary course of business for disposal. I said in my debate of March 9 last, as my personal opinion, that if the opponents of this Bill desire to appeal to the House of Commons, I should be the last man to object to such a course being taken. I am not yet in a position, in the absence of two members of the Executive Government, to whom I referred just now, to say exactly the step in regard to this Bill which will be taken; but the subject will be considered shortly by the Executive Council. That step in the ordinary course of business will be the reference of the Bill to a Select Committee, who will consider it, and any amendments which may be proposed in it, and due notice will be given before the Bill is brought forward. Such is the statement which I desire to make as to the action of the Government of India in respect to this Bill since March last. It shows clearly, as it seems to me, that until Saturday last, when the despatch of the Secretary of State reached Calcutta, the Government here was not in a position to make any public declaration upon this subject. The question was one which was originally referred to the Secretary of State, and the proposed proceedings received his approval. It was one which, from all the circumstances of the case, could not be dealt with by the Government of India, except in consultation with Her Majesty's Government, and the question of delaying the progress of this Bill was one which was wholly in the province of Her Majesty's Government, and could only be decided by them. Until, therefore, we were in possession of the views of Her Majesty's Government, we were debarred from saying anything in public upon the subject. I have, however, heard it said that of course when Her Majesty's Government had determined upon the course they were going to take, naturally the answer would have been communicated to the Indian Government by telegram, and that after having received that telegram, the Government of India might have made some public statement. Now, it appears to me, first, that it would have been altogether inconsistent with ordinary practice, and with official propriety, to make a public statement upon a mere telegram, unless Her Majesty's Government had directed that we should do so; but further than that, I cannot think that it would have been at all safe for the Government of India to have made any such declaration upon a telegraphic statement. Suppose that that had been done, and suppose that when the despatch came, after it had been made known to the public, that it had been possible to say there was any inconsistency between the statement made upon the telegraphic communication and the precise words of the Secretary of State, I leave it to the members of this Council to consider whether it would not have produced results that would be by no means desirable. It seems to me absolutely necessary that I should be in a position to do what I have done to-day, namely, to use the precise language of the despatch of the Secretary of State. In my position I could not with any propriety have hitherto spoken in public on this measure. I must also say that it appears to me that the proper place to make the first public declaration of any proceedings connected with a measure before this Council, is in the Council itself. I think that the members of this Council would have had reason to complain if I, as President of this Council, had made such a declaration elsewhere, I am quite sure that most legislative bodies would have thought that such a course implied some sort of slight upon its members, although I have such confidence in the members of this Council, that even had I thought it expedient to make such a declaration, they would have overlooked any seeming discourtesy which may have been involved in such a proceeding. But, as I say, this is the first opportunity which has been afforded me of making a statement of this kind. I will say no more now, as the present occasion is not one which admits of the introduction of any controversial matter; but will conclude these few remarks by saying that those who think that I and my colleagues have failed to regard the views and representations of those who are opposed to this Bill are entirely in error. Silence we have maintained naturally, and with regard to the bitterness which exists in the public mind, I earnestly trust that no words which have fallen from me to-day will tend to add to it.

The Council then adjourned till Friday next.

ARRIVAL OF THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT.

ON Monday morning, Dec. 3, Calcutta had the pleasure of welcoming their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught in a manner which showed that, however much the various communities comprising the population may differ on political questions, they are at least united in their devotion to the Throne. The hour of arrival had been fixed for 8.30 a.m.; and from early dawn, streams of carriages and pedestrians were wending their way to the Howrah railway station, and by eight o'clock, every street in the line of route, with every building in those streets, was crowded with spectators. It is almost superfluous to say that every prominent place of business, particularly the Trades' houses in Dalhousie-square, East, and Old Court House-street, were most lavishly and artistically dressed out in a profusion of foliage and bunting, which, with the gay and variegated dresses of the ladies, scores of whom graced almost every portico and balcony, presented an appearance as lively as it was imposing. Where all had striven to do their best, it would be invidious to particularise, specially as comparisons on occasions like these, however well-meant, are not appreciated; yet, in passing along the streets in question, one could not help remarking that there has been a friendly struggle at rivalry, and that each had endeavoured to outshine the other in loyalty. The Great Eastern Hotel, with its new and imposing portico, stood out like a giant among so many dwarfs, and, it must be confessed, was fittingly, not to say, elaborately decorated. The different mercantile houses in Strand-road, particularly those of Messrs. Mackinnon, Mackenzie, and Co., Agelasto and Co., and Hoare, Miller, and Co., were also gaily apparelled; and altogether the scene throughout the line of route was immensely effective, and showed, beyond question, that the residents of the metropolis of India are as desirous of showing honour to the son of our beloved Empress as the residents of any other part of Her Majesty's dominions.

The railway authorities had left nothing undone to make the station-house present as attractive an appearance as possible. As at Calcutta, so at Howrah, foliage and bunting were lavishly employed in decoration, particular attention being employed in dressing out the railway platform. The Royal Standard was hoisted on a flag-staff placed over the portico, flanked on either side with the British Ensign and the Union Jack. The vestibule leading to the platform was decked out with wreaths of leaves prettily arranged, and on each side of the red cloth, over which the Royal couple were to pass in order to get to their conveyance, rows of chairs and benches had been placed for the accommodation of ladies, who, it need scarcely be said, mustered strong, and occupied every available seat. The crowd at Howrah and on the Hooghly Bridge was, perhaps, greater than anywhere else. The road along the station, and up to the Howrah end of the bridge, was thronged with ladies and gentlemen in carriages and on foot; while crowds of all classes of people stood on the foot-paths of the bridge itself. Looking down the river from the bridge, in the direction of Kidderpore, the spectacle presented by the shipping, all dressed out in their gayest and best, baffles description. Two triumphal arches had been erected at either end of the bridge; the arch at the Howrah end bearing the inscription, very prettily done in cotton, "Welcome to Bengal," that at the Calcutta end displaying the words, "Welcome to Calcutta." The opportunity had also been taken to decorate the Toll Inspector's house at Howrah, and one flag, which was more conspicuously displayed than the rest, bore the words "God Bless the Empress-Queen." The little signal-house in the centre of the bridge attracted much attention. On the platform in front, several chairs had been placed for the accommodation of ladies, and on the triangular frame-work of the house, the words, "Long live the Duke and Duchess," had been very artistically done in cotton.

The special in which their Royal Highnesses travelled arrived at 8.45 a.m., Calcutta time. Their Royal Highnesses were received at the railway station by the Military Secretary and an Aide-de-Camp to the Viceroy, the Deputy Commissioner of Police, the Magistrate of Howrah, &c. On the Duke and Duchess stepping out of their saloon carriage, Mr. E. Keith's little girl went up and presented a bouquet of flowers to her Royal Highness; while E.I.R. Volunteers, who furnished a guard of honour 167 strong, presented arms, and the band played the National Anthem. His Royal Highness, who was in the uniform of a general officer, then passed along the line of Volunteers, and the band playing the Druids' March. Then, as the Royal couple left the platform and passed into the vestibule, a bouquet of flowers was again presented to her Royal Highness by Mrs. Wilson's little girl, and some half-dozen other little girls preceded the Royal visitors, strewing flowers before them.

At Government House a very large number of European and native gentlemen had assembled to welcome their Royal Highnesses. Guards of honour furnished by the Royal Warwickshire Regiment, and the Calcutta Volunteers, including the entire body of the Mounted Company and the Calcutta Naval Artillery Volunteers, with band and colours, were drawn up in front of the Grand Staircase, and presented arms as their Royal Highnesses were driven in. On alighting, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught were received by his Excellency the Viceroy, attended by his personal staff, his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor and his personal staff, the Chief Justice of Bengal, the Bishop of Calcutta, the Members of the Supreme and Bengal Legislative Councils, the Judges of the High Court, Brigadier-General Wilkinson and the district staff, His Highness the Maharaja of Cooch Behar, His Highness the Maharaja of Burdwan, His Highness the Maharajah of Durbhungah, and many other native and European gentlemen. Their Royal Highnesses were introduced to several of the principal official and non-official gentlemen present by his Excellency the Viceroy, after which Mr. H. L. Harrison, the Chairman of the Corporation, stepped forward, and in a clear, distinct, and audible voice read an address, to which H.R.H. briefly replied.

Their Royal Highnesses were then conducted into Government House by Lord Ripon, and the company dispersed.

THE DEFENCES OF BOMBAY.

BRIGADIER GENERAL EDWARDES, in proposing the health of the merchants and bankers at the St. Andrew's dinner, held in Bombay, "called attention to a very serious danger. In the days of the old factors, the 'old careful traders,' as he phrased them, it was a first care to render their factories or forts impregnable to attack, so as to 'ensure the safety of their merchandise and treasure.' The ramparts of the old fort of Bombay served their purpose admirably in the times of prescientific warfare. Bombay was much better defended then, if the circumstances of warfare be taken into account, than it is now. The forts in the harbour are almost useless. The new forts on shore do not support each other, and have been condemned by practical men. The floating batteries are of an obsolete type, and have no proper garrisons. At the time when war between Russia and England seemed almost inevitable, a very general feeling of uneasiness prevailed. But for the East Indian Squadron cruising outside, there was then nothing, as General Edwardes pointed out on the 8th ult., to prevent our 'beautiful city, its treasures, buildings, shipping, docks, and all that constituted the commercial wealth of this, the first city in India,' falling a prey to any well-appointed and heavily-armoured cruiser."

INDIAN MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

(From the Bombay Gazette, Dec. 14.)

Sir Donald Stewart has arrived in Calcutta on completion of his tour.

The announcement is made that General Sir Arthur Cunyng-hame, G.C.B., has arrived in Calcutta. General Cunyng-hame, who served with great distinction through the whole of the Crimean campaign, and was specially honoured by the Sultan on account of his successful command of a large Turkish force seven years since, has since been at the head of the Sind and Lahore Division, after which time he commanded the Northern Division of the army in Ireland, and was subsequently Commander of the Forces in South Africa. He now proposes to make a tour through India, returning by Bombay.

General Kennedy, C.B., on return from the Takht-i-Sulimani, takes a month's leave. Colonel Chowne, 2nd Punjab Infantry, who is the senior officer of the Punjab Frontier Force, not on furlough, will carry on the current duties of the command, remaining, however, at Edwardesabad.

Major Topford, transferred on exchange with Major Phillips from the 2nd Bombay Light Cavalry to the 1st Sind Horse, arrived at Kurrachee on the 1st inst., and left for Quetta, to join his new regiment, by the mail train of 3rd inst.

Major Fergusson, 1st Rifle Brigade, has been selected for the Brigade Majorship at Ceylon, in succession to Lieutenant Colonel Currie, Welsh Regiment, who joins his Battalion on promotion.

Under instructions from the War Office, Major O'Dowd, Army Pay Department, proceeds home.

Major C. E. D. Branson, Officiating 2nd in Command 6th Bengal Native Infantry, Moradabad, is likely to be appointed President of a Special Defence Committee for stations in the Rohilkund District.

Captain H. R. Walker, R.A., goes home shortly to join the Staff College.

Lieutenant G. F. Watson, 19th Punjab Native Infantry, whose services have been placed at the disposal of the Punjab Government, has been appointed Officiating Cantonment Magistrate, Mooltan.

Lieut. Tighe, Leinster, is removed to the 1st Battalion, but will remain attached to the 2nd Battalion for the present.

Lieuts. Ross and Lysby, King's Royal Rifle Corps, are permitted to exchange into the 3rd and 4th Battalions respectively.

The transfer of Lieutenant Lock from the 2nd to the 1st Royal Welsh Fusiliers is cancelled.

Surgeon W. Deane, on being relieved of medical charge of the 2nd N. I. by Surgeon Major Seaman, will do duty in the Allahabad command.

Sergeant T. Mitchell, 1st East Lancashire, is promoted to a Lieutenancy in the 1st Royal Dublin Fusiliers.

The Indian Government sailing ship Czarewitch, Captain W. C. Hotham, sailed on Tuesday for Kurrachee, in tow of the Indian Government steamer Dogmar, Captain Haviland, with the Headquarters and Left Wing of the 26th Regiment N.I., and details consisting of six European officers, one lady, nine native officers, 410 men, ninety followers, and seven horses; one officer, one follower, and one horse of the 1st Bombay Lancers; and three details. The following are the names of the officers:—Colonel W. H. Ross, Captain F. H. Forjett, Lieutenant C. O. Hodgkinson, Lieutenant W. W. Battiscombe, Lieutenant P. S. Dyson, and Surgeon W. A. Corkery, of the Headquarters and Left Wing of the 26th Regiment N.I., and Lieutenant C. M. Ducat, of the 1st Bombay Lancers.

The outpost of Jumrood is to be permanently garrisoned by troops, and it is said that Fort Mackeson will be abandoned.

The 5-1 Southern Division Royal Artillery, under the command of Major Williams, marched from Agra on the 6th inst., for experimental practice at Roorkee.

The mountain guns and a detachment 3-1 Scottish Division Royal Artillery have been placed in readiness for service against the Akhas.

The 8th (King's Royal Irish) Hussars will stay at Mian Mir for the camp-of-exercise.

The 5th Battery 1st Brigade, Southern Division, Royal Artillery, is proceeding to Roorki for siege operations, and is expected to reach that station on the 6th instant.

The 9th Regiment, Bengal Native Infantry, under the command of Colonel T. E. Webster, marched from Gorakhpore on November 21, en route for Peshawur, and arrived at Lucknow on the 7th instant.

It is stated that, after twelve months' consideration, and now that two troopships have arrived, orders have just been received to rail all soldiers from Bombay for the Meerut, Simla, Lahor, Rawalpindi Divisions, and Peshawur District by the Rajputana-Malwa line, which has its terminus at Delhi. The Englishmen congratulate the military authorities at army headquarters on their excessive foresight in denuding a cantonment like Delhi of all its officers, and then making it a terminal station for the receipt and despatch of troops to form divisions of an army. "It will give His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught," it remarks, "some idea of the careful consideration given to all matters relating to the army in India, and his division in particular. Bad as it may be to remove all the troops in one season from one of the most important garrisons in India, it is nothing when compared with the folly of removing all the staff from a station, and, having denuded it of officers thoroughly acquainted with the locality, its people, its resources, and all the civil officers and the railway officials, to make it a terminal station for the receipt and despatch of the larger number of troops arriving from Bombay, and for despatch to England."

THE SIMLA VOLUNTEERS.—Lieut. Col. Peterson, commanding the 2nd Punjab (Simla) Volunteers, has issued the following order, dated Nov. 30, 1883, with reference to the refusal of the Lieutenant Governor to sanction a proposal that the Volunteers should take part in the Umballa camp-of-exercise:—

"Simla, November 30, 1883.

"The Commanding Officer regrets exceedingly to have to notify the refusal of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor to sanction a contingent of the corps attending at Umballa to join the camp-of-exercise at that station. His unwillingness has, doubtless, been a cause of no small disappointment to all the members of the corps who came forward so willingly with a desire to take part in the camp.

"The reasons for refusal are herewith published for general information, viz., first, with regard to the Simla contingent, that the members were considered too few for His Honour to recommend the Government of India to sanction the expense of their journey, and other necessary charges; second, for the smaller contingent coming from Calcutta and Lahore, that he could not recommend the much greater expense of Volunteer members going from those stations to Umballa. At the same time, His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor stated that while he regretted being unable to forward the Commanding Officer's proposals for sanction, he approves of the spirit shown by so many of the Volunteers of the corps in desiring to take part in the extended manoeuvres of a camp-of-exercise, and so increasing their efficiency as Volunteers."

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 2, 1884.

THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

THE Calcutta correspondent of the Times gives us somewhat meagre particulars of the great meeting to oppose the Bengal Tenancy Bill, held in Calcutta last Saturday, which seems to have been a demonstration of the first magnitude and importance. The Times correspondent thus summarises the proceedings:—

"A great meeting of landholders of Bengal and Behar was held in the Town-hall yesterday, for the purpose of protesting against the Rent Bill. The Maharajah of Darbhanga presided. Hindoos, Mahomedans, and Europeans from all parts of the province attended, and the number of those present is said to have been about 3,000. Letters of apology from the Maharajah of Cuch Behar and Burdwan, and others were read. A number of gentlemen addressed the meeting, and six resolutions strongly condemning the Bill were passed unanimously."

The great political importance of a meeting of 3,000 landholders, or persons otherwise interested in the land, who have come together in Calcutta from all parts of Bengal, to protest against the revolutionary policy of Lord Ripon's Government, is obvious on the face of it; and we would earnestly direct the attention of Lord Kimberley and the Home Government to the lesson it teaches. It was by obstinately refusing to attend to such a lesson in the matter of the Ilbert Bill No. I., that poor, foolish Lord Ripon involved himself in all the trouble of the past year, from which he has now been extricated only at the cost of a surrender more ridiculous than any ever demanded by his opponents. Let not the mistake be repeated in the case of the Ilbert Bill No. II. The sentimental Radicalism of a young London lawyer, chiming in with the almost frantic eagerness of the Viceroy to make himself a name for something more sensational than the Alabama claims, has already brought the Empire to the verge of ruin in one direction—as if to prove how dangerous is the union of inexperience with incapacity in the direction of Indian affairs. Surely Mr. Gladstone and Lord Kimberley will intervene to check this second ebullition of experimentalising folly, before it has brought matters to a similar pass?

The Committee that is being formed in London to oppose the Bill may be trusted fairly and dispassionately to put before the English public the actual facts of the case, as illustrated in the recently-published pamphlets of Mr. Roper Lethbridge, of Mr. Fleetwood Pellew, of Mr. Henry Bell, and of other writers. The published opinions of the local officials show clearly enough that the vast weight of official authority is altogether against the Bill; whilst private telegrams that have been received in London, giving further particulars of the meeting of Saturday last, show that every district in the Lieutenant Governorship was fully represented, and that the meeting was absolutely unanimous in angry condemnation of the confiscatory and revolutionary character of the measure, and in demanding its withdrawal. With the solemn pledges of the Permanent Settlement staring them in the face, we cannot believe that the Viceroy's Council will consent to abet the Viceroy in forcing on the country legislation so destructive of all confidence in British faith; and we sincerely hope that the Government will be warned in time, and will spontaneously withdraw from a policy that is condemned alike by public opinion and by every dictate of political morality.

THE ENGLISH DUTIES ON INDIAN SILVER PLATE.

We are glad to announce that the East India Association has warmly urged on Mr. Gladstone's Government the necessity for an immediate abolition of the scandalous restrictions on the importation into England of Indian silver manufactures. The retention of these restrictions, after all the free-trade clap-trap with which Mr. Gladstone has justified the abolition of the Indian import duties on English cotton goods, is one of the most disgraceful acts of the present Government.

The following is a copy of the correspondence that has passed between the East India Association and the Chancellor of the Exchequer:—

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE HUGH CHILDERS, M.P., HER MAJESTY'S CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER, FROM THE COUNCIL OF THE EAST INDIA ASSOCIATION.

SIR.—The attention of this Association has been directed to the speech of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, upon the occasion of the closing ceremonial of the Fisheries Exhibition, in which his Royal Highness gave public notice of his intention to hold an Exhibition, in 1886, of the Art Industries of Her Majesty's Indian and Colonial possessions. In making this statement, his Royal Highness is reported as having said:—"I hope especially for the support of our fellow subjects, the people of India, in order that an important section of that Exhibition may be truly representative of the Industrial Arts of that Empire."

The Council of this Association, therefore, being sincerely desirous of co-operating with his Royal Highness in order to ensure the success of the proposed Exhibition, would venture to urge on the consideration of Her Majesty's Government the fact that the Industrial Arts of India are much dependent upon the precious metals, not only in the case of articles wholly composed of gold or silver, but more especially in the case of numerous articles the ornamentation of which depends upon those metals; and at the same time again to represent the urgency of the native demand that Indian manufacturers may be placed upon perfectly Free trade terms in their relations with the Mother Country—that the duties upon gold and silver may be abolished, as recommended by the Select Committee of the House of Commons, 1878-9, and that such a reform of the laws relating to hall-marking may be accomplished as may admit of their wares being exposed for sale without those "compulsory" provisions which now act as prohibitions to trade between the two countries.

The Council, in conclusion, would presume to express an earnest hope that, seeing that no proper reform of the hall-marking can be accomplished so long as the duties prevail, Her Majesty's Government may be pleased to recommend their abolition in April next.

FOR THE COUNCIL OF THE EAST INDIA ASSOCIATION.

(Signed) ORFEUR CAVENAGH, Chairman.

Treasury Chambers, Whitehall, S.W., 1883.

SIR,—I am directed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer to acknowledge the receipt of the Memorial from the East India Association of the 18th instant, in which the Council urge the abolition of the duties upon gold and silver plate, and a reform of the hall-marking laws.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
G. GLEADOWE.

The Chairman East India Association.

HOME NEWS.

OBITUARY.—A telegram received through Reuter's Agency from Bombay, dated Dec. 23, states that the Rajah of Kolapore is dead. The Rajahs of this State claim to be the descendants of Rajah Rām, who was the younger son of Sivaji the Great, the founder of the Mahratta power. In consequence of the rulers of the State permitting, or being unable to suppress, piracy, the British Government sent expeditions against Kolapore in 1765 and 1792, and in the early part of the present century a British agent was appointed to manage the State. A treaty was concluded with Sivaji III in 1862. The late Rajah's predecessor paid a visit to this country about 1873, and he then went to Florence, where he died. Kolapore has an area of 3,184 square miles, and had a population of 802,691 in 1872.

THE SILVER MARKET.—Calcutta advices state that the directors of the Bank of Bengal have raised their discount rate from 7 to 8 per cent. In addition to this the India Council have sold Rs. 5,50,000 of transfers on that Presidency at 1s. 7 17-32d. These two facts show the scarcity of money in, at any rate, some parts of India, and consequently account for the increased demand for remittances. The Silver Market has been firm in consequence, the inquiry for bars being thereby stimulated, and the whole of the arrivals per Armanian and Nile have been disposed of at 51d. per ounce, the market closing firm. That portion of the Mexican dollars brought by the West India packet which had not been sold to arrive, has also been cleared at 49½d. per ounce. All the supplies of any importance that were looked for have now been received and absorbed. Eastern exchange rates remain as they were, and Rupee Paper has been very quiet at previous prices.—On Monday in the market there was little doing, and no change in prices took place, bars remaining at 51d. per oz., and Mexican dollars at 49½d. The exchanges from the East were as follows:—Bombay (telegraphic transfers), 1s. 7 2-16d. per rupee, or without movement; Calcutta (telegraphic transfers), 1s. 7 17-32d., showing no change; Hong Kong, 3s. 9½d. per dollar, or unaltered; and Shanghai, 5s. 3½d. per tael, being no change.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders for Rs. 40,00,000 in bills on India and telegraphic transfers were received on the 26th ult. at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—In bills on Calcutta, Rs. 1,50,000, at an average rate of 1s. 7½d.; and Bombay, Rs. 37,000, at an average rate of 1s. 7½d. In telegraph transfers, on Calcutta, Rs. 13,50,000, at an average rate of 1s. 7½d.; and Bombay, Rs. 11,50,000, at an average rate of 1s. 7½d., or a total of Rs. 26,87,000. Tenders for bills at 1s. 7½d. received in full, and for telegraphic transfers at 1s. 7 17-32d., and above also in full. A special allotment of one lakh of transfers on Calcutta was subsequently made at 1s. 7 17-32d. Between April 1 and the 24th ult. the total amount of remittances sold reached Rs. 13,13,22,650, and realised £10,654,015.

H.M.'s TROOPSHIPS.—The Indian troopship Jumna left Portsmouth on Saturday morning for Bombay. She took out the 7th Dragoon Guards from Shorncliffe, the embarking strength of which comprised Lieuts. Col. Truman and Chapman; Majors Bibby, Thomas, and Creagh; Capts. Becher, Burke, and Du Boulay; Lieuts. Aspenwall, Ditmas, Barton, Calvert, Lowe, Thompson, Dering-Williams, Dunley, and Horsburgh; Paymaster Whible, Adjutant De Burgh, Veterinary Surgeon Blenkinsop, 460 men, 32 women, and 38 children. She also embarked the following drafts—45 men 1st Dragoon Guards, 48 6th Dragoon Guards, 85 8th Hussars, 66 9th Lancers, 25 12th Lancers, 41 13th Hussars, 153 14th Hussars, 65 17th Lancers, 134 4th Rifle Brigade, 32 Royal Engineers, and several officers.—The Serapis arrived at Portsmouth on Sunday from Bombay, with the H Battery of the First Brigade of the Royal Artillery, military invalids, and time-expired men. Two deaths occurred during the voyage.—The 2nd Royal Irish Fusiliers, from India, are expected to arrive at Portsmouth in Her Majesty's Indian troopship Malabar, Capt. R. H. Harris, on the 23rd of February next; and the 1st York and Lancaster Regiment, from India, in Her Majesty's Indian troopship Serapis, Capt. A. E. Dupuis, on the 15th of March.

LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA (LIMITED).—Mr. J. R. Boyson presided at the extraordinary half-yearly general meeting of this company, held at the Cannon-street Hotel. In their report the directors stated that during the half-year the current loans on mortgage had been further reduced to the extent of £11,365, seven of such loans, amounting to £8,398, having been fully discharged, and nine other loans having been reduced by payments on account of principal to the extent of £2,967. The current loans on mortgage on October 31, last amounted to £38,030, as against £49,395 on December 31, 1882. The bank's properties now stand valued at £120,126, and its tea estates at £304,277. The bank's liability on its current debentures now amount to £406,820, of which sum £53,720 is held by the bank on account of its reserve fund, leaving a liability to the public of £353,100. During 1883 three properties in the Bengal Presidency and two in Bombay were sold for an aggregate of 61,550 rupees. In moving the adoption of the report, the chairman stated that the affairs of the company had experienced but little change since he last addressed them. The original loan business of the bank was rapidly approaching very narrow limits, and the diminution of its liabilities upon its debentures was also making considerable progress. The tea crop had fallen considerably short of its estimated yield, but it was believed that the coming crop would be about 22,000 maunds. And if the season was fairly good, this might be increased by 1,000 maunds. In reply to a shareholder, the chairman stated that he was still hopeful as to the future of the company, but he could not speak as to the prospect of a dividend. After a short discussion the report was adopted, and the proceedings closed.

BOMBAY MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.—ALLOTMENT OF ANNUITIES FOR 1884.—Surgeon General G. G. W. Maitland, F.R.C.S.L., £252; Deputy Surgeon General J. Gilbert, £210; Deputy Surgeon General J. Mills, £210; Surgeon General J. Lumsdaine, £168; * Surgeon Major F. S. Stedman, £168; Deputy Surgeon General J. H. Sylvester, 168.* *Lapse to Government, these officers having received a refund of their subscriptions.—Funds Department, India Office, 1st January, 1884.

Professor Monier Williams and Pandit Shyamaji Krishnavarma, B.A., are expected in Bombay by the next mail steamer.

THE CENTRAL PROVINCES RAILWAY.

BOMBAY, DEC. 9.—The Chamber of Commerce has made representations to the Government on the question of railway communication with Bengal via the Central Provinces. The Chamber points out that the early construction of a line on the broad gauge, connecting Nagpore with Calcutta, while it would be of great benefit to Bengal and the country generally, would be of the utmost importance to the Bombay Presidency, and particularly to the port of Bombay. The Chamber consider that the weight of argument is in favour of the Sitarampore route, and is sufficient to justify the Government in taking up and carrying through the project first. The Chamber expresses its regret that the Nagpore-Chuttisgarh line, a length of about 149 miles, was made on the narrow gauge, and says the injury done to commerce from the breaking of bulk on through lines of communication can only be understood, to the fullest extent, by the mercantile community.

A hope is expressed that the Government of India will not permit the error which was made in constructing the Rajputana-Malwa line from Sabarmati to Agra and Delhi on the narrow gauge to be repeated in this case, and the permanent interests of the country to be partially sacrificed to the views entertained in some quarters, that there would be a saving in the first cost of the line if it were made on the narrow gauge, and therefore that it would be more expedient to construct it on the narrow than on the broad gauge.

In case of the Nagpore Bengal line, no saving in cost of construction could ever possibly compensate for the inconvenience of a break of gauge. The line will, to a vast extent, develop the agricultural and mineral resources of India in tracts hitherto unopened, and almost unexplored. With regard to the provinces which the line will traverse, the chambers believe that there is but one opinion, these are the richest wheat-producing districts in India, and that the line will be of the greatest importance, not only as a protective work against famine, but in enabling India to maintain in her competition with other countries for the supplying of the wheat required by Europe.

The Chamber trusts the line between Nagpore and Bengal will be constructed at an early date on the broad gauge, and that the present Nagpore-Chattisgarh line or any portion of it which may form part of the Nagpore-Bengal scheme, will be taken up and reconstructed on the broad gauge. The Bombay Government is understood to be strongly in favour of the views expressed by the Chamber of Commerce.

MR. D. F. CARMICHAEL.

THE feeble attempt made on the 8th ult. at Madras by a section of the native community, to prevent any steps being taken to do honour to Mr. D. F. Carmichael, the senior member of Council, before his departure from India, has failed miserably. On the 8th ult. a very large gathering of native gentlemen, including quite a formidable list of Rajahs and honourables, was held at the residence of the Hon. Rajah G. N. Gajapati Row, at which the following resolutions were passed:—First, "that on the eve of the departure of the Hon. D. F. Carmichael from this Presidency, fitting honour be done to him in token of the high esteem, regard, and admiration which this meeting has for him." Secondly, "that an entertainment be given to the Honorable D. F. Carmichael on a day which he may be pleased to appoint." Thirdly, "that arrangements be made for having the portrait of the Honorable D. F. Carmichael painted life-size, to be set up in the Banqueting Hall, with the permission of His Excellency the Governor, or in some other conspicuous place, and also for founding some other suitable memorial, the form of which will be determined hereafter." A subscription list was then opened, and Rs. 10,800 were subscribed on the spot.

ST. ANDREW'S DAY IN CALCUTTA.

ST. ANDREW'S festival was celebrated on Friday, Nov. 30, with more than usual enthusiasm. Mr. J. J. J. Keswick occupied the chair, and was supported on his right by the Lord Bishop, and on his left by Brigadier General Wilkinson. The dinner, which was laid for 208 covers, was supplied by the Great Eastern Hotel Company, and fully maintained the reputation which these purveyors have so long enjoyed. The staircase and banquetting-room were tastefully decorated with evergreens and banners, and the gallery at the west end of the hall was specially fitted up for the accommodation of ladies, a number of whom found their way upstairs before the conclusion of the dinner, to listen to the speeches. The band of the Warwickshire Regiment were ensconced behind a bank of evergreens that fronted the dais, and throughout the dinner and between the speeches played a selection of Scotch airs, and rendered two or three glees most successfully, the rich tenor voice that took the solo being especially remarked on. Our old friends the pipers, for whose services we are indebted to the Seaforth Highlanders, were in grand form, and the wild war music rang through the hall, awakening many a reminiscence—some sad and some sweet, but all patriotic and wishful to be once more amongst the banks and braes of Bonny Scotland. The dinner passed off most successfully. The cheering which greeted the chairman, when he rose to propose the health of Her Majesty the Queen-Empress, lasted for several minutes, and each sentence uttered by the speaker was emphasized with similar enthusiasm. At the conclusion of the speeches a number of gentlemen left, but a large remainder settled down for a jovial finish, and arrangements were in course when we left, to furnish sustenance in the form of grilled bones.

The CHAIRMAN having given the toast of the Queen-Empress, which was enthusiastically received, proposed the Prince and Princess of Wales and other members of the Royal Family. Having referred to the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Chairman said:—We have reason to be proud of the other members of the Royal Family also, and I am sure the ringing British cheers which will greet the soldier-prince and his princess, now in India, on their arrival in Calcutta, will make them feel that there are no more loyal people in the Empire than here, and they will be pleased to know that the spirit we have inherited from our fathers—that spirit without which British rule could not be maintained in this or in any other country—is not yet in the descendant, the present and anti-British policy notwithstanding. Drink, then, to the Prince and Princess of Wales and the other members of the Royal Family. (Renewed and vehement cheers.)

The CHAIRMAN said: The next toast on the card is the Viceroy.

The band played a strathspey, and then the company sat down. Not a man, so far as we could observe, accepted the toast.

The CHAIRMAN: I have now to propose the "Land we live in." On a former occasion such as this, I said that I was one of those who considered this a good country, though I was not unthankful that I knew a better, and I am still of the same way of thinking. I like the country, and I like the natives, and it will not be without regret that I shall, when the time comes, say farewell to it and them. When I spoke some two years ago, on what cordial terms we then were with our native brethren, and how the bonds of friendship were being daily strengthened! We had then a comparatively new Viceroy, and expected that under his government peace and good-will would flourish and increase. We saw him giving attention to measures for the education of the masses, the introduction of local self-government, the encouragement of private enterprise, and for the development of the resources of the country, and we were all ready to strengthen his hands and to aid him in good government. But we have found partiality in education—witness the exclusion of Eurasians and Anglo-Indians from the Roorkee College; recklessness in regard to local self-government—witness the desire to do away with all responsible control; narrowness in the encouragement of private enterprise—witness the paltry proportion of Government store requirements allowed to be tendered for in India; and feebleness in the development of the resources of the country—witness the poor progress made. While import duties have been abolished to please the supporters of the political party in power at home, the export duty on rice which at times exceed 14 per cent. of its value, and bears heavily on the poor ryots, is maintained; and bills have been introduced to deprive the European British subjects of their birthright, and the native and other zemindars of their proprietary rights in land. Mr. Chamberlain said of the Lords at home:—"They toil not, neither do they spin." But could we not truthfully say of them, as we can of the members of the Government of India—they till not, neither do they own land nor possess any permanent interest in the country; and we have Scripture for it that "where their treasure is not, there we cannot expect their hearts to be." A well-known member of the Civil Service, who retired from this some three years ago, went, in 1882, to shoot with a friend of mine—alas! no more—in the North of Scotland, and among the things Scotch to which my friend introduced him was the kirk on Sunday. He did not think much of the sermon, but was greatly impressed with the fervour of the prayer for the Queen's ministers. It ran thus:—"And, O Lord, be with the Queen's ministers and give them that understanding which they are so much in need of." Well may we offer up such a prayer for our Viceroy and his Council, and add in the words of Solomon, the son David, King of Israel—"To receive the instruction of wisdom, justice and judgment and equity;" and if our prayer be answered, what a change there will be? We have reason to pray that this country be not governed in the interests of any political party, but for the true welfare of its inhabitants of all colours, castes, and creeds. It contains many races who can exercise rights and privileges peculiar to each without wronging the others, and these rights and privileges should be respected, not by the Government only, but by all races. We Britons respect rights and privileges peculiar to natives, and most natives still respect ours in return, notwithstanding the Government action, and recognise that it is possible for not only a fair share, but a very large share, to be given them in the government of a country containing some two hundred and fifty millions of people, without making it necessary to deprive a few thousand European British subjects, scattered throughout the Mofussil, of the much-cherished right of being tried by their Christian countrymen. Let us hope, then, that Government will withdraw the unnecessary and inconsiderate measures lately introduced, which are so hurtful to the best interests of all, and so set the public mind at rest that, freed of impending calamity, it may be uninterruptedly devoted again to those peaceful pursuits which build up the wealth and strength of a nation. An announcement of withdrawal may appropriately be made on the Viceroy's arrival in the city to-morrow, so that the breach between the Government and the community may be closed, and that governors and governed, re-united in themselves, may unite in welcoming the Queen's son. Then in exhibiting, at the first international exhibition ever held in India, specimens of the arts and industries of this great country, we will show that there is not wanting the spirit of good fellowship without which there can be no true national prosperity. (Tremendous cheers.)

Others toasts followed.

MAIL NEWS.

The visit of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught to Calcutta came to a close on the 10th ult. On the 6th ult. their Royal Highnesses were entertained at Belvedere by the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal. On the following day the troops in garrison and the volunteers were inspected, and some manoeuvres were gone through, much to the satisfaction of the Duke.

Saturday, the 8th ult., was spent in visiting the Sailors' Home, the Bethune School, and the Medical College Hospital. On the 10th ult. the Royal visitors were present at the Dumdum races, and in the evening they witnessed the illuminations and display of fireworks which were got up in their honour. Later on in the evening they left by the train for Benares and Lucknow, at both of which places they are to make a short stay.

The Duke of Connaught will not visit the Bangalore Camp of Exercise, as was at one time arranged.

At the Viceroyal Legislative Council on the 7th ult., H.E. the Viceroy made an important statement with reference to the Ilbert Bill. His Excellency explained the reason which had induced the Government to maintain such a long silence with regard to the Bill, and stated that the Bill would be referred in the ordinary course to a Select Committee, who would consider any proposed amendments brought forward.

The Bombay branch of the East India Association have telegraphed to the Viceroy, expressing their "great uneasiness, deepening into alarm," at the persistent agitation against the Bill.

Rumours are current in Calcutta that, with a view to the settlement of the existing difficulty, a compromise will be effected which will give Europeans the option of saying whether they will be tried by a native judge or one of their own countrymen.

The Chintradrepettah Literary Association, Madras, has forwarded a telegram to the Viceroy, expressing its "emphatic and indignant disapproval of the disloyal outrage" that His Excellency received at Calcutta at the hands of "some of the misguided Europeans."

The Viceroy, in declaring the Calcutta Exhibition open, read the following telegram from the Queen, received after his entrance into the building:—"My best wishes for success of your International Exhibition."

Enthusiastic anti-Ilbert Bill meetings have been held at Nowgong, Dehra Doon, Chittagong, and Vythery.

Native meetings in favour of the Bill have been held at several places in Bengal.

The weather in Calcutta has greatly improved, and the damage done to the exhibits at the Exhibition is being repaired. Since the advent of the fine weather, the Exhibition has been attended daily by thousands of persons.

H.E. Sir James Fergusson arrived in Bombay from Calcutta on the 11th ult.

The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal is recovering from his recent attack of illness, but he is still confined to his room.

A daring attempt at gang robbery was made recently at Secundra, near Agra. A body of 100 or 150 fully armed men attacked the house of a wealthy native merchant, and were only repulsed after a sharp struggle, in which several persons were killed on each side.

The trial of the four men who were charged with the murder of the young Maharani of Kimidi, has resulted in the conviction of the prisoners. Two of the accused have been sentenced to death, the third to transportation for life, and the fourth has been released, having turned Queen's evidence.

On the 8th ult. a farewell dinner was given at the Madras Club to the Hon. D. F. Carmichael, senior member of the Madras Council. H.E. the Governor of Madras proposed the toast of the evening in a highly complimentary speech.

Corporal Walsh, 98th Regiment, was accidentally shot dead at the Volunteer Rifle Range at Quetta.

The Government of India have suggested to the Madras Government the advisability of suspending the operations of the Contagious Diseases Act in the town of Madras, as has already been done in Calcutta. A committee has been appointed to inquire and report on the subject.

Mr. David Watson has been elected Sheriff of Bombay for the ensuing year, and Mr. E. J. Firth has been appointed Sheriff of Madras for the same period.

The Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab was to proceed to Pattiala on the 13th ult., to turn the first sod of the Pattiala-Rajpore Railway.

The Wazeerabad-Sealkote Railway was expected to be open for traffic on New Year's Day. An inspection train ran over the line on Dec. 24.

Disturbances have broken out in the Rajpoot State of Bikaner between the Durbar and some of its feudatories. British aid has been invoked, and troops have been ordered from Nuseerabad to put an end to the state of anarchy which exists.

Some important official correspondence with reference to the duty on, and the hall-marking of, Indian silver and gold, has been published during the week, previous to the departure of the mail.

The Budget estimates of the Bombay Municipality were presented at a meeting of the Town Council on the 8th ult. The total estimated income is set down at Rs.41,15,550, and the expenditure at Rs.36,95,859.

The Maharajah of Vizianagram has consented to lay the foundation-stone of the new Madras Town Hall on the 17th ult.

Hormusjee Byramjee Rana, the late head shroff of the Bank of Bombay, who was arrested some time since in connection with the extensive frauds committed on the bank, has died in the gaol.

COLD WEATHER AT MAHABLESHWAR.—We learn by a letter from Mahableshwar that the cold weather there has been unusually severe. The thermometer in the morning in the shade varies between 45 and 47 degrees.—Poona Observer.

MR. MULLER.—The venerable Mr. Muller, of Bristol, after visiting a number of places in the Madras Presidency, will proceed to Calcutta, and thence to the N.W. Provinces. He does not expect to be in Bombay till some time in March.—Bombay Guardian.

THE LATE MR. J. F. MACMILLAN.—It is with great regret that we announce to our readers the death of Mr. J. F. Macmillan, a member of the staff of this journal. Mr. Macmillan, who joined the Pioneer about ten months ago, had been in ill-health for some time, and was on his way to England when he succumbed at Bombay, on Thursday last, to disease of the liver. The connection between a journalist and the public which it is his business to serve, is an impersonal one in most cases, even in India; in Mr. Macmillan's it was more than usually so from his reserved temperament, which however, did not prevent the few who knew him from regarding his amiable character with unaffected esteem.—Pioneer.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY

CAPTAN FRED BURNABY,

Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

KANGRA VALLEYINDIAN TEA GROWERS' ASSOCIATION,

7, NEW COVENTRY-STREET,
LEICESTER-SQUARE.

The object of the Planters who have formed this Association is to establish a business for the direct supply of Tea from the Plantations of the Kangra Valley to the Public.

The distinctive feature of the business of this Association is, that the Tea is delivered to consumers in the original One-lb. tin foil lined parcels in which it is packed in the Valley, and it is guaranteed to be Absolutely Pure. There are three qualities, retailing respectively at 4s., 3s., and 2s. 6d.

The Association hopes that it may, without presumption, safely recommend this Tea to the Public, believing that it will continue to give the greatest satisfaction.

RECOLLECTIONS OF THE KABUL CAMPAIGN, 1879-1880.

BY JOSHUA DUKE, F.R.A.S., Surgeon Bengal Medical Service.

CONTENTS:

1. A full account of the murder of the members of the British Embassy in Kabul, September, 1879.
2. An account of the city of Kabul and the surrounding country.
3. General Roberts' advance to Kabul over the Shutargardan Pass.
4. The battle of Charasiab.
5. A description of the fighting around Kabul, Dec., 1879, including the loss of the Horse Artillery and mountain guns, and the fighting on the surrounding heights, and of the investment of Sherpur.
6. The present Amir, Abdul Rahman.
7. General Roberts' march from Kabul to Kandahar.
8. The battle of Kandahar, and the return march to India.

The Preface contains a large portion of a valuable letter written to the author by General Sir Frederick Roberts, G.C.B., V.C.

The book contains a map, a portrait of General Roberts, a picture of Mount Sika Ram, and other illustrations drawn chiefly from photographs, which enhance their accuracy.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLDs, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE—Dr. J. C.
BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff)
DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORO- DYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE IN-
VENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr.
Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.
This caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated
publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS
BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the
INVENTOR OF CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.
See The Times, July 15th, 1884.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.
GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH,
London, REPORT that it ACTS as a
CHARM, and is generally sufficient.
Dr. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETE-LY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA."

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical
Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.
To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.
DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other branch we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy
their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy
of DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and
Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia,
the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during
many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms
of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

IS
CHOLERA.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis
Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist or prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE IS THE TRUE
PALLIATIVE IN NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,
TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of
EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts
short all attacks of
EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,
PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The
IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNCRUP-TULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists.

THE VOICE OF INDIA. A NEW MAGAZINE INTENDED TO GIVE EX- PRESSION TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect it is now desired to remedy, by publishing monthly in Bombay a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which will provide a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. It is hoped that the Voice of India will thus give a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine will advocate no views of its own. It will seek only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it is believed that the writings thus brought before the English public will be found to be characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally be practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances will from time to time be set forth; but it is a policy of prudence no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be welcomed by all Members of Parliament desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to Journalists and other public writers. It is especially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in clubs, reading-rooms, libraries, and institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 10, 1884.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Dec. 21; Madras and Allahabad, Dec. 19; Calcutta, Dec. 18.

Requiescat in pace! It seems likely that at last we have really seen the last of the wretched Ilbert Bill; and that Lord Ripon's Government, having tried every double and every twist that a perverted ingenuity could devise, has at length finally "caved in and come down."

The suggestion of the Hon. Kristodas Pal, that the new arrangement by which Lord Ripon has endeavoured to apply salve to his wounded vanity, should be again referred to the local authorities for report, was an excellent one; but it was hardly to be expected that the Government of India would assent to it. Lord Ripon's colleagues know full well, if His Excellency does not, how withering would be the scorn that would be poured from all quarters, on the paltry subterfuge by which the Viceroy endeavours to cover his retreat from a hopelessly untenable position. It is absolutely impossible to doubt that every one, except Lord Ripon and Mr. Ilbert, would prefer the honest and manly course of total withdrawal of the Bill.

AFTER all the Reuterising and other shady devices by which the Bill has been supported, it was not surprising that Mr. Miller, in last Friday's debate, should plainly declare that "if any double meaning were attached to these terms, the difficulties would be increased tenfold."

DR. HUNTER plaintively asserted that the proposed modifications "would perpetuate race distinctions." But Mr. Ilbert and Mr. Amir Ali prudently confined themselves mainly to a side-issue of no importance whatever—the legal value of the Queen's Proclamation. Whatever may be supposed to be the legal value of that Proclamation by enthusiastic young barristers, it is clear that its practical legal value is not greater now than it has been during all these years that the existing law has been sufficient for such Viceroys as Lord Mayo, Lord Northbrook, and Lord Lytton.

MR. GRANT-DUFF has not been Governor of Madras for nothing. He now calls the pet Indian theories of Mr. Bright and Mr. Gladstone, "the drivel sometimes palmed off upon politicians in England as the genuine outcome of native opinion in India."

WE are unwilling, as we have already said, to say anything whatever against a settlement that is entirely satisfactory so far as the claims of Anglo-Indians and of native civilians are concerned; and as for questions of expense, or cumbrousness, or administrative inconvenience, they only concern the Government, and it is for Lord Ripon, whose itching vanity has created the difficulty, to find a way out of it. We cannot, however, help remarking that the vigilant care of the Opposition, in providing against the slippery ways of the Viceroy and his present advisers, is amply justified by the speeches of Lord Ripon, Mr. Ilbert, and Mr. Hunter, in the debate of Friday, and the adjourned debate of Monday. Mr. Ilbert's true position in this controversy has never been so clearly exemplified as by his clever, shifty speech of Friday last—in which it was perfectly clear that he was hedging, and astutely laying out the ground for a breach of faith on the part of the Indian Government. What would have been the nature of the Viceroy's speech, if he had spoken on Friday, and if he had not been checked by Mr. Evan's vigorous and timely protest, may be inferred both from Mr. Ilbert's speech, and from the tone of the speech actually delivered by the Viceroy on Monday.

WE fear that that speech will not add to Lord Ripon's reputation for high-mindedness. It is full of self-consciousness; the one paramount consideration underlying every phrase is clearly seen to be, not the welfare of the Empire, not the contentment of the subjects, but the self-esteem of the speaker. The surrender of the Government is deprived of all its grace by the grudging way in which it is made.

THE reference to Sir James Stephen's view of the force of the Queen's Proclamation seems to us to be altogether misleading. About the actual facts—on which alone Sir James Stephen insisted—neither Lord Ripon nor Mr. Ilbert would dare to contradict him. Those facts are simply these: that the Queen's Proclamation was an act of the Executive Government—that the course of our policy always has been, and it may be hoped always will be, in accordance with that Proclamation—but that no development of that policy, in contravention of any existing law, can take place without fresh legislation—i.e., without an act of the Indian Legislature—and that consequently it is absurd for any doctrinaire to presume to put his own strained interpretation on that Proclamation, and then insist that the Indian Legislature is bound to legislate in accordance therewith.

THAT is all Sir James Stephen has insisted on in regard to the legal force of the Proclamation; and it is impossible for any intelligent being to controvert these plain and simple facts. Lord Ripon does not attempt to do so; but in lieu thereof, he pretends that Sir James Stephen "treated the Sovereign's solemn promise as of no value"—which is utterly untrue. We would advise the Viceroy to study carefully the Sovereign's promise to the landholders of Bengal in the Permanent Settlement—and then to consider how far he is himself treating it "as of no value," in the iniquitous Bengal Tenancy Bill.

WE record with the deepest regret the premature decease of the great reformer of Bengal, Keshub Chunder Sen. The revered Minister was well known to, and most warmly esteemed by, the writer of this hurried note. There is hardly another man in India whose loss will be felt so seriously in the Indian religious world. This is what the Times of yesterday says of our departed brother:—

"Our Calcutta correspondent telegraphed yesterday:—'Keshub Chunder Sen, head of the Brahmo-Soma, or reformed theistic sect of Hindoos, died this morning.' The deceased gentleman was the most active and distinguished leader in the New Theistic Church, founded about 1830, by the late Rajah Rammohun Roy, a reforming sect composed of highly intellectual men. Their religion they regarded as pure theism, which recognised the absolute unity and spirituality of God, the abolition of caste, and the education and elevation of woman. In the course of a very few years Brahmoism passed through three different stages. In the first, it had for its foundation Vedic testimony tempered by reason; in the second, reason and philosophy, and about 1870 it was supposed to stand on intuition guided by reason. The progressive Brahmo followers, of whom Keshub Chunder Sen was the chief, have gone through all these changes. He tried, with considerable success, and in the face of much opposition, as early as 1866 to carry out in practice various reforms. He had the boldness to countenance to an unusual extent what might be called Revivalist practices and the outward display of religious ceremonial. The result was a division of opinion and ultimate separation between the disciples of Keshub Chunder Sen and the more Conservative followers of Rammohun Roy. Keshub Chunder Sen was an accomplished English scholar. He visited this country some years ago, when he preached in several Unitarian chapels."

THERE is to be an officer in charge of a museum in every province in India. There is to be an Auditor General of India, on Rs.4,000 per annum. Lord Ripon, having set up a grand new department of agriculture, and created Foreign Under Secretaryships and other fat appointments galore, is still determined to keep the ball a-rolling. These are fine old times for Dowb.

THERE is great road-making going on between Sibi and Hurnai; and the Bolan Pass will soon be practicable for wheeled carriage. The Sibi and Hurnai road is being made by the 23rd Pioneers, the Madras Pioneers, and some Bengal Sappers, in such a way that rails can easily be laid upon it; but this is probably only the superfluity of naughtiness of the local engineers.

THE Ghurkas are rapidly preparing for an invasion of Thibet, collecting supplies and coolies, and stopping the export of grain from Nepal.

THE Indian Spectator says:—"Seriously, can the Indian Mirror deny that there are no Continental spies prowling even at this hour in various parts of the country? Is it ever possible to be on their track and hound them out by aid of the detective police? For that matter, are not ambassadors and their staff at various courts in Europe and elsewhere so many open and accredited spies? This bugbear of spies is simply a cant. You can never stop them. And their presence, unless it be numerically strong, need excite no alarm to a strong and well informed Government of law and order. Spies in Bulgaria and Servia may breed mischief. Not so in India."

THE Hindoo Patriot says:—"A public meeting of the inhabitants of Krishnagur was held on the 11th inst. in the Nootanbazar Atchala, to express regret at the death of Pandit Loharam Shiroratra, the great Bengali Grammarian, and to commemorate the valuable services he has rendered thereby to this country. The chair was occupied by Baboo Karticchunder Roy, the old Dowan of the Nadiya Maharaja, and the meeting was attended by more than 800 people. Baboo Ramgopal Sanyal and Pandit Grishchunder Bandopadhyaya addressed the meeting. It was suggested by Rai Jodunath Roy Bahadur that a Committee, composed of himself and several others, be formed to commemorate the memory of the Pandit."

THE Statesman and Friend of India does not think much of recent Indian Finance Ministers. This is what our contemporary says of Sir Auckland Colvin:—"Our readers should peruse carefully Colonel Osborn's letter elsewhere on the frightful miseries we have brought upon Egypt by the war. And the man who planned this war in the interests of the Turks, Circassians, and Bondholding crew, with whom he identified himself, is here to-day, as Finance Minister of India!" And this is what it thinks of Sir Auckland's immediate predecessors:—

"The Government can borrow as much money as it pleases, upon a simple guarantee of 3½ per cent. interest (not dividends), and the really childish schemes by which the necessity has been stayed off all these years, by financiers of the Temple, Strachey, and Major Baring order, move us deeply."

THE Statesman asks:—"Is it really true that His Highness the Maharaja of Jeypore, one of the oldest and most influential of the Rajpoot Princes, ruler of a vast territory and of seven millions of people, was permitted to find for himself a seat anywhere he could at the opening ceremony of the Exhibition on Tuesday? We find it difficult to believe it to be true. If the Prince left Calcutta straightway, at this practical, however unintentional, insult, who could blame him? But it was not Jeypore only, we understand, that was thus indecently neglected. No arrangements whatever, it seems, were made to set apart proper accommodation for any of the native chiefs or princes who were present. Our officials seem to us at times to have taken leave of their senses. What was the Foreign Office about? It is quite true that it was wise to make the visit of the native princes a purely private one; but did that necessitate this studious neglect of ordinary courtesies to these distinguished guests? It is, we say, incredible. We would have a reckoning with the Foreign Office pretty quickly, if we were Viceroy. We treat the people and their princes as though they were stocks and stones, and then declare how they love and admire us."

WITH respect to the Tea Market, the following is from Messrs. J. Thomas and Co.'s Price Current:—

"Two public auctions have been held during the fortnight, at which 20,687 packages were sold, viz., 6,921 chests on Dec. 6, and 11,066 chests on the 13th instant. There was a less active inquiry at the sales held on the former date, and we quote a general decline of about half an anna per lb., although perhaps more noticeable on Pekoe Souchong sorts and medium broken Pekoes. The tea catalogued last week were as a whole of better quality, and as such, met with good competition at slight advance; ordinary thin liquoring Pekoes were however rather neglected."

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

THE following is the official summary of the reports of the Agricultural Department on the state of the weather and prospects of the crops throughout India, for the week ending Dec 12:—

"There has been slight rain in three districts of the Madras Presidency, where the standing crops are good. In the Bombay Presidency some injury has been caused in one district by past excessive rain and in two others by blight, but on the whole the rabi crops promise well. In the Berars and Hyderabad cotton-picking is in progress, and the rabi crops are satisfactory. In Central India and Rajputana prospects continue good, but rain is much wanted in one of the Rajputana States, and grass is scarce. In the Punjab rabi sowings are still going on, and prospects are favourable. Rain is generally needed in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh for the rabi crops, but those on irrigated lands are doing well. In the Central Provinces the crops are generally promising, though some injury has occurred from frost. Rain has fallen throughout the greater part of Bengal and Assam, the heaviest falls being reported from Chittagong and Cachar. It has greatly benefited the rabi crops in Bengal, which were very backward. More rain is needed in western districts, particularly in the Patna Division, where none fell. Harvesting of rice is in progress, and, except in Eastern Bengal and Orissa, the yield will probably be very poor. An unusually heavy fall of rain occurred in Akyab, and rain has also fallen in three other districts of British Burma. The rice crop, which is now being reaped, has suffered from salt water, floods, and other causes; but the outturn, on the whole, is expected to be good. Fever, small-pox, and cholera exist in several districts, but are not epidemic. Prices are falling in the Punjab."

THE following is the report for Bengal:—

"More or less rain fell throughout the province during the week, except in Darjeeling and Julpigoree, and in the Patna division and parts of the Bhagulpur division; the rain has been very beneficial to the rabi crops; in Backergunge, it is said that the rain, accompanied by the wind, has done considerable damage by making the paddy fall and breeding insects; the paddy harvest is in progress, and will generally yield a very poor crop, except in Eastern Bengal and Orissa where the outturn is expected to be fair; fever is still reported to be prevalent in several districts."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE TRIBES ON MY FRONTIER.*

TTHIS superb little gift-book, got up in the beautiful style to which Messrs. Thacker, Spink, and Co. have of late accustomed Indian readers, is quaintly termed by its author "An Indian Naturalist's Foreign Policy." Under the nom de plume of "Eha," a clever and observant Anglo-Indian writer has given a most charming series of sprightly and entertaining essays on what may be termed the fauna of the Indian bungalow. Some or all of these papers have already attained a wide-spread reputation in a scattered and ephemeral form; and all Anglo-Indians, and a good many others, will be grateful, both to author and to publisher, for this collected and illustrated edition.

Eha's twenty chapters deal successively with the lively forms, the merry voices, and the plaguey impertinences of all the "Tribes on our Frontier," from iguanas and rats, down to white ants and "hypodermatikusyringophoroi;" and many are the quaint conceits and humorous fancies that they suggest. The illustrations are capital. One of the best portrays the exciting moment when the much-hunted rat has got inside the hunter's guard, and has gone up the seam of the pyjamas like a flash of lightning; and another good one is "The Pursuit of Pleasure," where the hideous chameleon is "gumming his tongue" for the benefit of a thoughtless butterfly.

New arrivals in India will do well to study Eha's pump-handle theory, in reference to the use of the hind-legs of a mosquito. We have no doubt that this amusing book will find its way into every Anglo-Indian's library]

THE "ARMY AND NAVY MAGAZINE."

THE Army and Navy Magazine for January opens with a short article, entitled "Tinkering and Tailoring," by Capt. Trienen. The writer considers that the army, as a fighting machine, has been in no way improved by so-called reforms of late, and many experienced officers will agree with him. In Col. Malleon's descriptions of "Battle-fields in Germany," those of Tüttlingen and Freiburg occupy the present number. Mrs. Philip's novel of "Man Proposes" is continued. There is a very good biography of Lord Olive, by M. J. Colquhoun, which, in a pleasant style, narrates the chief points of the hero's life. The other articles are on "St. Jean de Luz," by C. T. Buckland, one on the "Admiralty Office," by George J. Hooper, which is both historically interesting and also amusing. Major Graham concludes the series of articles on "Pre-eminence in War," giving in this number several interesting and valuable examples of alterations in tactics in late years.

MAIL NEWS.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, on leaving Calcutta, on Dec. 10, proceeded on a visit to Banaras and Lucknow. At the former town they were the guests of the Maharajah of Banaras, and at Lucknow of General Cureton, commanding the division. Their Royal Highnesses left Lucknow on Dec. 14, arriving at Mirat the following morning.

At the meeting of the Viceregal Legislative Council, on Dec. 14, the chief business transacted was the passing of a Bill amending the law relating to the emigration of natives of India, the general purpose of which is to provide greater facilities for emigration. The Bill was passed after some debate raised by the representatives of the native landed class.

At the meeting of the Bengal Legislative Council, on Dec. 15, a Bill was introduced to provide for the supply of filtered water within the municipality of the suburbs of Calcutta.

The troops destined for the Aka expedition are now concentrating at Tezpur.

The following Royal Engineer officers now in England have been placed under orders for duty in the Bengal Presidency:—Captains St. G. M. Kirke and A. Heathcote; Lieutenants W. M. Ellis, W. R. Morton, E. M. B. Newman, and H. M. Chapman.

Hormusjee Byramjee Rana, late head Shroff of the Bank of Bombay, who was lately committed for trial on a charge of embezzling some Rs. 64,000 belonging to the bank, and who was awaiting trial at the Sessions, died in the Common Gaol Hospital, Bombay, on Tuesday morning.

Sir James Fergusson returned to Bombay from Calcutta on Tuesday.

Mr. De Le Mare has been appointed Emigration Agent at Calcutta for the Colonies of Mauritius and Fiji.

The death is reported, at Multan, on the 9th instant, from congestion of the liver, of Major James Bell, LT 4 Royal Artillery.

The 14th M. N. I., which left Calcutta last week, arrived in Madras on Dec. 18, and was to go under canvas on the Esplanade for a short time. From thence it goes on to Bangalore to take part in the camp of exercise.

The amount of remittances to the Home Treasury by means of Council Bills from April 1 to Dec. 8 was £10,201,200, leaving a balance of £6,098,800 to be remitted during the remainder of the current financial year.

The Rev. A. G. Robarts, chaplain of Dhaka, has been granted furlough for fifteen months, and the Rev. W. Ulyat, junior chaplain of St. Paul's Cathedral, is appointed to succeed him. The Rev. T. B. Speedy is appointed chaplain of Dumdum.

The meteorological returns for the month of November show that the hottest day was on the 13th, when the temperature rose to 87-1, and the coldest the 22nd, when it fell to 51-1. No rain fell during the month, the average rainfall for the last forty-eight years being 0.65 of an inch.

The district reports from Bengal, published in the Gazette, show that the rain of the 4th and 5th instant was general in most parts of Bengal and Orissa, but in Behar only small quantities fell in parts of the Bhagulpur Division, and rain is much wanted. In Eastern Bengal, where the rain was heaviest, some damage to the crops is reported.

Corporal Walsh of the 98th Regiment, stationed at Quetta, while marking on the Volunteer rifle range, put his head out of the butt, and was struck in the forehead by a ricochet bullet and killed.

Surgeon Major R. T. Lyons has been permitted to retain charge of the Lawrence Military Asylum as Sanawar for another year.

Vizagapatam is to be abandoned as a military station, and the lines, last in the occupation of the 29th M. N. I., are to be taken over by the Public Works authorities.

The Governor General has been pleased to appoint Alay Mumammad, a Probationer in the Central Provinces, to be a member of the Bengal Civil Service.

Mr. R. B. Buckley, executive engineer, 1st grade Bengal, is appointed to officiate as under secretary to the Government of India in the Public Works Department, during the absence on furlough of Major G. F. L. Marshall, R.E., or until further orders.

Lieutenant J. R. Dunlop Smith, of the Bengal Staff Corps, and assistant commissioner in the Punjab, succeeds Lieutenant A. H. Mason, R.E., as aide de camp to the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab.

Colonel Jas. Coleman, for some years a member of the Madras Legislative Council, and a prominent citizen of Madras, died there late on Dec. 14.

Mr. J. C. Shaw has been re-elected chairman of the Madras Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. A. Boyson vice-chairman.

Captain W. Innes is appointed Major Commandant of the Eastern Bengal Railway Volunteers in the place of Major Hindmarsh, resigned.

Col. R. G. Rogers, C.B. A.D.C., Staff Corps, has been transferred from Jalandar to Delhi, and on arrival will assume command of the station.

The following officers of the Bengal Staff Corps have succeeded to their colonel's allowance:—Colonels A. K. Comber, J. Burn, W. B. Gordon, F. C. Anderson, and M. Hunter.

Colonel J. Burn, on succeeding to colonel's allowance, has been permitted to reside out of India.

The following postings of Royal Artillery Officers have been made:—Major A. H. Murray, from Wazirabad to Ambala, to join L Battery A Brigade; Major M. A. Caldecott, from Ambala to Wazirabad, to join M Battery 3rd Brigade; and Lieut. H. H. Rogers, from Dinapur to Ambala, to join No. 7 Battery 1st Brigade, Northern Division.

A telegram from Bombay, on Dec. 14, says that more than twenty of the firms in Bombay that are interested in exports have replied to the protest of the shipowners' meeting in London that they prefer to abide by the new tonnage scale. The Committee of the Chamber of Commerce have forwarded these opinions to the agents of the regular liners, and have urged them to accept the alterations, promising to propose to the Chamber at the next general meeting, that representatives should be sent to any meeting called at home for the purpose of considering a uniform scale for the whole of India.

The right wing of the 26th Regiment, N.I., is expected at Sassoon Dock from Baroda, by a special train at 5.30 a.m., on the 29th inst., and will embark on board the Indian Government sailing ship Czarwiteh for Kurrachee. There are two European officers, eight native officers, 364 men, seventy-three followers, and one horse.

A mimic battle was fought at Madras on Monday morning, when a force consisting of the 1st Essex Regiment, the 22nd and 26th M.N.I., and a battery of artillery attempted to storm the fort. Sir F. Roberts, who was present with his staff, was, according to a local paper, "not altogether complimentary" in his remarks to the officers of the attacking force. His Excellency, in effort, said that, "in real action, not one of the storming party would have reached the fort alive. The covering party, instead of rushing ahead of the stormers, covering the party with their fire, allowed the storming party, with the ladders, to advance by themselves at a funeral pace, instead of doubling up to the ditch."

TELEGRAPHIC INTELLIGENCE.

The following telegram from the Times correspondent is dated Calcutta, Jan 4:—

"In the Legislative Council to-day, after some formal business, Mr. Ilbert moved that the Criminal Code Amendment Bill be referred to a Select Committee, consisting of Messrs. Gibbs, Colvin, Evans, Quibton, Gibbon, and Miller, the Ameer Ali, and himself, with instructions to submit its report within a week. The honourable member spoke at some length, and after stating the scope and intention of the Bill as originally introduced, said that the last step taken by the Council was to order the measure to be circulated for the opinions of the Local Governments and officers. A large body of opinions had been obtained, and it then became the duty of the Executive Government to consider whether these opinions could be followed consistently with the policy of the Crown and Parliament as declared in the Charter Act of 1833 and the Queen's Proclamation of 1858. He proceeded to combat Mr. Justice Stephen's view of the meaning and legal effect of that Act and the Proclamation, as expressed in the learned Judge's letters to the Times, and stated that, far from regarding the Proclamation as a mere expression of sentiment, he considered it one of the most binding and solemn engagements ever entered into by a Sovereign. Mr. Ilbert went on to describe and discuss various Acts of the Indian Legislature dealing with judicial powers, from the Black Acts downwards, and attacked the arguments which had been put forward in support of the compromise of 1875. Certain modifications of the original Bill had been agreed upon last August, and the Government had been prepared to recommend the passing of the Bill thus modified. But persons whose opinions were entitled to respect had pointed out that there was danger of an outburst of race feeling. However little the Government sympathised with that feeling, they listened to those representations, and agreed to slightly extend trial by jury; but the maintenance of that extended system of jury trial would be conditional on its working no injustice, and causing no administrative inconvenience. In conclusion, Mr. Ilbert said that as, in the course of the controversy, much had been said about prestige, he wished to say that, in his opinion, British strength in India rested on the fair and impartial administration of justice.

"The next speaker, Dr. Hunter, said that the proposed modifications, as far as the extension of jury trials was concerned, would perpetuate race distinctions. He hoped the Council would affirm the principle that no distinction should be made between European and native covenanted civilians.

"The Ameer Ali followed, and disputed Mr. Justice Stephen's views as to the legal effect of the Queen's Proclamation.

"Mr. Miller an independent member, said he would not support the present motion unless the clearest understanding were come to as to the terms of the compromise with the Government. If any double meaning were attached to those terms, the difficulties would be increased tenfold. He thought a week too short a time for the Committee to report.

"Mr. Gibbon expressed similar views.

"Kristodas Pal complained that the modifications would create a new anomaly, and be retrogressive; but as he did not wish to raise difficulties at this stage, he would reserve his objections till the Committee reported, and would now only suggest that the Bill, as remodelled by the Committee, should be again circulated for the opinions of the Local Governments and officers.

"Mr. Evans, the leader of the Opposition, said that since the compromise had been arranged, certain difficulties had arisen as to the exact meaning of some of its terms. The difficulties were now narrowed down to one small point, of which, however, he had heard only a few hours before. He had not had time to consider it fully, or to consult the leaders of the European community, and therefore he would ask his lordship to adjourn the debate.

"Lord Ripon said this would be somewhat inconvenient, as he and other members desired to speak to-day; but as he wished to show every courtesy to the members of the Council he would adjourn the debate till Monday, it being clearly understood that he did so solely for Mr. Evans's convenience, and without committing himself to any opinion as to the point of difference.

"The Council then adjourned.

"I believe the point of difference to be as follows:—One of the terms of the compromise, as understood and accepted by the European community, was that a European prisoner brought before a district magistrate should be entitled to claim trial by jury; and if a jury could not be obtained in that district, the prisoner should then be sent before another district magistrate in whose district a jury could be found. Certain members of the Government now say they never meant to give this right of transfer, and that the course in such a case will be to commit the prisoner for trial before a sessions judge. The Europeans attach considerable importance to this point, a suspicion having been prevalent for some days] that some members of the Government wish to cut down the modifications as far as possible. A certain passage in Mr. Ilbert's speech, and the sudden cropping up of this difficulty will increase the suspicion; and unless some modus vivendi be arrived at within the next two days, there is imminent danger of the negotiations breaking down, and the agitation being renewed with redoubled force."

The following is dated Jan. 6:—

"I mentioned in my last telegram that a question had arisen between the Government and the Anglo-Indian Defence Association as to the proper interpretation of one of the clauses in the Ilbert Bill compromise, the point being whether, in the event of a jury not being obtainable to try the charge against a European before a district magistrate, the case should be transferred to another district magistrate, or the accused should be committed for trial before the Sessions Judge. The opposition maintain that the former is the correct interpretation; and, although the written agreement is somewhat vaguely worded, it would certainly seem to bear out that view.

"The difference may appear trifling, but a little consideration will show that it is of some importance. A committal would subject the accused to be imprisoned, or held to bail till the next Sessions period—perhaps two months; it would expose him to a heavier sentence, the punitive powers of a Sessions Judge being double those of a magistrate; and it would enable an unscrupulous magistrate to force a prisoner to accept his summary jurisdiction, by holding the threat of committal over him in terrorem.

"Moreover, it has become clear, during the past week, that the compromise, even as originally understood, was not quite so generally approved by the European community as was at first supposed. Meetings of planters in the Cachar and Darjeeling districts have denounced it, and have condemned the Defence Association for accepting it. The council of the Defence Association met yesterday, and distinctly refused to accept the Government view of the point in dispute. Unless the latter sees its way to giving up the contention and to sending the Bill to a select committee to-morrow, with a clear understanding as to the meaning of the terms of the settlement, the agitation will assuredly break out with redoubled violence, and "the last state will be worse than the first," as it is doubtful whether the leaders of the opposition will be able any longer to control their following.

"The Nizam, whose gorgeous carriage and retainers have been conspicuous objects in Calcutta for the last fortnight, left the capital yesterday. During his stay he was informed that the direct administration of the Hyderabad State would be made over to him on February 5 next. If the Ilbert Bill difficulty be happily got over, the Viceroy will go to Hyderabad towards the end of the current month to personally perform the ceremony of installation.

"Mr. Seymour Keay delivered an address in the Calcutta Town-hall on Thursday last, in support of his projected Indian Reform Association. Only natives were invited, and it is stated—I believe correctly—that steps were taken to exclude Europeans. The address, as reported, consisted chiefly of invectives against Anglo-Indian officials, and was full of fallacies and misrepresentations. It is much to be regretted that any respectable natives should countenance a mischievous agitation of this description.

"The Governor of Madras has published a Minute, from which the following is an extract:—

"I have now completed a rapid survey of the Presidency; and have visited the chief towns in each district. It is a glorious country; and he who does not enjoy so wide and interesting a sphere of activity must either be hard to please or think highly of his own claim upon the fates and destinies. Wherever I have been, I have invited the freest expression of their wishes on the part of those persons who had a right to speak for their countrymen; and I have been much struck by the good sense which characterised most of the requests made to me. No doubt many could not be granted; because in this imperfect world means are limited, and the best-intentioned rulers cannot perform miracles. If one compares, however, the general drift of the addresses I received over an area of country much larger than the British Isles with the drivel sometimes palmed upon politicians in England at the genuine outcome of native opinion in India, the result is most gratifying. A deep peace broods over the land; the native enjoys a freedom of individual action such as was never enjoyed before, and sees before him a future of wealth and comfort if only the appliances of modern civilisation be supplied to him. Let us steadily work on the administrative lines on which we have been long advancing, extending education, raising the standard of justice and administration, and investigating further into the resources of the land."

"The committee which lately assembled in Calcutta for the purpose of considering the best steps to be taken by the Government for the preservation and encouragement of native arts and manufacturers, has recommended that every province should have at least one museum, containing a typical collection of its arts and manufactures. The officer in charge of the museum should, it is suggested, periodically visit the local manufactories, collect specimens, find out the best workmen, facilitate communication between them and the public, and so on.

"The difference between the Governor of Bombay and the High Court Judges has happily been arranged. In future, the judges will stand on the Governor's right at levees.

"The Akhas are offering a more determined resistance than had been expected. The day after the engagement which I mentioned last week, Major Beresford's force advanced one march and found the enemy strongly posted on the banks of the Tegapani River. Major Beresford's detachment was not strong enough to cross, and was compelled to await reinforcements and guns, which were being rapidly pushed up. The enemy's most formidable weapons are poisoned arrows, which are very deadly. A Sepoy who was grazed by one on the thigh died in an hour. Our loss so far amounts to four killed and six wounded. The health of the troops is good, and the communications are kept open.

"The dispute between Nepal and Thibet is still unsettled. It is now said that the compensation demanded by the Nepalese is exorbitant. They seem determined, however, to exact it, and have stopped the export of grain, and are collecting supplies and coolies for the use of an army.

"Colonel James Browne, and a staff of engineers, with five companies of Bengal Sappers, and one wing each of the 23d Pioneers and the Madras Pioneers, are busily employed on the road between Sibi and Hurnia. The work is described as merely improving the cart road, but it would appear that everything is being done to facilitate the laying of a railway along the Hurnia route into the Pishee district. The Pioneers are also working on the Bolan Pass road, and it is hoped that it will be possible to drive right through the Bolan Pass by April 1 next."

The following is dated Jan. 7 :—

"This morning it became known that the one remaining difficulty in the negotiations for a compromise on the Ilbert Bill had been settled. It has been arranged that, in the event of a magistrate being unable to find a jury, the case should be transferred to the sessions judge, who should try it, not qua judge, but as a magistrate with a magistrate's punitive powers. This arrangement is a somewhat clumsy one, but it is better than the course proposed by the Government. The Legislative Council met in the forenoon, and the debate, which had been adjourned from Friday, was resumed.

"Mr. Evans, a non-official member, was the first speaker. He began by expressing his pleasure at the settlement which had been arrived at, which would put an end to the bitterness of the controversy. He had hoped when the local opinions were sent in that the Government would withdraw the Bill; and he still thought that would be the wiser course. The modifications announced by Lord Northbrook removed many of the objections to the original measure; but the Bill, even when thus limited, was open to grave objections, and it soon became evident that the Europeans would not accept it. The situation became dangerous, and it was becoming more dangerous every day. He had, therefore, taken it upon himself to make certain proposals to the Government, which, however, were not accepted; but certain proposals came from the Government itself, and on them the proposed compromise was founded. He felt bound to state that no proposal had emanated from the Defence Association, of which body he was not a member. The arrangement secured for Europeans the right of trial by jury. The Government had gone further, and given what was never asked for—namely, a jury even when the presiding judge himself was a European. He must refer to some remarks which had fallen from the honourable and learned mover on Friday. Mr. Ilbert had referred to the Charter Act and to the Queen's Proclamation, and had described the existing law as shutting out natives from office. But the justiceship of the peace had long ceased to be an office in India, and had become a mere formula describing persons who had jurisdiction over Europeans. If it were an office, it was strange that the fact had not been discovered till long after the present controversy began. Mr. Ilbert had described European British subjects as an artificially defined and circumscribed category of human beings. The same description might be applied to any legally-defined class. The Viceroy, as a peer of the realm, belonged to an artificially defined and circumscribed category of human beings. Mr. Ilbert had also alluded to former struggles on the subject of jurisdiction. He (Mr. Evans) wished to point out that the former struggles were not whether Europeans should be subject to native jurisdiction, but whether they should be subject to local courts at all. Their subjection to local courts was not accomplished till the year 1872, and then only by their consent. Trial by jury was an integral part of the present settlement, and if it went, the whole Bill must go too. Mr. Ilbert had said that the maintenance of the jury system, even as now existing, would depend on the assumption that it worked no injustice or administrative inconvenience. He (Mr. Evans) took this merely as a general observation, but thought it right to mention that it had caused some alarm outside. He trusted that the Government had no intention of taking away jury trial, which was especially valuable to Englishmen living under despotic Government. He would also allude to a remark of Dr. Hunter's. Dr. Hunter had said he understood that anyone who voted for the motion now before the Council would, by doing so, express approval of the principle of the Bill. He meant to vote for the motion, because it would settle the controversy, but he did not approve the principle of the Bill. With reference to what had fallen from Kristodas Pal—viz., that the amended measure would be more inconvenient than the existing law, he thought it would not be so; but if it were likely so to prove, then let the Bill be dropped altogether.

"The next speaker, Mr. Thomas, an official member, said he had been distressed to hear Mr. Ilbert's speech, because it had opened old sores, re-asserted arguments already answered, and made light of objections which had never been answered. There had also been in it too great a ring of uncertainty about the future, which filled him with grave misgivings. The honourable mover had said that native magistrates passed tests which would satisfy every reasonable person as to their fitness for judicial office. The speaker could give an instance to prove the contrary. A man charged with the brutal murder of a child, the only defence being that she was offered as a sacrifice to a Goddess, was brought before a native who had fulfilled all these tests, and was sentenced only to three months' imprisonment. The High Court re-opened the case, sent a special European Judge to try it, and the prisoner was sentenced to death. With such Judges Englishmen in a foreign land were not unreasonable in claiming the right to trial by their peers. Mr. Ilbert made light of prestige; but was there ever a Native State that maintained its supremacy solely by the excellence of its law? Did Rome do so? Prestige was to power as a reflector to light; it focussed its force. He hoped it would be made quite clear that the proposed arrangement was initiated by the Government and not by the Opposition, and that the compromise was meant to be permanent. If the Government did not pledge itself to give a jury, and if it could not give an assurance of permanency, he would not support the motion for the Bill going into Committee. Not to give such an assurance would leave the European community in a state of unrest; but if the settlement were meant to be permanent, he would support the motion, although still adhering to his original opinion, that the wisest and most statesmanlike course would be to withdraw the Bill altogether.

"No other additional member spoke, and Sir A. Colvin then addressed the Council very shortly. He said he wished to explain why the proposed settlement commended itself to him. The cardinal point to which the Government attached importance was the removal from the Statute Book of all judicial disqualification based merely on race distinction. That point being now practically conceded, he would only say that he agreed with those who supported it. It was very reasonable that Europeans should bethink themselves of safeguards, and it was the duty of the Government to give them such safeguards, so far as could be done without insuperable administrative inconvenience. He believed that the administration of the proposed scheme was perfectly possible, and that it would in no way endanger the interests of justice.

"The Commander in Chief followed, but was almost inaudible. He was, however, understood to make some remarks on Lord Hartington's speeches in the House of Commons and at Accrington, and to say that no warning from the Indian Council, official or unofficial, had ever reached the Indian Government.

"The Lieutenant Governor congratulated the Council on the settlement of the controversy. As the Government had made proposals which the Opposition were willing to accept, he would vote for the motion. Otherwise, he would have felt it his duty to oppose the Bill. It was a novelty to introduce trial by jury into magistrates' courts, and there was some risk of the system breaking down from its cumbrousness. It had been said that an officer might be placed in charge of a district necessarily to exercise this jurisdiction. That was not so. Promotion to the rank of district magistrate was always by seniority. In thirty years he had known only one case of a civilian being passed over when his turn came for a district magistracy, and that was done with the officer's own consent, he being disabled for outdoor work by a sunstroke. There had been much wild talk on the part of some supporters of the Bill. People had said that to drop it would offend 250 millions. Take away 249 millions and there would still be left a large margin who never heard of the Bill. The Bengalees were never so free to speak or write as now, and sometimes they grossly abused their freedom. He would appeal to his honourable friend Kristodas Pal, who had been associated with him in public duties for thirty years, whether the Queen's Proclamation had not been steadily carried out since 1858. In conclusion, he would say that if the public had been consulted in the first instance, instead of having had the measure suddenly sprung upon them last February, and if the jury system now proposed had then formed part of it, no reasonable man among the non-official European community would have offered it any opposition. As it was, the opposition which had been excited was no matter for surprise.

"The Viceroy then proceeded to sum up the debate. He said he was glad that the time had come when it was possible for him to express his views fully. He did not propose to go over the ground traversed on March 9th. The principle of the Bill was to remove judicial disqualification based on differences of race, and to substitute qualifications based on personal fitness. That principle the Bill carried out.

"The principle of the Bill and the policy on which it was founded had, he added, excited much opposition. Some arguments of its opponents were unreasonable. The one demand of all its opponents was that the Bill should be withdrawn, and their theory was that Europeans had a right to be tried by Europeans. It was now said, or insinuated, that this right meant trial by a mixed jury. But that contention was never put forward before, and trial by peers did not mean a trial by men of the same race.

"When the Government, said Lord Ripon, came to consider local opinion, it had decided not to withdraw the Bill, because it was bound to maintain its policy. It had to consider to what extent that policy should be applied, and whether it could provide any additional safeguards. It seemed fair to leave in the Bill nothing giving discretionary power to the Local Governments, but to strictly limit the classes of officers who were to receive jurisdiction. They did not apply the principle fully, but they maintained it. Sir Charles Turner's proposals seemed to afford a valuable safeguard, and they had, therefore, been adopted. The Bill, thus modified, was sent to the Secretary of State, and approved by him.

"Matters went on the Viceroy, stood thus when the members of the Government assembled at Calcutta on December 1. Then Mr. Evans intimated to the Government that he thought further modifications should be made. He proposed the establishment of optional jurisdiction. This scheme could not be adopted, as it would be a sacrifice of principle, and would be a slur on the judicial office. But the fact that the proposal had been made raised the question whether any further modification was possible without sacrificing the principle. The only proposal that seemed to offer satisfactory conditions was one made by the Government of Bombay last May. A suggestion based on it was accordingly made by Sir Auckland Colvin to Mr. Evans, and the upshot was the agreement which had now been entered into. There was here no sacrifice of principle, while it was satisfactory to Englishmen as giving them a peculiarly English institution. It did not imply any slur on the magistracy, for they were always the highest magistrates who preside at jury trials. He was confident that it would not cause any failure of justice, otherwise he would never have consented to it. If it did cause such a failure in the future, it would be the duty of the Government of the day to find a remedy, but he had no such fear. The measure would vindicate a principle of the highest value to the natives. The one side had gained a vindication of this great principle, the other side had obtained all reasonable safeguards.

"As to what the Lieutenant Governor had said about promotions, he (the Viceroy) could assure his Honour of his warm support, whenever he found it necessary. This policy was not a novel one. It had been introduced fifty years ago, and had received solemn confirmation in the Queen's Proclamation. He should not accept Sir J. F. Stephen's view of that instrument. It seemed to him very serious to put forth to the people of India a doctrine which treated their Sovereign's solemn promise as of no value. This doctrine was inconsistent with the character of the Sovereign and the honour of the country. It was a doctrine which would do more than anything else to strike at the roots of British power in India. For his part, so long as he held his office, he was determined to conduct the administration in strict accordance with the policy of Parliament.

"The Bill was then referred to a Select Committee, no one dissenting from this course."

THE MYSTERY OF THE INTERVIEW BETWEEN LORD KIMBERLEY AND MR. ATKINS.

MR. ATKINS is a particularly intelligent, observant, and accurate man, and he has had not a little journalistic experience. The invitation that he received to wait upon the Secretary of State was no small compliment, and we may rest assured that he was "all eyes and all ears" during the conference. He is a very zealous representative of a very important class of men, and he was prompted by the strongest motives to take mental note of every word that fell from the mouth of the Minister. It is in the highest degree improbable that he could have willingly or consciously attributed to his lordship a word, much less a series of words of a momentous character which had not been employed. He was listening on behalf of his countrymen in India, and he must have desired to give them an unvarnished account of what passed. No third person seems to have been present during the interview to whom reference can be made to settle the present dispute. When Lord Kimberley says that he laid "no stress" on the words or expressions attributed to him, he indirectly admits that those words, or expressions, or something very like them, were used. It is inconceivable that Mr. Atkins evolved those words, or expressions, out of his own moral consciousness, or was indebted for them to a lively imagination, unrestrained by a sense of responsibility to those whom he represented. Lord Kimberley doubtless honestly believes that he never said as much as is alleged. He is a large, bluff farmer-like man, with strongly marked self-esteem, and a ready flow of speech. We take it that he tried to come the acute diplomatist over Mr. Atkins; and that he resorted to the use of something akin to bunkum. Possibly he assumed a virtue if he had it not, and said enough to send his interviewer away with the conviction that Her Majesty's Ministers are sweet innocents, whereas her Viceroy is the wicked man. It may be some time before he again goes out of his way to invite a man with a big grievance to call upon him at the India Office for a quiet talk with closed doors.—Madras Mail.

INDIAN TRADE AND ENGLISH TAXATION.

THE Indian Government has just officially published a correspondence of a remarkable kind which has taken place between the Lords of the Treasury, the Secretary of State for India, the Government of India, and various trades associations in Calcutta and Madras, with reference to the repeal of the protective duty imposed on all foreign silver plate imported into England. In their memorials to the Finance Minister in India, the trades associations pointed out that no trade in silver goods is possible with Great Britain under the existing conditions, because all Indian silver manufacturers are subject to the tax of 18. 6d. per ounce; they are also required to be hall-marked before they are submitted for sale under a penalty, in failure, of £10 for each piece of plate exposed; the articles are further liable to be broken up by the Assay Office if the silver of which they are made falls by one fourth of a grain to come up to the English standard of fineness, which differs considerably from the India standard of the rupee. English manufactures other than plain ware are submitted for the assay mark in the rough state and before they are finished, to avoid the defacing operation of assaying and marking, but this is manifestly impossible in the case of Indian manufactures. The beautiful silver work of Cashmere, Guzerat, Ouch, the Punjab, and Southern India is, therefore, kept entirely out of the English market by these prohibitive and protective duties, to the manifest disadvantage of the English purchaser as well as to the detriment of the Indian manufacturer.

In forwarding these communications to the Secretary of State for India, the Indian Government pointed out that there were two considerations which rendered the repeal of the duty specially desirable. The first was that the system under which the duty is levied places the English silversmith at an advantage compared with his foreign competitor, and is, therefore, not in harmony with the general policy of Her Majesty's Government in such matters; and the second was that the repeal of the duty, while conferring a benefit on the English consumers of silver, will also act beneficially on the general financial position of the Government of India. Any measure tending to increase Indian exports and draw some portion of the population, however small, away from agriculture to manufacturers would in any case be very desirable; and in view of the large sterling payments to be made annually in England by the Government of India, it was especially to be desired, in Indian interests, that any duty tending to obstruct the consumption of silver in the form of plate, &c., should no longer be levied. The Government of India added:—"To these considerations we may, perhaps, add another, which is of a political rather than a purely fiscal nature. It cannot be doubted that the recent abolition of the import duties, although highly beneficial to India, has been regarded by a considerable section of the Indian community as having been dictated in the interests of England. By those who hold such views it is urged that, after the large sacrifices India has made to give complete freedom to trade, it is not unreasonable to expect that a small fiscal reform of this nature, which would benefit India, should be made by Her Majesty's Government in England. Apart from the purely fiscal aspects of the question, we venture to think it would be desirable, on political grounds, to remove this grievance." As regards the question of drawbacks, which constituted a difficulty when the matter was previously under consideration, the Indian Government mention that, "in all the customs reforms carried out in India no drawback has ever been allowed, although we have received frequent representations from individuals to the effect that by reason of certain fiscal changes a pecuniary loss has been entailed upon them."

On the correspondence being forwarded by the Secretary of State for India to the Lords of the Treasury, Mr. Leonard Courtney, the Secretary, replied:—

"I am to say that the strongly expressed wishes of the Government of India are entitled to and receive the respectful consideration of Her Majesty's Government. I am at the same time to point out that the financial equilibrium of the Budget must be a primary consideration with the Imperial Government, and that the question at issue in this case is complicated by the large amount of drawback for which a claim was put forward. My Lords fear that they cannot hold out strong hopes of compliance with the wishes of the Indian Government, even in more favourable circumstances than now exist, until the trade are prepared to propose or accept such an arrangement in respect of drawback as Her Majesty's Government can recommend to Parliament. . . . My Lords desire to judge the whole question on its merits, and they, therefore, will only note the difference, of which the Secretary of State in Council is doubtless aware, between the cotton duties imposed until recently in India and the gold and silver plate duty. The former were purely and avowedly protective, but the latter is not so, the customs duty on gold and silver plate being only framed to countervail the excise duty imposed upon the home manufacture."

In acknowledging the receipt of Mr. Courtney's letter, the Earl of Kimberley has great regret that their lordships can hold out no stronger hope than that given of the repeal of the duties. Lord Kimberley desired again to request the attention of the Lords of the Treasury to the statement of the Government of India that no drawbacks have ever been allowed in that country in cases of custom reforms, notwithstanding frequent representations of pecuniary loss entailed. And further, "Lord Kimberley is unwilling to pass over without notice the statement, which appears to his lordship inaccurate, at the close of your letter, that the Indian cotton duties were 'purely and avowedly protective.' These duties were originally imposed for purely fiscal purposes, and at a time when no Indian manufactures existed which they could operate to protect; they were subsequently modified at different times, in order to remove the protection which it was found that they were alleged to afford certain classes of Indian made goods; and they have recently been entirely abolished, in common with import duties upon many other articles."

The reference of the correspondence to the Government in India evoked a lengthened reply in denial that the Indian cotton duties were "avowedly protective." The duty which was abolished last March really protected one class of Manchester goods against another, and even to some slight extent protected English goods against those manufactured in India. The duty forced trade into an artificial channel by stimulating the consumption of the coarser kinds of goods, and discouraging the use of medium and finer classes to the extent of a differential rate of 5 per cent. There could, in the opinion of the Indian Government, be no comparison whatsoever between the Indian cotton duties, as they existed subsequent to March 13, 1879, and the gold and silver plate duties in England, which protect the English silversmith, to a certain extent, against foreign competition. As regards the question of drawbacks, the Indian Government again draw attention to the point that no drawbacks have ever been allowed in India in the case of Custom's reforms. They say they are aware that "the financial equilibrium of the Budget must be a primary consideration with the Imperial Government," but they venture to hope that, in view of the smallness of the amount of revenue involved, it will be possible at some early date to preserve fiscal equilibrium without the maintenance of these highly objectionable duties; while they cannot but consider that the payment of drawbacks should not be allowed to stand in the way of their abolition. Under these circumstances, the Government of India again press the matter upon the consideration of Her Majesty's Government.

The renewed representations of the Government in India produced the following reply from Mr. Leonard Courtney, Secretary to the Treasury:—"I am directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to request you to inform the Secretary of State for India in Council that my Lords have read with interest the remarks by the Government of India on the protective character of the former duties on cotton imported into India. It would not be seemly for my Lords to controvert the views expressed by the Government of India on the objects of their fiscal arrangements. But, on the other hand, with reference to the last paragraph of the letter from the Government of India, to which Lord Kimberley calls their lordships' attention, they must remark that it is for them to judge whether and when Parliament can be asked to charge on the taxpayers large sums (under the name of drawback) to be paid to the holders of silver goods, in order to relieve the purchasers of silver, who generally belong to the wealthier class of the community, from the present tax on plate."

The correspondence closes with a memorandum from the Secretary of State for India to the Government of India, intimating that his Lordship did not think it advisable to continue the discussion on the subject with the Treasury at present.—Times.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

MUST WE HAVE INCREASE OF TAXATION FOR EDUCATION IN INDIA?

The fourth chapter of the report deals with primary education. The list of the recommendations of the commission under this head, is long, but we give it in extenso as the subject is one of vital importance. The commission write:—We recommend that—

(1) Primary education be regarded as the instruction of the masses through the vernacular in such subjects as will best fit them for their position in life, and be not necessarily regarded as a portion of instruction leading up to the University.

(2) The upper primary and lower primary examinations be not made compulsory in any Province.

(3) While every branch of education can justly claim the fostering care of the State, it is desirable, in the present circumstances of the country, to declare the elementary education of the masses, its provision, extension, and improvement, to be that part of the educational system to which the strenuous efforts of the State should now be directed in a still larger measure than heretofore.

(4) An attempt be made to secure the fullest possible provision for an extension of primary education by legislation suited to the circumstances of each Province.

(5) Where indigenous schools exist, the principle of aiding and improving them be recognised as an important means of extending elementary education.

(6) Examinations by inspecting officers be conducted as far as possible in situ, and all primary schools receiving aid be invariably inspected in situ.

(7) As a general rule, aid to primary schools be regulated to a large extent according to the results of examination; but an exception may be made in the case of schools established in backward districts or under peculiar circumstances, which may be aided under special rules.

(8) School-houses and furniture be of the simplest and most economical kind.

(9) The standards of primary examination in each province be revised with a view to simplification, and to the larger introduction of practical subjects, such as native methods of arithmetic, accounts, and mensuration, the elements of natural and physical science, and their application to agriculture, health, and the industrial arts; but no attempt be made to secure general uniformity throughout India.

(10) Care be taken not to interfere with the freedom of managers of aided schools in the choice of text-books.

(11) Promotion from class to class be not necessarily made to depend on the results of one fixed standard of examinations uniform throughout the Province.

(12) Physical development be promoted by the encouragement of native games, gymnastics, school-drill, and other exercises suited to the circumstances of each class of school.

(13) All inspecting officers and teachers be directed to see that the teaching and discipline of every school are such as to exert a right influence on the manners, the conduct, and the character of the children, and that for the guidance of the masters a special manual be prepared.

(14) The existing rules, as to religious teaching in Government schools, be applied to all primary schools wholly maintained by municipal or local fund boards.

(15) The supply of Normal schools, whether Government or aided, be so localised as to provide for the local requirements of all primary schools, whether Government or aided, within the Division under each inspector.

(16) The first charges on provincial funds assigned for primary education be the cost of its direction and inspection, and the provision of adequate Normal schools.

(17) Pupils in municipal or local board schools be not entirely exempted from payment of fees, merely on the ground that they are the children of ratepayers.

(18) In all board schools a certain proportion of pupils be admissible as free students on the ground of poverty; and in the case of special schools, established for the benefit of poorer classes, a general or larger exemption from payment of fees be allowed under proper authority for special reasons.

(19) Subject to the exemption of a certain proportion of free students on account of poverty, fees, whether in money or kind, be levied in all aided schools; but the proceeds be left entirely at the disposal of the school managers.

(20) The principle laid down in Lord Hardinge's Resolution, dated Oct. 11, 1844, be re-affirmed, i.e., that in selecting persons, to fill the lowest offices under Government, preference be always given to candidates who can read and write.

(21) The Local Governments, especially those of Bombay and the North Western Provinces, be invited to consider the advisability of carrying out the suggestion contained in paragraph 96 of the Despatch of 1854, namely, of making any educational qualification necessary to the confirmation of hereditary village officers, such as patels and lambardars.

(22) Night schools be encouraged wherever practicable.

(23) As much elasticity as possible be permitted both as regards the hours of the day and the seasons of the year during which the attendance of scholars is required, especially in agricultural villages and backward districts.

(24) Primary education be extended in backward districts, especially in those inhabited mainly by aboriginal races, by the instrumentality of the department pending the creation of school boards, or by specially liberal grants-in-aid to those who are willing to set up and maintain schools.

(25) All primary schools wholly maintained at the cost of the school-boards, and all primary schools that are aided from the same fund and are not registered as special schools, be understood to be open to all castes and classes of the community.

(26) Such a proportion between special and other primary schools be maintained in each school-district as to ensure a proportionate provision for the education of all classes.

(27) Assistance be given to schools and orphanages, in which poor children are taught reading, writing, and counting, with or without manual work.

(28) Primary education be declared to be that part of the whole system of public instruction which possesses an almost exclusive claim on local funds set apart for education, and a large claim on provincial revenues.

(29) Both Municipal and Local Self Government Boards keep a separate school fund.

(30) The municipal school fund consist of—

(a) a fair proportion of municipal revenues, to be fixed in each case by the Local Government.

(b) The fees levied in schools wholly maintained at the cost of the municipal school fund.

(c) Any assignment that may be made to the municipal school fund from the local funds.

(d) Any assignment from provincial fund.

(e) Any other funds that may be entrusted to the municipalities for the promotion of education.

(f) Any unexpended balance of the school fund from previous years.

(31) The Local Board's school fund consist of—

(a) A distinct share of the general local fund, which share shall not be less than a minimum proportion to be prescribed for each Province.

(b) The fees levied in schools wholly maintained at the cost of the school-fund.

(c) Any contribution that may be assigned by municipal boards.

(d) Any assignment made from provincial funds.

(e) Any other funds that may be entrusted to the local boards for the promotion of education.

(f) Any unexpended balance of the school-fund from previous years.

(32) The general control over primary school expenditure be vested in the school-boards, whether municipal or rural, which may now exist or may hereafter be created for self-government in each Province.

(33) The first appointment of school masters in municipal or board schools be left to the town or district boards, with the proviso that the masters be certificated or approved by the Department, and their subsequent promotion or removal be regulated by the boards, subject to the approval of the Department.

(34) The cost of maintaining or aiding primary schools in each school district, and the construction and repair of board-school-houses, be charged against the municipal or local board-school-fund so created.

(35) The vernacular, in which instruction shall be imparted in any primary school, maintained by any municipal or local board, be determined by the school committee of management, subject to revision by the municipal or local boards: provided that if there be any dissenting minority in the community, who represent a number of pupils sufficient to form one or more separate classes or schools, it shall be incumbent on the Department to provide for the establishment of such classes or schools, and it shall be incumbent on such municipal or local board to assign to such classes or schools a fair proportion of the whole assignable funds.

(36) Municipal and Local Boards administering funds in aid of primary schools adopt the rules prescribed by the Department for aiding such schools, and introduce no change therein without the sanction of the Department.

These recommendations are very important. We will in the present article draw attention to the question of funds. In the first place it is recommended that the first charge on provincial funds assigned for primary education will be the cost of its direction and inspection, and the provision of adequate Normal schools. This is as a matter of course. But how are the schools to be maintained? It is proposed that "primary education be declared to be that part of the whole system of public instruction which possesses an almost exclusive claim on local funds set apart for education, and a large claim on provincial revenues." This means that local funds must be set apart for education. In Bombay, Madras, and the N. W. P. school or education cess is levied, but in Bengal this has not been considered necessary, as the voluntary contributions here yield more than the cesses in the other Provinces. Is it intended to levy an education cess in Bengal? The Commission recommend that "both Municipal and Local Self-Government Boards keep a separate school-fund; the municipal school-fund consists of—(a) a fair proportion of municipal revenues, to be fixed in each case by the Local Government." Contributions from the municipal funds to schools are voluntary; are they to be made now compulsory? We have always said that the municipal fund is not sufficient to meet its legitimate calls; roads, drains, and water supply are in not a few towns utterly neglected for want of adequate funds, but if they are to be absolutely charged with the maintenance of schools, the sanitary works must be starved. Take for instance the case of the Municipality of Krishnagur. Its sanitary condition is most deplorable, because it has not money to provide for a proper system of drainage. It also needs good drinking water. But if it is to provide for the maintenance of primary schools first, where is the money to come from for the sanitary requirements of the Municipality? The Commission next recommend—"that the Local Board's school-fund consist of (a) a distinct share of the general local fund, which shares shall not be less than a minimum proportion to be prescribed for each Province." Again, "that the cost of maintaining or aiding primary schools in each school-district, and the construction and repair of board-school houses, be charges against the municipal or local board-school fund so created." This means that a school fund must be created under each municipal and local self-government board. We have already said that the contributions from the municipal fund to schools are voluntary, and local funds in Bengal are not applicable to purposes of education. The principal local fund in Bengal is the road cess. It is paid by the zemindars and ryots for local roads, and it would be a breach of faith if this special fund contributed by a special section of the community were made applicable to purposes of education. The recommendations made by the Commission cannot be carried out, unless legislation be made to give effect to them. As far as Bengal is concerned, if these recommendations are to be carried out, it will necessitate the imposition of a school cess. When the Education Commission was first appointed, we had a latent suspicion that it might result in additional taxation. Our fear seems to be in a fair way to be realised. We do yet hope that the Government will not burden the people with fresh taxation for education.—Hindoo Patriot.

MR. SEYMOUR KEAY AND THE "DECCAN TIMES."

The Allahabad paper learns from the Deccan that a cause célèbre is likely to result from a quarrel between Mr. Seymour Keay and the Deccan Times. That paper recently published a letter making serious allegations against Mr. Keay's character. "In particular," the Pioneer says, "it was stated that by skilful preparation and manipulation Mr. John Seymour Keay substituted one document for another taken by him from the hand of a native who could not read English, and caused that native, in the belief that he was signing the original document, which had been given to him, to sign the substituted document, whereby the banking firm of Poorun Mull suffered to the extent of many thousand rupees. These were facts, it was added, well known in the bazaars of Hyderabad, but in all probability not to the English investing public. Mr. Keay demanded an apology and the writer's name, threatening legal proceedings in default. The editor refuses to comply, asserting the good faith and accuracy of the correspondent, and also promises to give fuller details of Mr. Keay's career in Hyderabad in a future issue. Some startling disclosures in bazaar financing are anticipated, and considerable excitement prevails, our correspondent says, concerning the pending lawsuit, for which Mr. Keay, it is said, has retained eminent counsel from Bombay."—Bombay Gazette.

IS SIMLA RESPONSIBLE FOR LORD RIPON'S FOLLY?

We quote the following remarks from the Madras Mail as to the impossibility of a Government, which resides two-thirds of the year on the hills, being in any way able to estimate the true feelings and wants of the people; and we would point out that the very fact of such ignorance should render the Government all the more dependent on the opinions of its officers who spend their lives in the districts, but whose views regarding native jurisdiction are at present being set at nought. The Mail says:—

"The gulf between rulers and the ruled in India has been widened since the Supreme Government made Simla its usual home. In former days the Governor General and those around him lived in the plains in the midst of the people whose destinies they were directing. The disadvantages of residence (with a large income) in the plains was compensated for by the acquisition of knowledge of, and sympathy with, the wants of the people. The Governor General, if a wise man, made himself easily accessible to his countrymen and his native fellow-subjects. He had the opportunity of perpetually gauging his own ignorance, and he may have frequently been awed by realisation of the immense responsibility incurred in governing India on Western principles. Those around him came into daily contact with native as well as European thought, learnt what would be a good or bad thing for the Government to do, and were warned not to be wise in their own conceit. But now all is changed. There is no longer touch between the Viceroy and his entourage and the public. The Viceroy comes out a griffin, and remains a 'griff.' The Law Member keeps him in countenance; and the other members of his Executive Council grow out of, or gradually forget, their personal experiences in the plains below, where they lived, and moved, and had their being in what seems to them very distinct days. The Ilbert Bill is an example of the mischief that results from the loss of touch between the Government and the public. It has exposed in a glaring manner the ignorance of the Government, both as to the wants of the natives and as to the opinions of officials. It was a thoroughly unstatesmanlike measure that would never have been dreamt of but for the moral degeneracy that is the outcome of Simla. The proposal of highly remunerated officials, who pusillanimously flee away to Simla, and there remain, to expose their countrymen in the plains to danger in order mainly that the Government should be applauded in England for its Liberal policy, is evidence of a degradation that may well alarm all who are exposed to the pernicious influence of the Himalayan Capua."

INDIAN MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

(From the Bombay Gazette, Dec. 21, 1883.)

Sir Donald Stewart and staff will leave Calcutta by steamer for Madras on Jan. 6, thence proceeding direct to Bangalore for the camp of exercise. When the manoeuvres are over, His Excellency will visit Secunderabad, and possibly Puna, returning to Calcutta early in February.

A correspondent writes from Belgaum:—"His Excellency the Commander in Chief (General Hardinge) and staff are expected to arrive in Belgaum from the Kanara District on the 20th instant, on a tour of inspection in the Southern Mahratta country. A review of all the troops in garrison will be held about the end of the present week, after which His Excellency proposes visiting Dharwar, Kolhapur, and Kaladghi. General regret is felt here at the approaching departure of the Royal Irish Fusiliers, who leave early next month en route to England. During its three years' stay in Belgaum this fine regiment has been universally liked in the station, and has won golden opinions from the natives as well. Both officers and men will be very much missed by all classes. Their splendid band has been a prominent feature of all our social entertainments, and will long be remembered as one of the best that ever visited it."

The detachment of Bengal Sappers told off for the Aka expedition, left Calcutta by train on the evening of Dec. 15. The half battery (Mountain) from Kohat is timed to arrive in Calcutta to-day, and leave to-morrow. Captain Shirres commands the gunners, who are mostly men trained to active service during the Afghan War.

The military headquarters staff of the Eastern Frontier district are being moved to Tezpur or to Balipara. Brigadier General Sale Hill, C.B., Deputy Surgeon General J. J. Clarke, and Deputy Assistant Adjutant General G. A. Way have, it is stated, already proceeded to Tezpur.

Colonel M. G. Clerk has been confirmed in command of Fort Ohuna.

Colonel R. G. Rogers, C.B., formerly of the 20th P.N.I., and at present commanding at Jullundur, succeeds to the station command of Delhi, vacated last week by Colonel M. Hunter.

The following Bombay officers are directed to attend the Bangalore camp of exercise:—Brig. Gen. Gillespie, C.B., commanding the Nussarabad Brigade; Col. H. S. Anderson, 1st Regiment N.I. (Grenadiers); Lieut. Col. H. Hallows, 2nd Battalion East Yorkshire Regiment; Major G. C. Hogg, Poona Horse; Major G. F. Willoughby, 3rd Light Cavalry; and Capt. A. W. Proudfoot, 9th N.I.

The following postings of Royal Artillery officers have been made:—Major A. H. Murray from Wazirabad to Umballa, to join I Battery, A Brigade; Major M. A. Chaldecott, from Umballa to Wazirabad, to join M Battery, 3rd Brigade; and Lieutenant H. H. Rogers, from Dinapore to Umballa, to join No. 7 Battery, 1st Brigade, Northern Division.

Major Teale, Calcutta Volunteer Rifles, has been granted one month's privilege leave.

The following appointments have been made in the Eastern Bengal Railway Volunteer Rifle Corps:—Captain William Innes to be Major Commandant, vice T. Hindmarsh, resigned; Lieutenant Walter Raleigh Haughton to be Captain, vice W. Innes; and Mr. Charles Foster Chadburn to be Lieutenant, vice Haughton.

Captain R. P. Sandeman, 10th Hussars, has been ordered to join the Hythe course, commencing on March 1, 1884.

The following postings have been made:—Captain Purchas, South Lancashire; Captain Strong, Scottish Rifles; Captain Robinson and Lieut. Willmott, Northumberland Fusiliers; Lieut. Fisher, Norfolk; Major Russell and Captain Couper, East Surrey; and Lieut. Moseley, Lincolnshire—all to the 2nd battalions of their regiments; Captain Haines, Royal Warwickshire, Captain Vance, Leinster, and Lieut. de Berry, Royal Irish Fusiliers, to the 1st battalions.

The following Royal Engineer officers, now in England, have been placed under orders for duty in the Bengal Presidency:—Captains S. M. Kirke and A. Heathcote, Lieut. W. M. Ellis, W. R. Morton, E. M. B. Newman, and H. M. Chapman.

Captain A. Bannon, 39th Bengal Native Infantry, is about to proceed on furlough out of India for two years.

Captain M. K. Martin, 2nd Bengal Cavalry, has been appointed second transport officer to the Aka expedition.

Lieutenant E. H. J. Reay, Wiltshire Regiment, has been removed to the 2nd Battalion of his regiment.

Lieutenant O. E. Wheeler, 2nd Battalion Leicestershire Regiment, has been appointed paid Attache in the Intelligence Branch, Quartermaster General's Department, vice Lieutenant J. M. Grierson, Royal Artillery, who proceeds to England to join the Staff College.

Lieutenant H. F. S. Ramsden, Military Accounts Department, Madras, has been transferred to Calcutta for duty at that station.

Lieutenant St. G. L. Steele, of the same regiment, has been placed in charge of the transport depot at Lucknow, vice Lieut. Nedham, who has proceeded to Calcutta.

Lieutenant A. D. Enriquez, 16th N. I., has succeeded Capt. Montanaro as Adjutant of the regiment.

Lieutenants J. G. Hunter and G. S. Ommaney have been appointed Adjutant and Quartermaster of the 10th N.I.

The services of Lieutenant G. E. Bryant, Royal Engineers, have been replaced at the disposal of His Excellency the Commander in Chief.

Lieutenant Broughton, 2nd Battalion, the Dorsetshire Regiment, has joined the Pay Examiner's Office, Bengal, for second portion of his preliminary training for the Army Pay Department.

Surgeon W. Webb, in temporary medical charge of the 2nd Central India Horse and Brigade Surgeon J. Browne will do duty in the Meerut and Allahabad Commands respectively. Surgeon J. Armstrong succeeds to the permanent medical charge of the 25th N. I., vice Surgeon Spey deceased.

Dr. Ronald Blaney is gazetted Honorary Surgeon of the Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps.

The 10th Hussars are under orders to leave Lucknow, en route for England, on Jan. 28.

SUICIDE OF A SOLDIER.—A correspondent writes from Sitapore, Dec. 10:—We have just seen another melancholy instance of the baneful consequence of allowing soldiers unlimited access to their ammunition. Private Frederick Murray, of the 2nd Lincolnshire Regiment, committed suicide here on Saturday (Dec. 8), under most painful circumstances, during a fit of temporary insanity. He had been very depressed in spirits for some little time past, but his comrades had noticed nothing sufficient to warrant them in reporting his condition to the authorities. He had been on guard the previous night and spent the morning cleaning his accoutrements. It is supposed that he had some bad news from home by the mail which had just arrived, as he was noticed to destroy the letter which he received, but his barrack-room companions, some of whom were present at the time, little expected the terrible tragedy on which he was bent, and suddenly—even before he was discovered to be making the attempt—he placed his rifle to his mouth and blew his brains out. It is not many weeks ago since a comrade of this poor man, while under the influence of drink, attempted his life in a similar manner, and was only saved by a miracle, through the bravery of a non-commissioned officer, who, at the risk of his own life, wrenched the loaded rifle from his hands just in time to prevent the awful deed. Can nothing be done to prevent such a temptation being placed in the way of insanes, hard drinkers, and men of violent tempers? Those in command, if they only had permission, could easily arrange to withdraw ammunition from the men in such a way as not to interfere with its being at hand whenever it was really required.—Pioneer.

THE BANGALORE CAMP OF EXERCISE.—Captain Henry, R.E., deputy assistant quartermaster general, Ceded district, now on special duty at the Bangalore camp of exercise, is up to his ears in work, personally superintending the laying out of the various positions. He is, for the time being, permanently quartered on the scene of operations, and has enough to do with the direction of the large number of lascars who have been set to work, some of them having been indentured for from Nagpore and Hyderabad. About 420 tents have been pitched already, and things are getting into proper form rapidly. The 14th M.N.I., from Dorunda, reached the camp on the morning of the 14th inst., and have by this time relieved the 4th Pioneers, who were temporarily posted there, but have now been directed to return to headquarters on being relieved by the 14th Regiment. Major Begbie, Instructor of Army Signalling, has decided that there are to be eight signalling stations at the camp, and the draft rules for their working have been approved by H. E. Sir Frederick Roberts.—Madras Times.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 10, 1884.

THE ENGLISH DUTY ON INDIAN SILVER PLATE.

PERHAPS a more contemptuous snub has never been administered by one department of the Imperial Government to another, than that administered by Mr. Leonard Courtney, on behalf of Mr. Gladstone and the Lords of the Treasury, to Lord Ripon and the Government of India, in the letter which closes the correspondence (published this week) on the English Duty on Indian Silver Plate. We reproduce elsewhere the Times' summary of this correspondence, which has apparently been obtained from India; and it is worthy of note that the Parliamentary paper, issued almost simultaneously from the India Office, which was moved for by Sir George Balfour last May, has been compiled on the principle of "stellar space," invented by Mr. Chamberlain—for it contains none of the racy passages to which we refer.

There is an old proverb to the effect that "when rogues fall out, honest men come by their rights." Of course we only apply the terms of this proverb to Mr. Gladstone and Lord Ripon in the most Parliamentary and Pickwickian sense. The difference of opinion between these two great and shining lights mainly has reference to the character of the import duties on English cotton-goods, recently abolished by Lord Ripon; and to those who, with ourselves, steadfastly opposed that mean policy of clap-trap which sold Indian interests for the Lancashire vote, the letters now published are eminently satisfactory. Lord Ripon having—very justly, as we think—cited the abolition of those cotton duties as an act of grace which gives India the right to demand a quid pro quo from England, Mr. Gladstone twits the Indian Government with having abolished the cotton duties merely because they were protective, and therefore loathsome to such staunch Free-traders as Lord Ripon and Major Baring. Here, it must be admitted, the engineer is hoist with his own petard; for the public were undoubtedly under the impression that this certainly was the cloak under which Lord Ripon's Government concealed its little electioneering dodges. But however this may be, poor Lord Ripon promptly falls into the trap laid for him by the Prime Minister; and a long letter is written from Simla to Lord Kimberley, in which it is proved to demonstration that the Indian cotton duties were anything but protective of Indian industry! At the time of the abolition, we and all the other opponents of the measure—including the majority of the English and the whole of the Native press of India—vainly urged this very contention on the consideration of Lord Ripon and Major Baring. The attitude of the Government of India at that time most certainly deserves the utmost reprobation, now that the truth has been allowed to leak out; still, it seems hardly decent that the castigation should come from Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Courtney, and it must be admitted that the castigation is as severe as it possibly could have been made if it had proceeded from one of Lord Ripon's most hostile critics. There are Mr. Courtney's ultra-sarcastic words, referring to the imprudent confessions of the Indian Government:—"I am directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to request you to inform the Secretary of State for India in Council that my Lords have read with interest the remarks by the Government of India on the protective character of the former duties on cotton imported into India. It would not be seemly for my Lords to controvert the views expressed by the Government of India on the objects of their fiscal arrangements." This is delicious.

THE HISTORICAL INTERVIEW BETWEEN LORD KIMBERLEY AND MR. ATKINS.

We reproduce in another column an article from the Madras Mail, on the mystery that Lord Kimberley has allowed to gather round the famous interview to which his Lordship invited Mr. Atkins, the Anglo-Indian working-men's delegate. We trust that this article, and several others to the same effect which have appeared in the Anglo-Indian Press, will be brought to the notice of the Secretary of State; and that they will convince his Lordship of the impropriety, not to say the unfairness, of permitting the history of that interview to remain in the unsatisfactory state in which it now is. The historical importance of the interview, and of the message which Lord Kimberley then sent to "the people in India," is evident on the face of it, even on the Secretary of State's own showing; for whether he "laid stress" on the statement or not, it is admitted that something was said which implied that the Viceroy's Council could throw out the Ilbert Bill if it chose to do so. The message having been volunteered by Lord Kimberley, the public clearly has a right to know what were its exact terms; and yet his Lordship has hitherto refused to reply to Mr. Atkins's challenge to state what the message really was, and has contented himself with an arbitrary and high-handed contradiction of the strict accuracy of Mr. Atkins's version. The Madras Mail well points out that, so far as the public can judge from the facts before it, all the probabilities of accuracy seem to be on Mr. Atkins's side; while the discrepancy between Lord Kimberley's two statements—first, that he had "laid no stress" on a phrase, and secondly, that he had not used the phrase at all—is one that clearly requires explanation. That explanation the public will be quite ready to accept—just as it is ready to accept Mr. Atkins's version, until that version is shown to be erroneous. There is no such imperious personage in the world as your highly-placed Radical; but on the other hand, there is no community less likely than the Anglo-Indian to be impressed by the theory that the off-hand contradiction of such a highly-placed personage is sufficient to demolish the reputation of a humbler individual, by mere weight of rank or position, and in spite of the evidence of probabilities.

THE CALCUTTA EXHIBITION.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

FIRST LETTER—GENERAL REVIEW.

ALTHOUGH the exhibition has been now open for a fortnight, it is still in a state of incompleteness. It is, therefore, too early to attempt to give a fair idea of the exhibits in most of the departments, as in a few weeks many of the courts will assume an entirely different aspect. The unpacking and arrangement of goods are still being briskly carried on in most of the departments, and it is not too much to say that probably another month will elapse before a fair verdict can be given as to the success of Mr. Joubert's undertaking as a representative collection of the industries of the world.

From a financial standpoint it will probably be a success, as the low price of admission has attracted great crowds of natives, who appear to enjoy to the utmost the collection of strange objects offered for their inspection. But though it is from natives that the greater part of admission money will be received, this is merely on account of their numerical superiority, and is not due to any unpopularity of the exhibition amongst Europeans. Indeed, both Anglo-Indians and the large foreign community here express themselves as being greatly pleased with what our American cousins would call the "show."

To compare this exhibition with the celebrated ones of Paris, Vienna, or Philadelphia, would be unfair, though, no doubt, had more time been given, many who are now conspicuous by their absence would have contributed interesting and important exhibits. On the whole, the general opinion here is one of satisfaction that so much has been done in so short a time, and with this opinion everyone who has seen anything of the difficulties which have had to be surmounted, must concur.

It is not difficult to grasp the general arrangements of the exhibits with the aid of a map, which is given away in the "Official Daily Programme." This high-sounding publication consists of the before-mentioned map, the menu at the restaurant, and advertisements innumerable. A study of the catalogue is not recommended, it is a model of uselessness, and will reduce the most clear-headed to confusion in about ten minutes. We are, however, promised better things in another edition, and an index, which is sorely needed. At present finding a thing in the catalogue is no aid to finding it in the exhibition; and having found it in the exhibition, it is impossible to find it in the catalogue. The exhibition naturally divides itself into two parts, that in the Museum and the surrounding temporary buildings, and that in the enclosure on the Maidan. They communicate by a foot-bridge over the Chowringhee-road. The former part contains all the European and foreign exhibits, while the latter is devoted to India and the adjacent countries, and to the machinery and iron work.

Crossing the bridge from the Museum into the latter section, and passing under the magnificent carved stone arch from Gwalior, the visitor finds himself in the chief building of the exhibition. It contains the exhibits from all parts of India, and the Calcutta Court, which naturally occupies a considerable space. This building has also side aisles, if we may so describe them, in which are displayed the contributions of neighbouring eastern countries. Here too, we find a collection of instruments, maps and views contributed by the Survey Department, also carriages, thermantidotes, and other things, too numerous to mention here. The Indian courts are wonderfully attractive, and are hung with the many fabrics produced in each province. The building, though only temporary, is in good taste and appropriately decorated.

Passing through this, we come to the small but interesting collection of military objects from Dum Dum and elsewhere, and further on the machinery shed, which is near the side of a tank. This has been utilised by the erection of pumping machinery of various kinds, for driving which there are both steam engines and windmills. There is also a temporary railway of narrow gauge, which will be running in a few days.

Round the outside of the Indian courts is a most interesting collection of native-made models of agricultural and other implements, used in different parts of the country.

Of the other section of the Exhibition it will be sufficient to say that the British and Australian exhibits occupy the largest part of it. A detailed description of the various courts in both sections will be given as they are completed.

HOME NEWS.

TRANSFERS.—The India Council notify the sale of Rs. 5,00,000 of bills on Calcutta at 1s. 7½d., of Rs. 8,20,000, in transfers on Calcutta at 1s. 7 9-16d., of Rs. 2,50,000 in transfers on Bombay at 1s. 7 9-16d., and of Rs. 1,25,000 in transfers, also on Bombay at 1s. 7 19-32d. per rupee. The total amounts specially allotted is thus Rs. 16,95,000 in addition to Rs. 58,15,000 sold on Wednesday.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.—The half-yearly general meeting was held on Thursday at the City Terminus Hotel. Mr. R. W. Crawford presided, and, in moving the adoption of the report, thought that they would agree with him that the result of the six months' working had been satisfactory. They had earned a dividend of £1 12s. 6d. per cent. beyond the £2 guaranteed on the deferred annuity capital. This was as compared with a surplus dividend of £1 11s. per cent. in the corresponding period of 1882, and of £1 9s. and £1 7s. per cent. in the same periods of 1881 and 1880 respectively. As regarded the next half-year, they expected that the excess dividend would be 10s. per cent. as against 13s. in the same period of last year. The line had been so circumstanced that they had been enabled to make great profits, but he did not think they could expect to go on increasing the excess dividend; indeed, he thought they would have good ground for satisfaction if they were able to maintain the present rate and do justice to their customers. Their locomotive and rolling stock had been kept in good working order and repair. They had endeavoured to get the locomotives which had been condemned replaced as quickly as possible, but they had obtained only four of a total of 65. With regard to the cost of maintenance of the permanent way, it was more likely to increase than to decrease, some portion of the line having been laid thirty years ago. For this outlay, however, they would be fully compensated. As to the reduction of the third-class fare from 3 to 2½ pence, he was glad to state that the increased number of passengers carried had given them nearly the same amount of receipts as before, with the higher fare. An outcry had been raised respecting their charges for goods, as to which he reminded them that in the last report special attention was called to the low rate at which wheat and seeds were carried by them. This traffic was conveyed a distance of 954 miles at a charge of ¾d. a mile. He defended the company from the remarks of Mr. Pender, M.P., at the late meeting of the Oude and Rohilkund Company as to the limited terminal accommodation given by the company to the Oude Company, and stated that they were now completing works at Howrah which would give them a river frontage of 2,000 ft. This would remove any difficulty on the score complained of. The bridge over the Hughli would be opened in two or three years, and it would then be seen what effect that would have in increasing the traffic, and whether any further accommodation would have to be provided by them. The cost of the projected working at Howrah, was about £100,000. It had been stated that £3,000,000 was about to be expended by some parties on dock accommodation in India. If that were done he feared that shippers would find that they would have to pay increased charges. Sir Macdonald Stephenson seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

OUDE AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY COMPANY.—The directors announce that they are prepared to receive tenders for debenture bonds of the company to the amount of £500,000, bearing interest at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum, principal and interest guaranteed by the Secretary of State for India in Council. The debenture bonds, in common with £3,000,000 debenture capital already issued, are a charge upon the undertaking of the company prior to all other stock or shares, but without any priority among the holders. The bonds will be to bearer, and will run for a period of three, five, or seven years, from the 24th January, 1884. Tenders must be made before 12 o'clock on Wednesday, the 16th inst. The bonds will be allotted to the highest bidders in the order of the prices offered, provided such prices are not below the minimum price fixed by the directors, with the concurrence of Her Majesty's Secretary of State, which will be enclosed in a sealed envelope, and placed upon the table previously to the opening of the tenders. Should the tenders, at and above such minimum price exceed the amount required a pro rata distribution of any balance will be made.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—The tenders for Rs. 50,00,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—In Bills on Calcutta, Rs. 10,40,000, average rate 1s. 7½d. In telegraphic transfers—Calcutta, Rs. 20,75,000, average rate 1s. 7½d.; Bombay, Rs. 19,75,000, average rate 1s. 7½d.; and Madras, Rs. 3,25,000, average rate 1s. 7½d., or a total of Rs. 54,15,000. Tenders for bills at 1s. 7½d. received in full, and for telegraphic transfers on all Presidencies at 1s. 7 17-32d. 50 per cent., and above in full. Beyond the above amounts four lakhs of transfers were specially allotted, two on Calcutta and two on Madras, at 1s. 7 9-16d. Between April and Tuesday bills and transfers were sold for Rs. 13,53,14,650, realising £10,978,866.—Yesterday tenders for Rs. 50,00,000 in bills on India and telegraphic transfers were received at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—in bills, on Calcutta, Rs. 1,78,000, average rate 1s. 7½d.; and Bombay, Rs. 10,10,000, average rate 1s. 7½d.; in telegraphic transfers, on Calcutta, Rs. 19,50,000, average rate 1s. 7½d.; and Bombay, Rs. 10,10,000, average rate 1s. 7½d.; tenders for bills at 1s. 7½d., and for telegraphic transfers at 1s. 7 17-32d., and above received in full. Later on in the day the Council notified the following special sales:—Rs. 1,25,000 in bills on Bombay at 1s. 7½d.; Rs. 3,00,000 of transfers, also on Bombay, at 1s. 7 17-32d.; Rs. 3,50,000 in transfers on Calcutta, at 1s. 7 17-32d.; Rs. 3,50,000 in transfers on Madras, at 1s. 7 17-32d.; Rs. 50,000 in transfers on Calcutta, at 1s. 7 9-16d.; and Rs. 1,00,000 in transfers on Bombay, at 1s. 7 9-16d. Altogether the day's allotments amounted to Rs. 54,13,000. Between April 1 and Tuesday night the total sales had reached Rs. 14,29,24,650, and realised £11,598,578.

WORKS BY

COLONEL G. B. MALLESON, C.S.I.

FINAL FRENCH STRUGGLES IN INDIA AND THE INDIAN SEAS.

Including an account of the Capture of the Isles of France and Bourbon. Colonel G. B. MALLESON, C.S.I. London: By W. H. Allen and Co. 1878

"How India escaped from the government of Prefects and Sub-Prefects to fall under that of Commissioners and Deputy-Commissioners; why the Penal Code of Lord Macaulay reigns supreme instead of a Code Napoleon; why we are not looking on helplessly from Mahé, Karikal, and Pondicherry, while the French are ruling all over Madras and spending millions of francs in attempting to cultivate the slopes of the Neigherries, may be learnt from this modest volume. Colonel Malleison is always painstaking and generally accurate: his style is transparent, and he never loses sight of the purpose with which he commenced to write."—Saturday Review

BY CAPTAIN FRED BURNABY,

Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cocker's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa, with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

NEW NOVELS AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.

AGNES MORAN. A Story of Innocence and Experience. By THOMAS A. PINKERTON. 13 vols.

"Mr. Pinkerton's characters are real and consistent, and the plot, although elaborate, is clear and intelligible. The mystery of Agnes Moran's father is melodramatic, yet neither forced or far-fetched. All this goes to establish the fact that Mr. Pinkerton, while retaining his humorous powers and philosophic fancies, can yet compose an elaborate dramatic tale, and skillfully follow the growth and development of character."—Daily News.

TAY. A Novel. By the Rev. W. O. PELL. 1 vol.

"Tay" is the name of a most delightfully humorous creature who is at once heroine and autobiographer. The author has a quick perception and a large fund of humour. It is a delightful story, and very far above the level of ordinary novels."—Whitehall Review.

THE JEWEL IN THE LOTOS.

A novel, by MARY AGNES TINKER. 1 vol.

"This novel has very considerable merit. It is a story in which there is a good deal of adventure and some sensationalism. There is also much of genuine feminine sweetness and tenderness, and the reader will not fail to be greatly interested in it."—Scotsman.

"A perfect woman, nobly planned, is the heroine of this remarkably clever book—purity of thought, and breadth of ideas mark every line the author writes. She is equally powerful as descriptive, and her descriptions are photographic in their clearness, and we must look upon this novel of hers as undoubtedly a chef d'œuvre."—Whitehall Review.

THE DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS. W. THORNHILL & CO., Sole Agents.

The Reputation of the "DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS," originally introduced into England by W. THORNHILL and CO., is now permanently established. The success of their enterprise has surpassed their most sanguine expectations. "DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS" afford the only instance hitherto attained of the absolutely perfect representation of the real diamonds by artificial means. These remarkable stones, by their purity and brilliancy, support comparison with diamonds of the first water, and are undistinguishable therefrom. They are infinitely superior in every respect to real diamonds of inferior quality. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS were exposed side by side with real diamonds of great value in the Paris Exhibition, 1878, and were awarded a Prize Medal and the highest recompense awarded to imitations. They attracted universal attention and admiration, and forthwith became much in vogue with the grande monde and elite of society. They are now worn at the Court balls, and upon all occasions in London, Paris, and St. Petersburg. They are invaluable for intermixing with and replacing parures and other costly diamond ornaments. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS can be worn at all times, even by daylight, with confidence and absolute security. They possess the penetrating brilliancy and lustre peculiar to real diamonds, and the concessionaires guarantee the surprise and pleasure of purchasers. The perfection thus attained is the result of investigations and experiments extending over two generations. The cost, nevertheless, of the DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS is about 1-300th that of real diamonds.

THE VOICE OF INDIA. A NEW MAGAZINE INTENDED TO GIVE EXPRESSION TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect it is now desired to remedy, by publishing monthly in Bombay a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which will provide a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. It is hoped that the Voice of India will thus give forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine will advocate no views of its own. It will seek only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it is believed that the writings thus brought before the English public will be found to be characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally be practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances will from time to time be set forth; but it is a policy of prudence no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be welcomed by all Members of Parliament desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in clubs, reading-rooms, libraries, and institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 270 millions of our fellow-subjects.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 16, 1884.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Dec. 28; Madras and Allahabad, Dec. 26; Calcutta, Dec. 25:

Near to Reuter, Mr. Ilbert is that one of Lord Ripon's friends from whom his Excellency may most devoutly pray to be saved. The bent of Mr. Ilbert's mind is exactly that which is most certain to render him at once despised and disliked in India. Devoted to paradox, never so happy as when defending a preposterous thesis, and showing very considerable skill in these little or academical exercises, Mr. Ilbert brings to the grave discussions of the Viceroy's Council those airs and graces which have doubtless won him renown in many a debating society. Now, there is probably nothing so utterly exasperating to earnest men, immersed in the absorbing study of that highest aim, the welfare of the Empire, than to be irritated by the superficial smartness of thesis-mongers. And after the ten months of the miserable Ilbert Bill controversy, it is difficult to imagine anything more infuriating to the Anglo-Indian public than Mr. Ilbert's speech.

LORD RIPON fell heavily on poor Mr. Thomas with the inevitable text, "Righteousness exalteth a nation." After the Reuter's messages and the other little events of the campaign, it was, of course, an understood thing that this text would have to be trotted out. It will in future be the regulation "gag," à propos of Kilmainham Treaties, Reuter taradiddles, et hoc genus omne. But that is no consolation for Mr. Thomas, whose speech seems to have been a particularly honest and straightforward one.

A LETTER that appeared in Tuesday's Times, from Messrs. Johnson and Springthorpe, opposes the abolition of the English import duty on Indian silver goods—apparently on the ground that the present duty acts as an efficient protection to English manufacturers and workmen. After the lofty sarcasms of Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Courtney, directed against the hypocrisy of the Indian Government in the matter of the abolition of the Indian import duties on English cotton goods, the naïveté of this confession is really refreshing.

WE trust that Anglo-Indians will give a warm support to the efforts of Mr. Watherston, to obtain fair-play for Indian silver goods in the English market. This is exactly one of those questions which would be happily settled by the establishment of an Imperial Federation between England, India, and the Colonies.

THE serious illness of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal will be a matter of deep anxiety to a very large circle of friends and admirers, both public and private. We trust that the next news received may be of an amendment.

SHOULD Mr. Thompson be compelled to take leave, it may be presumed that the Government of India will abandon for the present all thought of proceeding further with the Bengal Tenancy Bill. And this presumption is greatly strengthened by the announcement of the Times correspondent that Mr. Bernard will act as Lieutenant Governor during Mr. Thompson's absence.

THE choice of a successor, whether temporary or permanent, to Mr. Rivers Thompson, lies between Sir Stuart Bayley and Mr. Bernard. Between two officers of such exceptional ability and such high character, it must be difficult for Lord Ripon and Lord Kimberley to make a selection. But if their choice has fallen on Mr. Bernard—whose solitary weak point is his lack of familiarity with district work in Bengal, his early service having been mainly passed up-country—it may be taken for granted that it is not intended to push through a measure which could hardly be decently mooted, except under the auspices and with the concurrence of a Lieutenant Governor thoroughly acquainted with the detailed condition of every part of the Province.

THE Hindoo Patriot thus concludes an article on "Education in the Punjab":—

"Anything done to injure the cause of high education in the country would be a dire misfortune. Well does the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab say that the day of high education and culture in India has only begun to break. 'In the Punjab,' observes his Honour, 'we have scarcely the first streak of a dawn—one University to 22 millions of people, who furnish only 1,081 students. In Germany there are twenty-one Universities to a population of 45,000,000, or one to every 2,150,000. In Scotland the proportion is one to every 93,000. This comparison helps one to realise the abysmal darkness that as yet broods over India and not least over this part of it.' These observations we commend to those who think that the time has come when Government should withdraw its direct support and control of high education in India, leaving the field to private enterprise. The day is far distant when such a step could be taken without any serious detriment to the cause of education in this country."

THE Times of India gives the following obituary of the week ending Dec. 28:—Mr. Baba Gokhale, of Poona; the Rajah of Kolhapore; Mr. J. A. Gifford, of the Ouchterlony Valley, Neigherry Hills; Mr. W. Mc Tweedale, late Invalid Establishment, Bengal Cavalry.

MESSRS. W. NORMAN AND Co. give the following account of the Calcutta Tea Market for the week ending Dec. 25:—

"The sales held on the 20th comprised 11,277 chests, of which 11,217 were sold. Former prices were fully maintained, and the sale generally showed an upward tendency, without any quotable change in prices."

WE take the following report on the Calcutta Indigo Market for the same period, from the same authority:—

"Three public sales have been held since our last issue, at which 3,040 chests were offered, and 2,968 chests sold. By private contract the following small parcels only have been placed:—T. A. M., Bhowalpoore, Jounpore, 28 chests Rs. 225 per F. Md., and H. S. and Co., Doorgapore, Kishnaghur, 18 chests Rs. 275 per F. Md. The demand for fine and finest qualities has again been rather less brisk, and these descriptions may now be quoted fully Rs. 10 per mound below the highest rates ruling a fortnight ago. Middling to good consuming qualities also show a slight decline in value. The demand for Oudes, especially such as are suitable for American orders, has continued good, and they are generally Rs. 5 per mound higher than last week. The total quantity now disposed of is about 97,000 maunds, of which quantity 10,000 maunds are Lower Bengal, 34,500 Tirhoot, &c., 8,500 Benares, and 44,000 maunds from the North-West. The total quantity out of the market at the same date last year was about 81,000 maunds."

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

THE following is the official summary of the reports of the Agricultural Department on the state of the weather and prospects of the crops throughout India, for the week ending Dec 19:—

"Rain has fallen generally over the Madras Presidency, Mysore, and Coorg. Slight falls have also occurred in two districts of Assam, but none elsewhere. Harvesting continues in Madras, and the standing crops promise well. In Coorg the ripe paddy has suffered slightly from the unusual rain, which has, however, done good to backward crops. In Bombay cotton is attacked by blight in two districts, but rabi prospects are generally favourable. In the Berars, Hyderabad, Central India, and Rajputana the prospects are also favourable, but rain is needed for the rabi in Jaipur and Ulwar. Rabi sowings have been complete in the Punjab, and the crops are looking well, though rain is required. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh prospects are fair, but the rabi crops on unirrigated lands stand in need of rain. In the Central Provinces the weather is favourable, and prospects good. Last week's rain in Bengal while benefiting the rabi crops, has been unfavourable to rice, which, except in Eastern Bengal and Orissa, will yield much below the average. The rabi in Behar is reported to be suffering much from want of rain. In Burma the rice harvest is well advanced, and promises a good yield, though rain and floods have caused some loss in several districts. Late heavy rains have also much injured the crops in the Sylhet district of Assam. The public health is generally fair, but cholera is prevalent in parts of Madras. Prices are high in Bengal, and normal elsewhere."

The following is the Bengal report:—

"No rain fell in any part of the province during the week; the rain of the previous week was very beneficial to the rabi crops, but was somewhat injurious to the rice in places in Eastern Bengal; in Behar the rabi crops are suffering much from want of rain; rain is also still required for these crops in a few other parts of the province; the harvesting of rice is in full progress, and the crop is generally expected to yield from four to eight annas, and in certain localities even less than four annas; in Orissa and Eastern Bengal alone the outturn, as was previously reported, will be a fair one; 'high prices continue to prevail throughout the province in spite of the new rice coming into the market; fever is still prevalent in several districts, but in some it is said to be decreasing."

TELEGRAPHIC INTELLIGENCE.

The following is the usual weekly telegram from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, dated Jan. 13:—

"The Select Committee on the Ilbert Bill met for the first time yesterday. The sitting was a private one, and nothing has transpired as to what passed. A report will be presented on Friday next; and, as the rules of the Council require that the reports should lie on the table for a week, the Bill cannot be passed before the 25th instant.

"The debates held on the 4th and 7th inst. have been much discussed, Mr. Ilbert's speech, in particular, having been severely criticised. One newspaper terms it a 'dishonest and regrettable speech.' Another says of it:—

"The whole foundation and spirit of the Opposition are totally ignored by Mr. Ilbert: either deliberately, and knowingly, in supreme indifference to the fully expressed wishes of the community, or in ignorance which, if not assumed, is so amazing as to pass all understanding."

"A third, the Pioneer, a journal which is generally disposed to take a lenient view of the shortcomings of Government officials, calls it a 'petulant, ungracious, and an angry argument in favour of the principles of the proposed legislation;' and adds:—

"The effects of the whole speech, coupled with the extraordinary incidents which led to a postponement of the debate, cannot be but to rob the concession by which the Government has at last, it may be hoped, re-established the reign of peace, of all its grace and almost its utility. Lord Ripon has been unlucky in many respects; and not the least of his misfortunes is the presence of a legal member, who encourages his vagaries, backs up his obstinate resistance to wise advice, and presents all his mistakes in the most striking light, and the most unattractive garb."

"The main point in the Viceroy's speech was his admission that the terms of the present compromise were suggested by the Government, and not by the Opposition; and that the Government was absolutely bound by them. The angry tone of his concluding remarks, in which he attacked Mr. Thomas, is very generally condemned. Mr. Thomas, replying to Mr. Ilbert's depreciation of national prestige, had asked whether history showed any instance of a nation remaining great, solely by reason of the righteousness of its laws. Thereupon the Viceroy, quoting the text, 'Righteousness exalteth a nation,' rebuked Mr. Thomas in terms which showed that he entirely misapprehended that gentleman's speech. The Commander in Chief's speech calls for only one remark. He stated that no warning from the Indian Council, official or unofficial, had ever reached the Government of India; and as Lord Hartington, when speaking at Accrington, is reported to have said that the Council had warned him on the subject of the probable opposition, the public naturally asks why such warning was not transmitted to India. I need not now allude to more than one other point in the debate. I have only to call attention to the statement of the Lieutenant Governor, that the Bill, as about to be modified, will make very little difference in Bengal, and be practically a dead letter.

"The Lieutenant Governor is still very ill. His malady, which at first puzzled the doctors, is now pronounced to be an internal abscess. On Tuesday last he underwent an operation which gave him great relief; and since then he has been progressing favourably. It is not unlikely, however, that he may be obliged to take a short leave of absence, in which case Mr. Bernard will probably act as Lieutenant Governor.

"General Hill, with two mountain guns and some infantry, has advanced into the Akha country, and joined Major Beresford's advanced column. They hoped to reach the Akha Chief's village on the 6th instant. The march proves to be more difficult than was expected, owing to the thick jungle, and the numerous ravines which intersect the path. The special correspondent of the Englishman states that some cases of cholera have occurred among the force.

"The Lushais on the Cachar frontier are showing some signs of restlessness, and a wing of the 4th Native Infantry has been despatched from Calcutta to protect the district, in case of their becoming aggressive. It is not likely that this restlessness is in any way connected with the Akha troubles, as the two tribes are separated by the whole breadth of the province of Assam.

"The Commander in Chief has left Calcutta for the camp of exercise at Bangalore, where a large force is now assembled for the manoeuvres, under the command of Lieutenant General Sir F. S. Roberts.

"The Government of Bombay has published a long memorandum on the plague among cats, which appeared at Ahmednagar two years ago, and at Siroor last June. The Government seems to think that the plague may have some connection with the cholera, and invites opinions on the subject.

"The Municipality of Amritsar, the centre of the Sikh religion, has applied for an extension of the Compulsory Vaccination Act to that town. Should the prayer be granted, this will be the first application of the Act to the Punjab.

"The curious red glow after sunset, which seems to have attracted much attention in England was very marked throughout India during the months of October, November, and December, and is still occasionally seen.

"Sir Robert Sandeman left Khairpur for Panjour on the 2nd inst., after having composed several important frontier quarrels. The Sirdar Azad Khan, Chief of Khairpur, is accompanying him to Panjour, to meet Meer Mahomed Khan, Heir Apparent of the Khan of Khelat, and to arrange with him certain important matters pending between the two States. Khairpur occupies an important position. It is wedged in between Afghanistan, Persia, and Beloochistan, and its frontiers nearly touch the Helmund River. The late Ameer Shere Ali was a firm friend of Azad Khan, and assisted him with money and arms. The settlement now come to is a satisfactory one, and conducive to British interests.

"The survey party has made good progress, and will be able to add considerably to our knowledge of that portion of the frontier."

The following later telegram is dated Calcutta, Jan. 15:—

"General Hill attacked the Akhas on the 8th inst. At first they showed a determination to oppose the troops, but dispersed rapidly on being brought under artillery fire. Our loss was five men wounded. When the troops advanced up the hill they found a stockade and the Mehdi's village abandoned. One hundred of the Rifles will now advance to the Boora Gams, to negotiate for the surrender of the prisoners. The health of the troops is good, and the weather continues fine. The Viceroy will leave Calcutta for Hyderabad on the 28th inst."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS' PLUTARCH.*

MESSRS. W. H. ALLEN and Co. have just brought out a capital edition of Plutarch's "Lives," translated and illustrated. It is somewhat condensed, and in other ways rendered suitable for young people's reading, and it is attractively got up. We cannot imagine a more useful or more pleasing gift-book for the young; whilst, as a prize, it ought to find its way into every school. The earlier literature of England is full of allusions to the scenes and anecdotes of Plutarch, which was anciently more widely read than any other book in England; and for this reason alone, as well as for its other merits, it is a book that every young student of English should read.

CORRESPONDENCE.

SIR LAURENCE PEEL ON THE INDIAN ECCLESIASTICAL ESTABLISHMENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Archdeacon Baly's letter, which appeared in the Times a day or two ago, says fully and well all that it is necessary to say in explanation of the relation of Christian churches in India to the Indian Government and people of India. It is not difficult to find any where minds ready to receive the seeds of new doctrines. That which teaches a limited appropriation of State revenues to lay and State purposes only of a strictly temporal nature is in India neology, of which the past history of India shows no sign. It is not my intention, however, to engage in controversy about any political questions, but simply to narrate facts which fell under my own personal observation, when I was in India. The feeling of reverence entertained in India by natives towards God, though obscured by errors, is deep, and a man of God, in any religion is, in a manner, holy in their eyes. I well remember the proof of this which I had when following, in Calcutta, the remains of Archbishop Carew to the grave. All Calcutta seemed to turn out, to show their respect for that good man. He was a Catholic Prelate. Catholics, Protestants, Armenians, Jews, Parsees, Mahomedans, Hindoos, men of many races and many creeds came voluntarily forth, not to see a sight or a grand funeral, for such it was not, but simply to show their sorrow that there was in the world one man of God less; and thus they showed that there is in the world a common faith founded on divine love, underlying all diversities of opinion. I particularly watched the faces of the Hindoos and Mahomedans in that vast assemblage. Their thoughts appeared in their faces and did them honour. Earnestness and tender sorrow were universally visible amongst them. The Padre was a "bahut accha admi," so they thought and so they said. Wherever I have been in the East, wherever I have found one Padre doing his duty earnestly and treating the natives as objects of his solicitude, I have seen the same marks of approval. A Government of which the members, as some might think, neglected all religions alike from philosophical indifference to any but some scheme of human conception, would in the native eye, be simply an institution of the power or powers of evil. I have the honour to be, sir, your obedient servant,

LAURENCE PEEL.

THE "PIONEER" ON THE TENANCY BILL.

THE deliberations upon the Bengal Tenancy Bill are still proceeding, and it is impossible to say when they will come to an end, as many details are being exhaustively discussed by the Select Committee; but the chances of the Bill being passed during the current legislative session are daily becoming more remote. The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has suggested, we understand, the republication of the Bill as amended, and the appointment of a roving Commission to inquire how far its provisions are applicable to the particular circumstances of different localities. The Government certainly cannot be accused of undue haste in this most important matter of land legislation, and the Lieutenant Governor in particular is showing a marked desire to have the question thoroughly thrashed out before the Bill becomes law.

THE "PIONEER" ON COMMUNISTIC GOVERNMENT IN INDIA.

QUITE apart from any question of the merits or defects of the Bengal Tenancy Bill, the meeting at Calcutta last Saturday must be regarded as an event of no little importance. It is not because it revealed the dislike of the Bengal landholders to the measure, which everyone knew to exist before, and still less for the intrinsic value of the arguments brought forward that the protest is remarkable, but for the singular way in which one speaker after another attributed the legislation of which they were met to complain to the Radical tendencies of the Indian Government. The point was brought up again and again, and in no measured language. Dr. Rajendralala Mitra, the chairman, for example, is found saying:—"Unfortunately, the wave of Communism has invaded our shores from the far west, and engulfed some of our highest officials—our lawful guardians. The theory that the land of the country belongs to the people is dominant with them;" and other passages might be quoted from the speech in the same tenor. Rajah Sir Jotendro Mohun Tagore, who followed, used very similar language. His Honour the Lieutenant Governor had not approached the subject in the impartial way which they had a right to expect from the responsible guardians of the country. "Unfortunately," he is reported to have said "Radicalism has taken such a strong hold on the minds of our Governors, that it has become almost hopeless to have a fair discussion on the land question, for all arguments which go against their preconceived notions have scarcely any chance of a hearing." And when an English speaker said that the school of reformers now to the fore had for its guiding maxim that the thing which exists cannot be right, and that it was "revelling in a debauch of revolutionary legislation," his words were greeted with enthusiastic applause.

THE "PIONEER" ON LORD RIPON'S BAD LUCK.

"LORD RIPON," adds our correspondent from whom we quote above, "is known to covet a Dukedom, and it is quite on the cards that an offer may be made him to induce his return home." Such an event would, no doubt, be a relief to the country. Those who feel the reverse of rancorous towards the Viceroy in person, and are able to take the true measure of his mistakes, are beginning to understand that besides being a weak Governor he is an unfortunate one. Bad luck is found to be almost as fatal to the ruler as bad management. In this Ilbert Bill affair the Viceroy's initial action was in a great measure influenced, if not absolutely recommended, by two Lieutenant Governors, one of whom had expressed his views in a misleading fashion, whilst the other has recorded something like a late repentance of his. The Executive Council that should have been the Viceroy's strength has been his weakness. They saw or should have seen the gulf, but failed to restrain his plunge, and are equally powerless to effect his rescue. Lord Ripon has been unfortunate in the "garbled" telegram, in Mr. Stanhope's disingenuous exposition of the official opinions, in Lord Northbrook's premature disclosures at Bristol, in the Secretary of State's ill-judged advances to Mr. Atkins, in the India Council's ungenerous repudiation of a policy they were once not indisposed to father. Last of all, Lord Kimberley, who was Lord Ripon's staunchest ally, has caught the infection of the prevailing discontent and joined the ranks of his accusers. In a word, the members and auxiliaries of the Central Government may be weak or incapable, devious or disloyal, and escape serious censure, whilst on the Viceroy, who is bound to or controlled by them, all its fury is concentrated. It is possible to conceive that a wealthy English nobleman may come to regard a duke's coronet as pleasanter wearing than a Viceregal crown.

LORD KIMBERLEY AND MR. ATKINS.

REFERRING to Mr. Atkins's account of his interview with Lord Kimberley, the Englishman says:—"Mr. Atkins obtained from Lord Kimberley a candid declaration of the general principles on which the present Government is proceeding—a declaration which, from its cynical candour, ought to become historical.

This declaration on the part of Lord Kimberley clearly indicates the course of conduct which must be pursued in India with reference to the Ilbert Bill. Whatever may be said or written in reference to possible compromises, either in the direction of option or otherwise, let it never be forgotten that we are in the presence of the enemy of British prestige. It may be necessary to come to terms with the bitter opponent of English interests who worthily represents Mr. Gladstone and the Birmingham Caucus at Government House. It may be wise to make friends, to some extent, of the mammon of unrighteousness whose temple has been set up on the banks of the Hughli. There is, at the present moment, no court of appeal to which we can successfully apply against an unrighteous judgment. The political party, whose mandates are being carried out by Lord Ripon and Mr. Ilbert are, unfortunately, for the present, paramount. The faction which carried the last general election by preaching the doctrine of peace unto all men (except one's own fellow-countrymen) from Radical dissenting pulpits, has the grasp of Hindustan as well as of Hackney, and it requires an extraordinary amount of moral courage on the part of brave and conscientious men like General Wilson to keep out of reach of the Radical octopus. But do not let us be too anxious to discuss the terms on which we may eventually be compelled to capitulate to the enemy. If the option compromise be proposed, it is for us to see that, before thinking of accepting it, the amended measure is so framed as to give all possible security to the European. Before the English community can dream of assenting to it, they must have it clearly understood, for example, that the right of option is to be expressed in one of the clauses of the Bill itself, and that the freedom of the Englishman, on this head, is not to be left to the tender mercies of the next Radical and anti-English executive which Mr. Schnadhorst and the Birmingham toymakers may choose to send out to Calcutta."

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

ANOTHER EXPOSURE.

THE mail which reached Calcutta on Saturday, brought to Calcutta Mr. F. T. Atkins's first report of his meeting with Lord Kimberley, and it has brought, unfortunately for the Government, another contribution to that large aggregate of discredit which seems to dog Lord Ripon's administrations. If no administration was ever more guilty of crookedness in its policy, certainly no administration was ever so certain to be found out. It was only last week that Mr. Gibbs and Mr. Mackenzie endeavoured to whitewash the Government in the matter of the Roorkee Resolution. Mr. Mackenzie, with that peculiar aptitude for exuberance of language which he possesses in so marked a degree, put no bounds to his indiscretion. He has never stood high as an official of principle in the confidence of the public, but he has been forgiven much on account of his cleverness. He must not, however, repeat the exhibition he made of himself at the Doveton on Saturday week, or people will question his ability for high office and his fitness to be trusted with great interests. We shall this morning compare the statements made by Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Gibbs with certain other statements, at least, equally entitled to be heard. Mr. Mackenzie told the students of the Doveton College and the public a very charming tale, a story intended to discredit those dreadful persons, the agitators, and to hold up Lord Ripon's Government as all that a Government should be.

The idea that Government intended deliberately to cut off the domiciled European youth from professional employ is one of those absurd, reckless falsehoods that too often in the present day run the round of the press. Why, the whole raison d'être of the inquiry into the state of European education was the admitted necessity of opening up avenues of honest employment to lads of that class. The intention of Government was to elevate and develop on sounder lines to that end the course of their education. But when it was shown that to eliminate the Entrance Examination altogether would disturb too hastily existing arrangements in Institutions such as yours, the Government at once consented to modify the provisions of the Code, and contented itself with supplementing the Entrance Examination so as to make that alternative standard as equal as possible to the standard the Government itself preferred. I have gone so far into this question of employment that I will venture for a moment even a little further. Notwithstanding repeated refutations in the press, men still go about charging upon the present Government of India what is popularly known as the Roorkee Resolution. That charge is, as Carlyle would say, a long-dead but artfully galvanised lie, beginning now to be putrid, and it is high time some one buried it to avoid those recurring pestilential effects that are becoming now-a-days only too familiar to us. The Resolution was, as every one ought at this stage of the case to know, framed strictly in accordance with reiterated instructions from the Home authorities. I may state further, without committing any breach of official confidence, that the Government has during the past year received several very weighty representations regarding it from ministers of religion and other influential bodies.—representations, the tone and matter of which were such as the Government of India is always glad to listen to. These memorials have been forwarded to Her Majesty's Secretary of State with suggestions and recommendations, which will, it is hoped, if sanctioned, go far to meet the reasonable wishes of the memorialists, and of the class whose interests they so ably advocated. The orders of the Home authorities have not yet reached this country, but I am sanguine that they cannot now be much longer delayed.

Now, reading that passage, it occurs to us that Mr. Mackenzie, as Home Secretary to the Government of India, would have acted much more wisely if he had held his peace, for he had no right to lead the public into a fool's paradise. He ought to have waited before speaking for those communications from England about which he can only be hopeful. Mr. Gibbs, again, thus spoke at the Martinière:—

The Engineering College at Roorkee; this is a subject of very great importance, especially to the parents of the youths now present, and I am, as a Member of the Government, glad of the opportunity to clear away, to some extent, the accusation under which Government is at present supposed to labour. The Resolution, usually called the Roorkee College Order, has, I am aware, very naturally given great umbrage to a very important portion of the European and Eurasian population in this country. My own feelings, and those, I believe, of my colleagues, have been opposed to that measure; but it came to us from home in a way in which it left no alternative than to issue it. Since then, Government has read various memorial strong in reasoning, though temperate in language; and I trust that the result of the reference to the Home Government which we have made will have the effect of altering what at present is not without cause looked on as a great hardship, if not an injustice, by an important and hard-working portion of the community.

Here Mr. Gibbs makes exactly the same reservation as that made by Mr. Mackenzie. They both admit that injustice has been done, that dissatisfaction has been provoked, and they hope everything will come right, and that the Secretary of State will listen to the recommendations of the Government of India. Well, it so happens that Mr. Atkins brought this matter before Lord Kimberley. His Lordship's reply is certainly altogether different from what Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Gibbs would lead the public to expect; but we had better let Mr. Atkins tell the story:—

He must remember there were many thousands of the working classes whose safety would be imperilled if the Bill passed in its present form, and they felt very strongly on the subject. "Oh!" said his Lordship, "there are only about 20,000," but subsequently corrected himself, and said he thought there were 68,000 British-born subjects in the country. He then went on to criticise the English papers in India that are opposed to the Bill, and he said he was ashamed of them. I told him that was no concern of the working classes, which consisted of Anglo-Indians and Indo-Europeans, who considered they had not been, and were not being, fairly treated. His Lordship said: "Those classes want to have too much of their own way; they are aggressive." I told him they were exactly the very reverse; privilege after privilege had been taken away from them and their children, and they were not allowed to compete on equal terms with natives (Asiatics) of the country. They had sent in petition after petition, but no consideration had been given to their appeals. I drew his attention to the memorial, bearing many thousands of signatures, and accompanied by a census of the Anglo-Indians and Indo-Europeans sent by myself to Lord Northbrook in 1875, which had not, up to this time, received any consideration. His Lordship said: "Yes, that is quite in accordance with the policy of this and every other Government. It is not our intention to allow the children of those classes to compete on equal terms with natives of this country. India is to be governed for the natives only."

Now, here there is so strong a contradiction of the hopefulness expressed by the Home Secretary and the member in charge of the Home Department, that the public may be excused if they go further and seek to discover the author of what Mr. Mackenzie, with characteristic and habitual elegance, describes as "an artfully-galvanised lie!" The phrase is a strong one, and uncommonly well calculated to serve Mr. Mackenzie's purpose of lulling the people's minds into a false security, so as, if possible, to reduce by any means the prevailing agitation. We have then to see who it was that sat this "artfully-galvanised lie" in circulation. Our readers will, of course, at once remember the peculiar terms used in the Roorkee Resolution. That Resolution was published in November, 1882, and republished with a superfluity of telly on Feb. 17, 1883, or fifteen days after the Ilbert Bill had startled all India. What does that Resolution say as to this very singular and very graphically-described lie denounced by Mr. Mackenzie? We shall quote the words of the Resolution which was published in the Calcutta newspaper of Feb. 19 last:—

The Circular of the Home Department, quoted in the preamble in furtherance of the views of Her Majesty's Government, enjoined the reservation of appointments in the Uncovenanted Service generally for natives, but made an exception in favour of certain departments, and amongst others of the Public Works Department.

But the time, according to the Resolution, had arrived when Europeans were to be wholly trodden under foot, and hence the Public Works Department was to be shut against all but natives, and this is how it was to be done:—

Subject to any guarantee that may have been already given, the appointments made to the Engineer Establishment from the Indian Engineering Colleges shall be reserved for persons of pure Asiatic origin who qualify according to the college standard. If, however, a sufficient number of natives do not pass the test, the appointments will be open to European or Eurasian competitors at the same examination.

We are sorry for Mr. Mackenzie, for it is manifest he has accused the Government of India of setting a-foot an "artfully galvanised" taradiddle. We, however, may show him a little more mercy than he deserves. The real author of the falling away of the truth which Mr. Mackenzie has so conscientiously and with such an excess of refinement branded before all India in terms doubtless intended to be scathing, was Major Evelyn Baring. In Major Baring's Financial Statement, delivered on March 8, 1882, at the bottom of paragraph thirty-six, page six, we find the following declaration, which we venture to quote in italics:—

"The admission of Europeans to the general Uncovenanted Service has been forbidden, and they will gradually disappear from its ranks."

Which are the public to believe—Major Baring, the Government of India, and Lord Kimberley, or the hopeful Mr. Mackenzie and the trusting Mr. Gibbs? But, strange to say, Major Baring seems to have repented to some extent of the offence he gave whilst in India, for we find the following in his article in the October number of the Nineteenth Century:—

"I hope that, for the present at all events, no considerable concessions will be made either to those who would alter the rules in the direction of excluding natives, or to those who would alter them in the sense of their more extended employment. . . . I am not at all prepared to say that the rules under which natives are now admitted in the Government service, whether Covenanted or Uncovenanted, are too liberal, but I think that they are quite liberal enough for the present moment. What is now required is that, so far as their essential principles are concerned, they should be left alone, and their operation watched before any further changes are contemplated. I do not think it would, for some years to come at all events, be wise to reduce the European staff in India to a greater extent than it will be reduced under the operation of the existing rules, and I am strongly of opinion that it would be false economy to reduce the pay of European members of the Covenanted Civil Service.

Now it is simply impossible at present, and for many generations, at all events, it will be impossible, to govern India without a European agency. If Europeans are necessary, it is of the highest importance that they should become competent men—that is to say, that they should have good constitutions, that they should be honest, and at least of good average ability. These qualities cannot be obtained unless the Government chooses to pay for them. An Indian career possesses less attraction than is often supposed. The work of administration in India is so difficult that it requires the cream of our schools and colleges to carry it on efficiently. Yet, without underrating the talents of those who now enter the Covenanted Civil Service, it may be doubted whether that service presents sufficient advantages to attract the best men of the rising generation. It is notorious, moreover, that, in spite of high pay and very interesting work, it is difficult to get competent men in middle life to accept those high appointments which are generally given to men outside the ranks of the Indian services. Further, the economy to be effected by substituting native for European agency is often much overrated. It is impossible to substitute Uncovenanted native for Covenanted European agency, and, unless this be done, the saving is at most only one-third of the salary enjoyed by the European. I do not, therefore, believe in the possibility at present of effecting any large economies by employing natives in the place of Europeans.

Major Baring, in October 1883, is clearly not the Major Baring of March 1882, and this being so, we may perhaps overlook, or rather dismiss, the attempt of Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Gibbs to obtain for the Government a credit which there is nothing as yet to show that it deserves. But, in conclusion, we would recommend Mr. Mackenzie to imitate the wiser caution of Mr. Gibbs, and not to hurry himself into talking about "artfully galvanised lies."—Indian Daily News.

DR. HUNTER'S LETTERS TO THE "TIMES."

WHAT is Mr. Hunter's position? How far is he exempt from the etiquette of the Legislative Council to which he belongs? Why should he go so far a-field as to write letters to the Times in support of Lord Ripon's statement on March 9 last, that there was no distinction between a Statutory and a Covenanted Native Civilian? We imagine that there must be some etiquette in these things, and we do not see how, if a Member of the Legislature is precluded from being a controversialist in India he can still be a controversialist in England. And then, according to the Pioneer—in a matter of this kind we prefer to quote another's opinion—Dr. Hunter's letters are open to the charge of purposely misleading English people. Strange to say, this is exactly what the Times itself says of Dr. Hunter's contributions to a controversy where he ought to have confined his utterance to the Council Chamber. We wonder if Dr. Hunter imagines that he can trade on his literary reputation as a make-weight for his want of Indian experience. He was never very greatly respected in India, and these letters in the Times have placed him before the public in the light of a man who, as an official, it would be folly to trust. We wonder if those letters will be regarded as qualifying him for a seat in the Select Committee on the Bill, if, to the public regret and indignation, the measure should ever go before such a Committee.—Indian Daily News.

THE PRESENT GOVERNMENT'S POLICY OF SUPPRESSION.

THERE is a passage in the interview which Mr. Atkins had with Lord Kimberley at the India Office, which we think deserves something more than a passing notice. It is as follows:—"I told him (Lord Kimberley) that privilege after privilege had been taken away from them (the Anglo-Indian and Indo-European working classes), and that they and their children were not allowed to compete on equal terms with native Asiatics." His Lordship said "Yes, that is quite in accordance with the policy of this and every other Government. It is not our intention to allow the children of those classes to compete on equal terms with the natives of the country. India is to be governed for natives only." His Lordship said "it was quite right and proper that natives should have the preference." Within the limits at our disposal it is not possible to compress the history of the population of European extraction domiciled in India. It may, however be sufficient to state, that the policy of suppression initiated by the Honourable East India Company as far back as 1780—when men, one of whose parents was an Asiatic, were excluded from the Army, unless as bandmen, drummers, and common soldiers, and when all higher offices were shut against Eurasians as a body—has been adhered to with more or less consistency up to the present. This is probably what Lord Kimberley means when he throws out the hint that a change of Government will bring about no change in the hard lot of European toilers of the working classes in India. We are bound to say, however, that no responsible Minister of the Crown ever since the rule of England in India first began, has ever put this policy of suppression more cruelly more cruelly, and more heartlessly. Whatever political reasons existed towards the close of last century and the beginning of the present when the "adventurer" and the "interloper" were common enough, and were undoubtedly, many of them, troublesome to the servants of the old Company—these have now ceased to be factors of any force, and there is a community of mixed blood scattered all over India, but largest in presidency towns and large stations, English in tastes, habits and language, and at the same time as truly natives of India as any Asiatic. This yearly increasing population is mainly composed of the descendants of men who gave their blood and their lives to build up the empire; and in these latter years the community is being strongly re-inforced by the descendants of railway men, engineers, and planters, who represent the brain, the muscle, and the capital which have done and is doing so much to develop the resources of the country in a thousand directions. Even, then, accepting the statement that there might have been a time when the suppression of the interloper and the adventurer was desirable, it must be apparent that the stage in the history of India is passed, and that so far from this policy of suppression being persisted in, it is the duty of the Government, alike of India and England, to foster the population which has done and is doing so much for India, and so far from throwing impediments in their way to earn a living, assist them on terms in every way equal to those held out to Asiatics. It seems to us that a great deal of misconception in discussing this topic arises from the use of the term native. The community we speak of is, every whit, as much native as any Asiatic one in India. They have been born here, India is their native land, and it is to India they look and to India alone, as the country in which they are to live, to labour, and to die. They differ from Asiatics in possessing English tastes, habits, aspirations, and language, while at the same time they possess a splendid knowledge of the vernaculars. If this community is not to be allowed to compete with Asiatics on equal terms, if India is to be governed for Asiatics alone, then the Government of India, the great railway and manufacturing firms, and the merchants and contractors are bringing men out to India to spend their lives in the advancement of the best interests of the Empire whose children, should they settle here, as many of them do, must have before them a life of pauperism and loafing, and a wretched death. Pests of society, outcasted by their own Government, they will become a source of weakness to the State, and the foulest blot that ever yet disgraced the escutcheon of England. To deny this community equal rights and privileges of serving India with those of Asiatics is so heartless and so cruel, that we refuse to believe that any honourable body of Englishmen would tolerate the gross injustice for a single day. It seems to us that it is want of knowledge more than want of will which hinder statesmen in England and the Government in India from placing, at least on an equal footing, every native of this empire, whether of European or Asiatic extraction; and it would in our estimation be doing simple justice only to the descendants of the men who have done so much for India in the past, were they granted privileges in excess of those vouchsafed to pure Asiatics. Whatever Lord Kimberley may believe, the deep injustice of his words will not easily be eradicated. By his lightly spoken utterances he has given an impetus to every man of English blood in India to agitate for, at all events, equal justice being done to men of their own blood, who have made India their home, so that the monstrous regulations that would exclude them from the Roorkee engineering establishment, the Forest School of Dehra, and the higher ranks of all the State Departments of India, may be abolished, and so far from this heartless policy of suppression being persisted in, fair and even-handed justice may be meted out to men of all castes and creeds and blood in India.—Indigo and Tea Planters Gazette.

CHURCH DISESTABLISHMENT.

WE have only escaped from one agitation to plunge into another. Lord Ripon is about to perpetrate a worse blunder than even the Ilbert Bill. He has resolved to immediately disestablish the English Church in India. The news would be incredible had we not received it from such high official authority in Calcutta as precludes the possibility of mistake. To make matters worse, he has resolved to proceed in the teeth of all official opinion. Every member of his Council, except Mr. Ilbert, is, we learn, against the change; while among the additional members of Council Lord Ripon finds his only supporter in Dr. W. W. Hunter. The opposition in the India Office is equally strong, and has already found vent in that savage attack upon Lord Ripon's change of faith at a mature period of life, which must have seemed inexplicable to the readers of the Times when it appeared, but which is sufficiently comprehensible now that we see it was simply meant as a note of warning. The opposition Lord Ripon will encounter from men who are supposed to be his own advisers will be warmly shared by the whole Anglo-Indian community, and the conflict, we may be assured, will be much more embittered at home. He has, however, we are informed, the hearty support of the Cabinet, and with that he can of course carry this or any other radical measure—if he be strong enough. Fortunately, he is not strong. The fate of the Ilbert Bill shows the utter folly and futility of pyrotechnical legislation. What the Empire needed when Lord Ripon came here was a period of rest. Instead of that we have been treated to one sensation after another. Nothing has been accomplished except to set the different communities by the ears, and to leave them all equally exasperated and dissatisfied. Under another Viceroy, and in the natural course of events, which might have been said in favour of reducing the Church Establishment in India, and the proposal would certainly have been well received by large bodies of Protestants. No time was, however, so inopportune as the present, and no Viceroy of all who have ever come to India so unfitted for the task as Lord Ripon. As a pervert from the Church of his fathers, he should have been the last man here to have undertaken the destruction of the English Established Church in India during his brief period of office. In this case it is impossible to disassociate the man from the deed. The Ilbert Bill divided the Queen's Indian subjects into Europeans and natives. The Disestablishment Bill will divide them again into Protestants and Roman Catholics.

The whole expenditure on the Established Church in India is, according to Mr. Baxter, the Apostle of Disestablishment, only three hundred thousand pounds per annum. The changes Lord Ripon proposes to introduce, while ruining the prestige of the Church, will only reduce that expenditure by some seventy thousand pounds. They will include the abolition of the bishops' salaries after the present incumbents retire, and will be calculated to place the Church on the same footing as the other denominational bodies. The saving is so paltry that it need scarcely be considered. If it be insisted upon as a matter of "principle," the principle must logically be carried further. In the Presidency of Bombay alone more than four times the amount of this seventy thousand pounds to be saved throughout all India is given in grants to different native religious bodies. The whole contribution to the English Church is nothing as compared to the immense endowments which the State contributes to the Hindu and Mahomedan religions. It is idle to talk, as Mr. Baxter talks, of the unjust way in which Episcopalians are paid out of State funds raised from Hindoos and Mahomedans. The native priests are paid in precisely the same manner, and it should be the business of the opponents of the forthcoming Disestablishment Bill to maintain that they must stand on the same footing. But if it is understood that the abolition of the Church involved as a matter of principle the resumption of the temple allowances now paid by Government to Hindoos and Mahomedans, the mere suggestion would create widespread alarm. Lord Ripon will thus not only divide the English speaking communities into Protestants and Roman Catholics, but before the soreness about the Ilbert Bill has been healed, he will create a new and more embittered feeling between the European and native communities.

The Statute of William and Mary, which provided for the institution of chaplaincies, ordered the chaplains "to learn Portuguese and teach the Gentoos." For many years education was mainly in their hands. The Society for the Education of the Poor within the Government of Bombay, for instance, was started by the Church in 1815, was transformed into the Board of Education in 1840, and organised the complete system of education that in 1855 was taken under the management of the State. Here their education duties virtually ceased. But since then the European population in the mofussil has been enormously increased and widely scattered. The military garrisons will, of course, retain their chaplains in any case. But in spite of the party represented by Lord Ripon, a large civil establishment of Englishmen must be maintained for a long time to come to take part in the civil administration of the country. Englishmen, wherever they happen to be in India, will require clerical aid, not only for religious services, but on special and inevitable occasions of joy and sorrow. The clergy are wanted not only in the pulpit, but at the font, the altar, and the graveside. Even non-official Englishmen in the mofussil might well expect to find such timely assistance provided by a Government which in India undertakes so many paternal duties. In wealthy centres like Bombay and Calcutta there is, perhaps, no great reason why the merchants, lawyers, and bankers should not pay for their clergy as they pay for their doctors; and directly or indirectly most of them do so. This at the best would be an argument for the redistribution of the chaplains in districts where they are still needed. But in this Presidency, with the exception of Bombay, we know of no station where the civil population are given a chaplain unless troops happen to be quartered there, and we can see nothing in the present state of things to call for a change that will inevitably lead to an outburst of the bitterest political, religious, and national feeling. It is lamentable, indeed, that such a change should be attempted by such a Viceroy, in the teeth of all that his advisers can tell him. He has lived since he came to India like a recluse. At Simla he was not only remote from the real world of India, but he spent all his time within the four walls of his garden. On reaching Calcutta he met with such a rude awakening as has borne fruit in good season. Since then he has scarcely ever left his compound. There he sees no one but obsequious officials, and councillors who may differ, but with the utmost deference. It is impossible that under such circumstances any Governor General can understand the circumstances and the people around him. To most men, the fact that of all his Council, one only—and he the latest from England—can be found to agree with a change that will again upset the country and defer progress, would at least suggest the necessity of reticence or postponement. If, in spite of the unanimous feeling of his own advisers, Lord Ripon should insist upon persevering with the disestablishment of a Church from which he has seceded, we shall be reluctantly compelled to agree with the Times that he has handed his private judgment over to a priest, and that the trouble and excitement in which he will involve all India is as nothing to the approbation of Father Ker.—Times of India.

THE CALCUTTA EXHIBITION:—THE MARBLE DAIS. —MODERN MARBLE WORK.

I FIND that in the notes of the opening ceremony and description of the central quadrangle, I did injustice to a very enterprising exhibitor, Mr. A. Silbiger, of Vienna. This gentleman it was who erected the marble dais. Messrs. Lazarus supplied the canopy and general upholstery. The marble structure is a fine example of modern work, and the marble itself is exceedingly handsome. These are all Austrian marbles, and are found within a circuit of seven or eight miles. The dais is approached by stairs which are of white marble, flanked by a balustrading of red. The newels are handsomely proportioned. The floor of the upper space is of mosaic tiles, made of a conglomerate of marble and cement, faced and polished, and cut to pattern. It is said to be very durable, and may be made from the chip at the quarries in any quantity, and exported to any distance. Some of the marbles used in the work are called "trout-speckled," and they bear very much the markings of a trout. Others have a very handsome shade of green lying in cloud-like masses. Amongst other colours, I noticed a very pretty effect obtained in some of the enrichments by leaving a wreath or a conventional flower, carved in relief, unpolished. The contrast of the dull surface of the wreath or flower with the polished mass of marble around it is very effective. At the back of the dais is a blank doorway set in a semi-circular-headed frame. The jambs of this doorway are handsomely inlaid with coloured marbles in the form of a wreath. Mr. Silbiger has other work in the shape of inlaying tables of marbles, handsomely veined and inlaid. At the foot of the steps are two handsome pillars of marble of the classic order. These marbles are said to weather well in the most severe climates. A fountain in Salzburg, made of this description of marble, is known to be 260 years old. The frost is severe every year, but the material is uninjured. I note this dais as a good example of modern work, executed very much with the aid of machinery—a contrast to the artistic work of the stone and marble workers of Gwalior and Agra. The two should be compared or contrasted by all who would see the broad gulf which separates artistic from mechanical work. At the same time it is due to Mr. Silbiger and modern workers in marble to say that the contrast of price is entirely in their favour, notwithstanding the cheap rate at which the Indian art-workman labours.—Times of India

THE REPORT OF THE EDUCATION COMMISSION.

THE chapter on collegiate education is full of interesting details. In Madras, between 1854 and 1871, there were five Government Colleges, with an attendance at the later date of 288 students. The non-Government Colleges were seven, with 151 students. Two of the Government Colleges and the Free Church Mission Institution taught up to the B.A. standard. Between 1872 and 1881 there were ten Government and fourteen non-Government Colleges, of which latter twelve received grants-in-aid. The number of students in the twenty-four Colleges had risen from 439 in 1872 to 1,521 in 1881; and during the ten years, 1,624 candidates had passed the F.A., 726 the B.A., and 17 the M.A. examinations of the Madras University. In Bombay at the incorporation of the University two Colleges only, both maintained by Government, were affiliated. A year later their number was increased by the addition of the Free General Assembly's Institution, and in 1869 St. Xavier's College came on to the list. In the four years from 1861 to 1864 the average of students who each year passed the F.A., B.A., and M.A. examinations was respectively fourteen, seven, and one. The corresponding averages for the years 1865 to 1870 were thirty-one, fifteen, and four, and for the years 1871 to 1881, sixty-three, thirty, three. At the latter date the Colleges were six in number, of which two were maintained by Missionary bodies. Four of these Colleges were of the first grade, two of the second. Omitting institutions for professional or special training, Bengal had in 1854-55 six Government Colleges, with 192 students, and eight non-Government Colleges, the number of whose students is not stated. Eight years later there were fifteen Colleges, of which the seven maintained by Government had in them 570 students. From 1862-63 to 1870-71, the number of Government Colleges increased from seven to eleven, five non-Government Colleges received grants-in-aid, and there were three unaided Colleges. At the end of the next decade the Government Colleges were twelve in number, with 1,260 students; while the five aided and three unaided Colleges had together almost precisely the same total. Of the Government Colleges, seven were of the first grade, and five, including the College classes of the Bethune Female School, of the second. By the transfer of the Delhi District to the Punjab at the close of the Mutiny, the North Western Provinces lost one of their most successful Colleges. The remaining three continued to prosper, and between 1862 and 1871 they passed ninety-six candidates at the

F.A., twenty-six at the B.A., and five at the M.A., examinations of the Calcutta University. Besides the Government Colleges, there were also in the North Western Provinces and Oudh five aided Colleges, from which during the same period twenty-four candidates had been successful at the F.A. examination, and three at the B.A. Between 1872 and 1881 the Government and aided Colleges varied from six to ten; in the first of these years there were nine, in the last eight. The total number of students at the end of the period was 339, and during the ten years the successful candidates at the University examinations were—in the F.A. 365, in the B.A. 130, in the M.A. thirty-four. The Delhi College, which had been closed after the Mutiny, was revived by the Punjab Government in 1864, when a second college was established at Lahore; an aided College was also maintained at the former place by the American Mission from 1865 to 1868. In 1877 the College classes at Delhi were closed, in order that the staff of the Government College at Lahore might be strengthened without an increase of expenditure. Previous to its abolition the Delhi College had passed sixty-one candidates at the F.A., eighteen at the B.A., and four at the M.A. examinations. The average number of students on the rolls in its last year was thirty-seven. During the eighteen years of its existence, the Lahore College had passed eighty-four candidates at the F.A. examination, twenty-five at the B.A., and seven at the M.A. Its students in 1882 numbered 103. Reference to the constitution of the Punjab Oriental College has already been made, and a fuller description will be found later on. Shortly after the abolition of the Delhi College an effort was made to resuscitate it on the basis of an aided College. Some sixty thousand rupees were promised, but the Lieutenant Governor considered this sum quite insufficient, and was, moreover, unwilling to recognise annual subscriptions as a stable source of income. Under these circumstances, the Cambridge Mission, which was preparing to form a College class for students connected with the Mission, offered to establish an aided College for the benefit of the public at large. This offer was accepted by Government, and a grant-in-aid of Rs. 5,400, together with a special grant of Rs. 2,000 for scientific apparatus, was sanctioned for the first year. In the Central Provinces there is only one Government College, which is situated at Jabalpur, and which, though affiliated up to the B.A. standard, has not as yet sent up candidates for that examination. Students, therefore, wishing to proceed to the B.A. or M.A. degree have hitherto joined one or other of the Colleges in the North Western Provinces. The high school at Ajmir was in 1868 raised to the status of a College, which since that time has sent up candidates to the F.A. examination of the Calcutta University, and also, of late years, to the High Proficiency examination of the Punjab University. Besides the above there are the Oriental College at Lahore and the Mahomedan Anglo-Oriental College at Aligarh. The following Colleges owe their existence to the enlightened liberality of Native Princes and Chiefs:—The Haiderabad College, maintained by His Highness the Nizam; the Mysore and Bangalore Colleges, and the Shimoga High School, maintained by the Mysore Government; the Trevandram College, maintained by His Highness the Maharaja of Travancore; the Vizianagram College, maintained by His Highness the Maharaja; the Kerala Vidyasala, Calicut, maintained by His Highness the Zamorin Maharaja Bahadur; the High School, Cochin, maintained by the Cochin Government; the College at Pudukkotta, maintained by the Maharaja; the Rajaram College, maintained by the Kolhapur State; the Baroda College, maintained by His Highness the Gaekwar; the Kathiwar Rajkumar College at Raikot; the Burwan College, maintained by the Maharaja; the Jaipur College, maintained by His Highness the Maharaja; the Sehore High School, maintained by Her Highness the Begum of Bopal and the neighbouring Chiefs; the Patiala College, maintained by His Highness the Maharaja; the Rajkumar College in Bundelkhand, maintained by the Chiefs of that territory; and the Residency College at Indore. Most of these are in Native States, and do not appear in our statistical Tables; but they deserve mention here as a striking proof that educational progress is not confined to British India.

Among other things the Commission recommend the extension of Collegiate education in the Province of Sind and at Ahmedabad in Bombay, at Bhagulpore in Bengal, and at Jabalpur in the Central Provinces. So far so good. We accept the condition on which grant-in-aid to Colleges should be given, but the present uncertainty as to the proportion of grant-in-aid to the means of a College is calculated to lead to jobbery. A fixed scale would be better. We are glad to observe that the Commission recommend that all the Colleges, Government or aided, should make provision for more than one of the alternative courses laid down by the Universities. It is because the Colleges generally, whether in the Mofussil or in the capital, do not make due provision for the science course; their students are put to great disadvantage in studying that course. We hope this grievance will be now redressed. We observe that the Commission have recommended that the Local Governments be invited to consider the advisability of establishing a scholarships for distinguished graduates, to enable them to proceed to Europe for the purpose of practically studying some branch of mechanical industry. This recommendation suggests a query as to whether means should not be provided in India for technical and industrial education. The Commission have not discussed the merits of the University systems of education, which regulate the whole scheme of collegiate education in the country. We are aware that this subject was excluded from the scope of the inquiry of the Education Commission, but the edifice will not be complete if the University systems be not placed on a healthier basis than they now are. There is a general complaint that the University systems have cramped the growth of liberal education, and the subject deserves a thorough inquiry.

OPINIONS OF THE ENGLISH AND INDIAN PRESS ON THE ILBERT DIFFICULTY.

THE Hindoo Patriot, in an article headed "Peace with Dishonour," writes:—"What a triumph for the Anglo-Indian community! What a humiliation for the Government! We could hardly believe our eyes when we first read the announcement. If the Government could stoop to such a surrender, why did they not withdraw the Bill altogether? One of the objects of the Ilbert Bill was the furtherance of administrative convenience. How splendidly will administrative convenience be now promoted; every petty case must go before a jury." In conclusion, the native community are urged to unite and protest.

The Civil and Military Gazette regards the collapse of the Defence Association as affording a satisfactory hope of settlement by reasonable men. The compromise as described by the Association leaves the Bill tolerably harmless, but the extension of the jury system will seriously impede the course of legislation. Possibly some way of working it may be found in committee, but the Viceroy had much better withdraw the Bill altogether.

The Madras Mail says:—"We are at last afforded the gratification of announcing a settlement by the Government of India of the Ilbert Bill question, which should at once allay the well-grounded alarm and pacify the widespread indignation to which that most ill-considered measure gave birth. The Government emerges from the conflict with seriously impaired prestige. It commenced by gratuitously throwing down the gauntlet to Europeans, and at the same time it pandered without the least excuse, to the demand for 'liberty' and 'equality' that a few fussy Bengalees saw fit to raise. Its mistake was immediately pointed out by officials and non-officials in every part of the country, but it chose to let the irritation go on and increase, instead of taking the manly step of admitting its mistake. It was supported only too cordially by Her Majesty's Government collectively, and by Mr. Gladstone, Lord Kimberley, Lord Northbrook, and Lord Hartington individually. Those Ministers seemed to wish to go out of their way to increase the resentment of their countrymen in the far east. A few courteous words from Mr. Gladstone would have acted like oil on troubled water; but they were not spoken. A few considerate sentences from Lord Kimberley would have encouraged the hope that the Government would relent; but they were denied. And for the last eight months Lord Ripon has observed a dogged silence, and his Government has been the subject of press criticisms in England such as were never supplied to any one of its predecessors. But let us hope that all's well that ends well. The Government now perceives that, in the words of a London critic, on one side are 'all who are in actual contact with the facts, all the men who have to work the machinery of Government, and who by their capital, industry, and intelligence are transforming Indian society, and developing Indian resources.' On the other side are 'persons with beautiful theories about the equality of man or the educational value of local Government: men who think it a proof of moral superiority to traduce and malign their countrymen who are the real makers of the Empire.' The Government has now surrendered the mischievous 'principle' of the Bill for which it has fought with a tenacity worthy of a better cause. No native but a district judge or a district magistrate is to exercise criminal jurisdiction over European British subjects. As the Defence Association regards this as a 'completely satisfactory settlement of the vital question at issue,' we may safely assume that Statutory Civilians will not be allowed this extent of jurisdiction. . . . The Government had to choose between conceding a worthless privilege to a few native functionaries, and of yielding to the consensus of European opinion against the Bill. It has preferred to sacrifice its own character with natives for consistency rather than to fly in the face of so unmistakable an expression of public judgment. The practical admission that it was misled comes late, but better by far a late admission of, than an obstinate persistence in, error."

The Calcutta correspondent of the Pioneer, writing on Saturday, says:—"There is a wonderful feeling of relief throughout that busy society which has its being in Calcutta; the tension which had existed for so many months between the Government and the non-official European community has suddenly ceased. The connecting cord has not, however, been strained to the breaking point. The relief has come from the strain upon it being relaxed just when a few more tugs at either end might have had deplorable results. The controversy over the Ilbert Bill may almost be reckoned as a thing of the past, for Government and the Opposition have come to an understanding which promises a fair basis for such future action as is still necessary before the ghost of the late fierce feud can be laid. This is not the place to enter into a critical disquisition upon the merits of the concordat which has been concluded, and I will therefore content myself with an explanation of some of the causes which have led up to the result now publicly announced. When all the members of the Government had assembled in Calcutta, there was naturally much serious discussion over the impasse which seemed threatening, and various proposals were, I believe, made with a view to effect a settlement of what has become a public danger and a private nuisance. Moderate counsels prevailed, and it was tacitly decided that efforts should be made to effect some arrangement with the Opposition which would satisfy all reasonable men. The financial member stood in the enviable position of being the only member of the Executive Council, whose hands were free. As the latest appointed councillor he had not become involved in the meshes of the net of political controversy which enveloped his colleagues, and he brought no prejudices to bear upon the subject-matter involved in dispute. To Sir Auckland Colvin accordingly was entrusted—informally, it is true—the task of finding upon what basis an arrangement was possible, and how expeditiously it could be carried out. The Hon. G. H. P. Evans, a non-official member of the Legislative Council, whose views were well known both in and out of Council, was thereafter in frequent consultation with Sir Auckland Colvin, touch being kept with the Opposition on the one hand and with the Government on the other. The result was a scheme to extend the right of trial by jury in the direction which the telegraph has already made you acquainted with, and the matter in dispute soon reduced itself to comparatively small limits. The Finance Minister, considering this further modification as one that offered the best solution of the question, and learning from Mr. Evans that it would be acceptable to the Opposition, pressed it with characteristic emphasis and energy upon his colleagues in Council. The modification was accepted, and the Secretary of State being graciously pleased to express his approval, the concordat was drawn up, and yesterday evening a meeting of fifteen of the Council of the Defence Association formally accepted the agreement, the details of which you are in possession of. The rumour of a possible settlement was at first discredited by those outside the pale of the Defence Council; but now the truth is known, and I am inclined to think it is hailed with almost general satisfaction by those who have found themselves 'in opposition.' It is too soon to calculate upon the effect which the arrangement will produce alike upon English and Indian opinion; but the relief from tension, as I have said, is very great, and we really feel that a solution of our difficulties has at last been given."

The Indian Spectator says:—"However much we may condemn this European agitation against the Ilbert Bill, we cannot help congratulating the opponents on the result of their perseverance. They have wrenched concession after concession from the executive during the past few months, and finally they are assured that European criminals under trial may have fresh privileges to save their amour propre, and in fact, to proclaim their superiority of race! There seems to be no one to put in a word for the native magistrate or the native criminal. The native of India has no feelings. He is bound to put up with any reflection on his race, or he will be denounced as disloyal. Well, whatever his loss, the native has, no doubt, learnt a lesson. He has known the nature and value of organised opposition. We only pray that the experience may not prove in his case what the first taste of blood does to the young tiger. For our part we will not repine so long as the principle of the measure holds good. If this Christmas 'concordat,' which we are extremely doubtful about, restores peace to the land, and opens a happy new year for Christians and non-Christians alike, far be it from us to oppose it."

At a meeting held on Saturday at the Town Hall, Rangoon, the following resolutions were passed:—"That the meeting receives with much pleasure the intelligence that an arrangement has been arrived at between the Government of India and the Council of the Defence Association, whereby the rights and the liberties of Europeans will be secured in India for all time. That this happy result is mainly due to the persistent efforts of the Defence Association and their supporters, and that this meeting, while expressing their heartfelt gratitude to the Council of the Association, wishes also to record a special vote of thanks to Mr. Atkins, whose labours in England for upholding his countrymen's rights have been crowned with success." Much cheering took place for the Queen and old England, and the freedom of England. The meeting separated with a cheer for Mr. Atkins. About 200 people were present.

The following is a translation of the opinions expressed by the Bombay vernacular press on the concordat:—

"The Rast Gofar says that the Englishmen have at length met with success. Their perseverance and continued agitation have melted the heart of our magnanimous Viceroy. The Bill in its proposed form wears an entirely new aspect. Its withdrawal would have been construed into a defeat of the Government, and the proposed change may, therefore, be a dodge to accomplish their object. But, on the other hand, the English community have been granted rights which they perhaps never dreamed of, and the Government have thus indirectly given them a cause to gloat over the success. After quoting the telegram of the Defence Association, giving the details of the concordat, the Rast Gofar goes on to repeat that the present arrangement will give more rights to Europeans than they ever demanded. The right of demanding a trial by jury will simply create new race distinctions. The trial of an Englishman by members of his own community ordinarily means in this country his acquittal. In seventy-five cases out of a hundred Englishmen tried by a jury formed of the members of their own nationality are acquitted. To ask a native magistrate to empanel a European jury for the trial of an Englishman is simply vexatious. The Rast Gofar accordingly entirely condemns the new arrangement, which is literally a 'compromise.' The original Bill has not only been whittled away, but its principle has also been affected. No one expected that a man in the position of the Viceroy who is known for his determination of character, would be so pliant. The previous compromises agreed to by the Government were disappointing, but the last are still more disappointing. It would be better if the Bill was withdrawn than passed in its altered form. The natives did not stoutly fight for their rights, but contented themselves with forwarding a few petitions to Government; and this is how they are recompensed for their peaceful behaviour. They have never abused the Viceroy, but reposing all trust in him have praised and extolled him, and this is the result. Those who gave themselves up to agitation, held out threats of riots and mutinies, and insulted the representative of the Crown, have alone been rewarded."

INDIAN MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

(From the Bombay Gazette, Dec. 28, 1883.)

The Lieutenant General commanding has issued a division order to the troops at Lucknow, saying that he is commanded by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught to convey to the troops composing the Lucknow garrison His Royal Highness's marked approval of the steadiness and fine appearance they presented on parade, as well as of the various guards of honour and escorts furnished during His Royal Highness's stay. His Royal Highness further expressed his gratification at having had an opportunity of seeing the Lucknow Volunteer Corps; and desired that his thanks might be conveyed to the officers and members of the corps for the way in which they turned out.

Col. Sir Charles M. MacGregor, K.C.B., C.S.I., C.I.E., Quartermaster-General, is gazetted to a good-service pension. The following is the official record of Col. (local Major-General) MacGregor's war services:—

Indian Mutiny, 1857-58-59.—Actions of Narnaul, Gangri, Pattiala, and Mainpuri; siege and capture of Lucknow; operations in Oudh; actions of Barra, Nawabganj, Dariabad, and Bhamorighat (wounded); passage of the Gogra; actions of Vaziragaon, Machligaon, Kamdakot, Maharajpore (wounded), Serwaghat (wounded), and Pachgaon. Despatches, London Gazette, 31st January, 1859. Medal with clasp. China War, 1860.—Action of Sinho (twice wounded); surrender of Pekin. Despatches, London Gazette, 4th November, 1860. Afghan War, 1878-79-80.—Operations in the Bazaar and Jellalabad Valleys; action of Charasiah; capture of Kabul; operations round Kabul; recovery of guns near Kila Kasi. In command of 3rd Infantry Brigade, on the march from Kabul to the relief of Kandahar, and in the battle of September 1. In command of the Murree Field Force in the operations against the Murrees. Despatches, London Gazette, Nov. 7, 1879, Jan. 1, May 4, and Dec. 3, 1880. Medal with three clasps and Bronze Star; C.B., K.C.B.

Brigadier General Gillespie, C.B., does not go to the Bangalore camp of exercise, being in command of the Bikaner Field Force; and the name of Lieut. Scallon, 23rd N.I., is substituted for his in the list of Bombay officers under orders to be present.

Sir F. Roberts, accompanied by his Military Secretary, Colonel Pretymann, and Lieutenant Chamberlain, A.D.C., left Madras on Friday for Ootacamund.

Colonel A. W. Montagu, Deputy Commissary General, Upper Circle, Bengal, intends proceeding shortly on furlough on private affairs for two years.

Colonel W. R. Martin, Commanding 38th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry, is about to proceed on furlough to Europe.

Lieutenant Colonel J. R. Collins resigns his appointment of Commandant of the Murree Depot, and assumes command of the 2nd Battalion East Surrey Regiment, on Colonel Ralston proceeding on leave to England.

Lieutenant Colonel A. C. Toker, 18th N.I., has been appointed to officiate as Assistant Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, as a temporary measure.

Major J. Keith officiates as D.A.G., R.A., pending the arrival of Lieutenant Colonel Minto Elliot; and Captain R. H. S. Baker, R.A., officiates for Major Keith as D.A.A.G., R.A.

Major Tyacke, North Staffordshire Regiment, has been granted twelve months' sick leave to Europe.

Major Grierson, Bombay Staff Corps, having completed twenty-six years' service, is promoted to Lieutenant Colonel.

Major J. F. S. Mackenzie, Deputy Accountant General, Military Department, has been posted to Madras for duty on being relieved of his duties of his present appointment by his successor.

Major J. Keith officiates as D.A.A.G., R.A., pending the arrival of Lieutenant Colonel Minto Elliot; and Captain R. H. S. Baker, R.A., officiates for Major Keith as D.A.A.G., R.A.

Captain the Hon. G. H. F. Somerset, Aide De Camp to H.E. Sir James Fergusson, has been granted leave to Europe for four months.

Captain F. J. W. Eustace, R.A., has been appointed A.D.C. on the personal staff of His Excellency Sir Donald Stewart.

Captain A. Brett, Paymaster 1st Battalion Durham Light Infantry, has been transferred to the 10th Hussars, and will embark with the regiment for England, relieving Capt. Montgomery, who has been transferred to the 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade.

An exchange of battalions has been sanctioned between Captain W. S. D. Lizardet, 1st Battalion, and Captain J. G. Anderson, 2nd Battalion Leicestershire Regiment.

The left wing of the 16th Regiment N.I., will leave Poona by rail on the 26th December for Baroda in relief of the head-quarter wing of the 26th Regiment N.I., which will proceed by rail to Bombay for embarkation in the Ozarwitch on the 29th instant for Kurrachee, whence the regiment will move by rail to Quetta District.

The troops to embark for England in the troop ship leaving Bombay on the 17th January next are L-1 R.A., from Secunderabad (at present halted at Poona), and the time-expired men from the Allahabad, Oudh, Meerut, Sirhind, Lahore, and Rawul Pindi divisions, and Kohilkund, Gwalior, Saugor, and Peshawur districts.

The two squadrons of 2nd Horse now in the Quetta district were to leave Sibi on the 15th inst. for Jacobabad, by route march. They were expected to arrive at their destination on the 18th inst.

The Government of India have decided that the baggage mules of all mountain batteries, both British and native, shall no longer form part of the battery establishment as hitherto, but shall belong to the transport department.

There is some reason to believe, the Pioneer says, that another military reform suggested by the Government of India has been recently vetoed on reference to England. "The Indian Government, we understand recommended that appointments to the Staff Corps should be made in future direct from Sandhurst; but the home authorities, in this, as in larger matters, refused their consent. The refusal seems to be the more strange as the chief defects of the present system fall undeniably upon the British corps which furnish recruits for the Staff Corps; while the Indian Army reaps all the advantage of getting its officers ready-made and trained in the unapproachably good school of a British regiment."

A parade of all the troops forming the camp of exercise at Meer Meer, took place on Friday for inspection by Lieutenant General Hume, G.B., commanding the Lahore Division.

The following officers of the Army Veterinary Department will proceed to England on completion of a tour of Indian service:—First-class Veterinary Surgeons J. Skoulding, F. Blomley, A. R. Queripel, and J. Burton; Veterinary Surgeons G. F. Davis, S. Gillespie, A. O. Webb, and A. Bostock. The following veterinary surgeons will relieve the above officers:—First-class Veterinary Surgeons O. Ewing, J. W. Evans, J. Matthews, and E. H. Hazleton; Veterinary Surgeons L. J. Blenkinsop, R. W. Raymond, T. Pottinger, and J. T. Twiss.

The 4th (King's Own) Regiment arrived at Poona by route march from Bombay on Dec. 22.

A revised edition of the regulations for the discharge of soldiers of the British forces serving in India has been prepared in the office of the Adjutant General for India for general guidance. Alterations or additions which may become necessary will be promulgated in standing orders.

A rifle match has been arranged between the British Burmah Volunteers and the Calcutta Volunteer Rifles; distances, 200, 500, and 600 yards; seven shots at each distance. The match will be shot off in January.

The 5th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry marched from Jhansi on Dec. 10, en route for Gorakhpore, under the command of Colonel E. Venour, and will arrive at the latter station on the 20th inst., where it will be quartered.

The Peshawur Ordnance Depot has been closed. The Ordnance establishments and stores have been transferred to Rawal Pindi.

Captain A. S. Cowdell, Nilgiri Volunteer Rifles, has been granted leave out of India for seven months.

Captain W. Montgomery, Paymaster 10th Hussars, has been transferred to the 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade; and Captain Brett, Paymaster, 1st Durham Light Infantry, Allahabad, will proceed home with the 10th Hussars.

Lieutenant W. J. Newell, 11th Bengal Native Infantry, intends proceeding on furlough to Europe about the end of January.

The following postings have been made:—Captain S. Apthorp, and Lieutenant J. C. Sutherland, Border Regiment; Lieutenant J. A. H. Walford, Royal Welsh Fusiliers; Lieutenant A. K. Huddart, Leinster Regiment—to the 1st battalions of their regiments. Lieutenant A. H. Thomas, East Surrey Regiment, and Captain G. H. Owens, and Lieutenant S. Mitchell, Border Regiment, to the second battalions.

Surgeon Major E. Odierne, 20th Punjab Native Infantry, proceeds to Europe shortly on sick leave.

The following transfers of medical officers have been ordered:—Surgeon Majors J. Reddick from Ferozepore to Landour; R. E. Carew from Benares to Darjeeling; J. Davis from Jhansi to Kasauli; G. H. Lloyd from Bareilly to Juteh; J. Hoystead from Moradabad to Murree; and F. W. Wade from Meerut to Dalhousie.

Surgeon Major J. Temple, V.C., Army Medical Department, has been appointed Secretary to the Surgeon General Her Majesty's Forces, in succession to Deputy Surgeon General R. Wolseley, vacated on promotion.

Surgeon Major J. Kelly, 15th Ludhiana Sikh is about to proceed to Europe on sick leave.

The services of Surgeons J. Armstrong, J. M. Young, and G. Jamieson have been replaced at the disposal of the Commander in Chief.

The Government of India have decided that the baggage mules of mountain batteries, British and native, shall belong to the Transport Department, as in the case of the batteries of Punjab Frontier Force, the baggage mules of which are already borne on the rolls of the Transport Department. They are no longer to form part of the battery establishments. The number of mules per battery have been fixed at 76 and 48 for a British and native battery, respectively.

The 2nd Battalion Royal Lancaster Regiment, from Bombay, and the head-quarter wing of the 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade, from Ahmednuggur, will arrive at Poona on the morning of the 22nd instant. The 19th Regiment N.I., from Malegaon, en route to Deesa, will arrive at Poona on the 29th instant. The Rifle Brigade will resume its march for Belgaum on the 27th inst. in relief of the Royal Irish Fusiliers.

It has been ruled that military officers of the Public Works Department are exempt from payment of municipal taxes on horses maintained for the performance of their duties, which come within the scope of the term "military duty."

HYDERABAD CONTINGENT.—A correspondent writes:—"Consequent on the promotion of Captain Baddeley, R.A., Commandant, No. 1 Field Battery, to a majority, he has vacated and proceeded to England. Major Baddeley, R.A., has made over charge of his battery to Lieutenant Urquhart, R.A., Bolaram. The headquarters of the 6th Infantry, which were temporarily located during the Monsoon at Linga Soogoor, have removed to Raichore. Major Hamilton, having returned from furlough, assumes command of the 2nd Cavalry, vice Lieutenant Colonel Bell, who is absent on two years' furlough. Captain Preudfoot, second in command, 2nd Infantry, Billichpur, having proceeded on general leave, Lieutenant E. W. St. G. Welchman, Wing Officer and Adjutant, is appointed pro tem., and Lieutenant Hunt, Officiating Adjutant. Lieutenant Urquhart, R.A., has been appointed Commandant of No. 1. Field Battery."

The Pioneer says:—"The presidential army system, like many other time-honoured abuses seems destined to flourish for an indefinite period. Some four months ago the Indian Government fired a parting shot at it in the form of a despatch in which all the objections raised by the India Office to the recommendations of the Reorganisation Commission were once more demolished. But the shot was only fired in despair. The fate of the reforming scheme had already been practically decided, and now, we are told on good authority it has been formally abandoned."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 16, 1884.

THE INDIAN ECCLESIASTICAL ESTABLISHMENT.

WE desire to draw the particular attention of all our readers to the admirable letter with which we have been favoured by Sir Laurence Peel, which appears in another column. We are sure that every one who has lived in India in friendship and sympathy with the people of the land, will heartily endorse all that Sir Laurence says with regard to the attitude of the native mind towards "a man of God." In this journal we have frequently dwelt on the tolerant character of the Indian (and especially of the Hindoo) mind, and its readiness to acknowledge and respect all that is comely and of good report in every religion of the world. At the time when Mr. Gladstone was endeavouring, for the relief of Mr. Bradlaugh, to expunge the name of God from the official proceedings of the House of Commons, it was pointed out with great justice by Sir Stafford Northcote that such public and official impiety would cause pain, not only to Her Majesty's Christian subjects, but also to myriads of devout Hindoos and Mussulmans; and when the report of that speech reached India, its statement was confirmed by certainly more than one of the vernacular papers of the day, and was contradicted by none.

It may, therefore, confidently be declared that no thoughtful or liberal-minded native would have ever thought of objecting to the small expenditure of the Government on the spiritual needs of its Christian servants, but for the mean and jealous incentives of such mischief-makers as Mr. Baxter, M.P. It is not the wealthy merchants or planters who will be effected by the withdrawal, which Lord Ripon is said to contemplate, of the means of grace; for these classes invariably support their own clergymen. The sufferers will be the soldiers, the railway employes, and the working class of the Christian population generally; and whilst it is quite clear that they have a claim on the Government which hardly the most perverted mind will deny, it is equally plain that the wide-spread demoralisation of this class would be an evil to the country far worse than the petty charge now incurred for the provision of spiritual ministrations.

THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

THE London Committee formed to oppose the Bengal Tenancy Bill will meet early next week, to take measures for the presentation of a memorial to the Secretary of State, and to take counsel together as to other ways of urging on the Indian Government the advisability of withdrawing the Bill. Mr. C. T. Buckland, late of the Bengal Civil Service, and formerly Member of the Bengal Board of Revenue, who has consented to preside over the deliberations of the committee, brings to the discussion probably a wider and more practical knowledge of the subject than is possessed by any other living man; for there is hardly any part of Bengal with which Mr. Buckland has not become familiar, during his long and distinguished career, either as a District Magistrate or as a Commissioner of Division.

We presume that the efforts of the London Committee will be mainly directed to the twofold task of enlightening public opinion in England on the merits of the question, and of endeavouring to obtain from the Secretary of State some check on the Viceroy's precipitate action. But surely it may be hoped that the movement may have some direct influence on the action of the Government of India itself. Until recently, that Government was largely guided by the opinions of those officers, its "eyes and ears," who had borne the burden and heat of the day in Indian administrative work; and any expression of public opinion was received, not merely with respect, but actually with gratitude and approbation. In these degenerate times, any expression of opinion, adverse to the preconceived notions of the inner circle of the Government, seems to be received with annoyance and suspicion; and appears to have the unfortunate effect of "setting up the backs" of Mr. Ilbert and Lord Ripon. But with the disappearance of the controversy that has most bitterly exercised the celestial minds, that which has raged round the Ilbert Bill, we may fairly hope that more moderate counsels may prevail in regard to a question to which neither the Viceroy nor the law member can in any wise be held to be personally committed.

A correspondent writes to an up-country paper:—"At his annual inspection of the 2nd Battalion Royal Scots Fusiliers on the 15th inst., Major General Sir C. P. Keyes, K.C.B., was apprised of claims on account of the depreciation of the value of the rupee by some of the men of the battalion, who pointed out to the Major General that whereas the present value of the rupee was 1s. 7½d., this year it was charged to them as pay for 1s. 10½d., and that each rank, from private upwards, was receiving seven weeks' pay a year less than at home or anywhere else in the British Empire out of India. Sir Charles was pleased to forward the complaints to the Commander in Chief, and to call the attention of His Excellency to them, and those of a similar nature made last year, when the value of the rupee was 1s. 8d. The result is to be communicated to the men."

The head-quarter wing of the 7th Regiment N.I., under command of Lieut. Colonel Adam, will arrive at Bombay from Quetta on the 27th instant. From Bombay the regiment moves by rail to Poona. After the manoeuvres there, it will proceed to Ahmednagar.

MAIL NEWS.

An agreement has been come to between the Anglo-Indian and Eurasian Defence Association and Government, by which the Ilbert Bill question will be settled. The agreement accords to every European British subject the right of being tried by a jury, the majority of whom shall consist of his countrymen. Native district magistrates and sessions judges are the only classes of native officials who are to have the power of trying European British subjects.

This agreement is deemed a satisfactory settlement of the question at issue by the Defence Association, and all further agitation on their part will cease.

The Anglo-Indian Press generally express satisfaction at the settlement of the question, but fears are expressed that the jury system will prove unworkable in some districts.

The native press mostly denounce the compromise in strong terms, and urge that it would be better to withdraw the bill altogether than to extend the jury system as proposed. Some of the papers in Bombay at first bitterly attacked Lord Ripon, but on receipt of explanations from Calcutta their tone was considerably modified.

It was at first intended to organise a grand native demonstration against the compromise, but this project has since been abandoned, and the leaders of native opinion in Bombay have decided to await the course of events.

Friday, the 4th of January, is the day fixed for the further consideration of the Ilbert Bill in the Viceroy's Council. As already stated, after a debate the Bill will be submitted to the care of a select committee.

The expeditionary force despatched against the Akas crossed the Assam frontier on Dec. 17. Overtures have been made by the raiders with the view to a settlement of the difficulty, but it is believed that these were made simply with a view to gaining time.

The troops advancing on Bikaner had reached on Dec. 18 a place called Parbatsar. There is small prospect of any armed resistance, several of the rebellious Thakurs having already given in their submission to the political agent.

It is announced that Mr. Samuel Plimsoll, ex M.P. for Derby, will visit India shortly with the view of ascertaining whether it is practicable to establish an export trade with Europe of any kinds of Indian sea fish.

A statistical conference is being held in Calcutta, under the auspices of the Revenue and Agricultural Department, all the directors of agriculture in the various provinces being assembled to consider the Secretary of State's request for fuller information on agricultural subjects.

The Ameer of Cabul is reported to be negotiating for the possession of Bajour.

The Persian Envoy has left Kandahar on his way back to Persia.

The Hon. R. P. Bruce, M.P. for Fife, and Mr. Buchanan, member for Edinburgh, who have been staying at Government House as guests of the Viceroy, are about to leave Calcutta on a visit to Burma.

The Lieutenant Governor of the North-Western Provinces returned to Allahabad on Dec. 20.

It is stated that Sir Robert Stuart, Chief Justice of the High Court of the North-West Provinces, will retire on his pension in March next.

The Hon. W. W. Hunter has been appointed an additional member of the Viceregal Council.

The Bengal Government do not apprehend that it will be necessary to adopt special measures for the relief of scarcity in the province, owing to the partial failure of the crops.

On Friday night, Dec. 21, a large meeting of natives was held at Madras to protest against the passing of the Madras Municipal Bill, now awaiting the Viceroy's sanction. A memorial stating the views of the meeting was adopted, and will be sent to the Viceroy.

The Hon. D. F. Carmichael, the retiring senior member of the Madras Legislative Council, left Madras for England on Dec. 21.

A collision occurred between two goods trains on the B. B. & C. I. Railway near Surat on Sunday morning, Dec. 23. The driver of one of the trains was killed, and the fireman of the train was severely injured.

The young Rajah of Kolhapore, who has for some years past been suffering from insanity, died on Tuesday, Dec. 25, from the effects of a fall which he had during a struggle with his keeper.

The Nizam of Hyderabad arrived in Calcutta on Saturday morning, Dec. 22.

The Calcutta Exhibition continues to be well attended by the natives.

Sir Douglas Forsyth's visit to India is said to be entirely connected with railways, and primarily with the West of India Portuguese and Southern Mahratta Railway Companies, of which he is chairman.

HOME NEWS.

ACCIDENT TO THE INDUS.—A telegram received through Reuter's agency from Malta states that the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Indus grounded in the harbour there on Sunday night, but has since been floated. She received no injury.

INDIAN REMITTANCES.—On Saturday the Indian Council sold remittances for as much as Rs. 21,00,000. Five lakhs were in bills on Bombay, 2½ being taken at 1s. 7½d. and 2½ at 1s. 7 17-32d. per rupee. Of the other sixteen lakhs, which were in transfers, 8½ were allotted on Calcutta at 1s. 7 9-16d., five more on the same Presidency at 1s. 7 19-32d., and 2½ on Bombay at 1s. 7 9-16d. This very large allotment of Council drafts for a Saturday, above all other days, shows the existence of a very strong demand for remittances, due to the advance in the value of money in India.—On Monday the demand for drafts continued very strong, as many as 18 lakhs of telegraphic transfers having been sold. Fifteen were disposed of at 1s. 7 19-32d., and three at 1s. 7½d. per rupee, the whole being for Calcutta. The recent large sales of bills and "t. t. s." have been effected at prices well over the average rate of 1s. 7½d., on which the Budget estimate was based. The Council hope to sell over twenty crores, to yield £16,300,000. According to Messrs. Page and Gwyther the average rate up to January 11 was 1s. 7 48d., the average during the corresponding period of 1882-3 being 1s. 7 9d.—On Tuesday transfer rates advanced to 1s. 7 19-32d. in Calcutta, and 1s. 7½d. in Bombay, and the market for bar silver being without any available supplies, was firm. Some parcels were wanted for India, but scarcely any business was done, and the nearest price at the close was quoted at from 50 13-16d. to 50½d. per ounce. China exchange rates were unaltered. Rupee Paper was dull, and closed at 78½ to 78¾ for the Four and 81½ to 81¾ for the Four-and-a-Half per Cents.

INDIAN PRINCES.—His Highness the Maharajah of Travancore has received from the President of the French Republic the decoration and the letter patent of appointment as Officier de l'Instruction Publique. The Nawab Nazim, of Moorshedabad has been laid up with paralysis and is under the medical treatment of Dr. Shircore, civil surgeon of Moorshedabad. His Highness has also Hakim Golam Nobi Khan, of Calcutta.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.—We are informed that a committee is to be appointed in the middle of next month for the purpose of inquiring into the whole question of railways and other public works in India.

At a meeting of the Beaconsfield Junior Conservative Association at Portsmouth a few days ago a vote of thanks was passed and ordered to be conveyed to Mr. Charles Marvin for the services he had rendered the public by his works on Central Asia.

INDO-CHINESE PROFESSORSHIP AT UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.—The subject of the appointment of a professorship of the languages of South Eastern Asia having been for some time under consideration by the Senate of University College, London, it was yesterday decided to appoint M. Terrien de la Couprie to be the first occupant of the chair. The special study which the new professor has made of the comparative relationship of Chinese and the Indo-Chinese group of languages will add considerable importance to his lectures upon the languages and literature of those nations now so prominent in the Franco-Chinese question. M. De la Couprie has for some time been prominent as the advocate of a new, and at first sight startling, theory of the origin of Chinese writing and literature, a partial exposition of when he put forward in his recent learned and lengthy study of the "Ti-King," the oldest book of the Chinese, published in the journal of the Royal Asiatic Society. In this work, and in his monograph on the origin of Chinese civilisation, he has endeavoured to establish a connection between the early Chinese Bak tribes, or Hundred Families, and the Akkadian tribes of Babylonia. This theory has received the support of some of the leading students of Assyriology, and also of Professor Douglas, who, in conjunction with M. De la Couprie, will publish a complete translation with notes and commentary of the "Ti-King."

OBITUARY.—Mr. Charles John Wilkinson, Recorder of Rangoon, whose death was announced on the 12th inst., was son of the late Captain J. J. Wilkinson, of the Royal Navy. He was educated privately, and subsequently at Trinity Hall, Cambridge, where he distinguished himself. After being called to the Bar in November, 1859, he proceeded to India, and practised there with much success, but after some time abandoned the profession of the advocate for various appointments under Government, including the Acting Administrator Generalship of Bengal, the Judgeship of the Chief Court Lahore, and the Recordership of Rangoon. The last-named office required of its occupant no unusual physical and mental powers, and Mr. Wilkinson threw himself heart and soul into the conscientious discharge of its duties. Here, however, ten years' hard work in an unfriendly climate, with but scanty repose, undermined his constitution, and, after finally acting as a Judge of the High Court at Calcutta, he returned to this country during the long vacation (for the second time in twenty-one years). On his way out, in October, the recorder was seized by his last illness, and came back, only to die on New Year's Day. Mr. Wilkinson strove hard to obtain from the executive the necessary powers for creating a High Court at Rangoon.

LONDON PRODUCE MARKETS.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson say there has been rather more steadiness in the markets this week, with prices somewhat firmer. The public sales of coffee have included a fair assortment of colour Plantation Ceylon, which realised full to higher rates for the fine and bold qualities. To-day, several parcels East Indian of the last crop only partly sold at barely the previous value. Brazil continues firm and in demand, although quotations are 20s. to 22s. above those of January of last year. Receipts of Rio at the shipping ports since July 1 have fallen off to the extent of about 800,000 bags, and the total exports rather more. Santos returns differ slightly from the previous years. The stock of coffee in the chief ports of Europe is still 20 per cent. over the large stock of last year at the same time. Cocoa has met a steady inquiry at about late rates. The estimate of the European beet-sugar production is again raised, and now stands at 2,135,000 tons, a supply exceeding that of any previous season, and the increase is chiefly in Germany. Last week's advance has therefore been lost. A large business is reported in refined, and the Clyde market is dearer. The leading French makers have made further sales of fine loaves for delivery here at the depressed prices already referred to. Raw sugar continues slow. A cargo of St. Lucia sold for Liverpool at the very low price of 16s. 3d. per cwt. Crystallised Demerara is taken readily by the trade at prices. There are no reported sales in new crop Burmah rice. Common grades of China tea support the recent improvement, and the market generally is firm. The rather large quantity of Indian at public sales has met with a good demand at full prices. White pepper has further advanced, and black Singapore is held for higher rates. Zanzibar cloves have sold at 56d. to 58d. per lb. above the lowest rates current last week, owing to speculative operations. Sago and tapioca have met with more inquiry.

COFFEE.—The Plantation Ceylon in public sale, comprising 182 casks, forty-seven barrels and bags, included fine marks, which were again dearer, the advance upon these during the week being about 2s. Good middling to hold, 83s. 6d., to 96s.; and fine bold, 101s. 6d. to 105s.; greyish middling, 76s. 6d. to 78s. 472 casks 861 bags East India were chiefly bought in, a few lots good to fine Coorg selling at 85s. to 98s. 6d.

COTTON.—The market is steady, with a moderate general inquiry. The sales amount to about 1,600 bales, including Tinnivelly, at 4 13-16d., to 4 15-16d.; Western 4 1/4d.; Northern, 4 3/4d.; Forward delivery, American, February-March, 5 63-64d., for middling l.m.c.

FRIDAY EVENING.

INDIAN TEA.—Nearly 20,000 packages have been brought to market, and disposed of at prices comparing favourably with last week's rates, demand being especially good for low-priced leafy and broken sorts, of which supplies are somewhat short.

COTTON.—There has been a steady market at firm prices. The sales amount to about 1,500 bales, including Tinnivelly at 4 13-16d. to 4 15-16d.; Northern 4 1/4d. For arrival, Tinnivelly, October-November, Cape, 4 13-16d. for good firm. Forward delivery, February-March, 5 63-64d.; March-April, 6 3-64d., for middling l.m.c.

SATURDAY EVENING.

TEA.—From Messrs. Hawes and Hertz's fortnightly report:—Indian sales were resumed on the 3rd inst., since when 27,944 packages have been brought to auction, a large proportion of which consisted of common to medium grades from 8d. to 1s. 2d., and have sold readily at firm prices. Souchongs and Pekoe Souchongs are in very good inquiry at improved rates, the better liquoring sorts especially being briskly competed for. Pekoes show alteration, lowest grades being slightly firmer, medium to fine rather slow of sale at about previous prices. Broken Pekoes have sold with irregularity, and in some instances rather dearer. Finest Pekoes and Broken Pekoes are scarce, really fine liquoring sorts commanding extreme rates. Ceylon.—Offerings have comprised 762 packages which sold readily, with brisk competition, being, with but few exceptions, teas of characteristic thickness and flavour. The following are some of the prices realised:—Kaw—Broken Pekoe, 1s. 11 1/2d.; Pekoes, 1s. 5d. to 1s. 7 1/2d.; Souchong, 1s. 1 1/2d. to 1s. 3 1/2d.; broken tea, 8 1/2d. to 10 1/2d. Dolosbage, Windsor Forest—Broken Pekoe, 2s. 3d.; Pekoes, 1s. 9 1/2d.; Souchong 1s. 4 3/4d.; broken tea, 1s. 2d. Avoca—Broken Pekoe, 2s. 4d.; Pekoes, 1s. 9d.; Souchong, 1s. 5d.; broken tea, 1s. 5 1/4d.—Kandoloya—Broken Pekoe, 2s. 3 1/2d.; Pekoes, 1s. 8d.; Souchong, 1s. 2 3/4d. broken tea, 1s.

MONDAY EVENING.

COTTON.—There has been a good demand, with a considerable business, doing at full prices and an occasional advance. The sales since Friday amount to about 6,000 bales, including Tinnivelly at 4 7/8d. to 4 15-16d.; Western at 3 3/4d. to 3 13-16d.; Northern at 4 7/8d.; Bengal at 3 7/8d. to 4 1/2d.; Scinds at 3 3/4d.; Salem at 4 3/4d., and saw-grinned Dhawar at 4 1/4d., per lb. For arrival, Tinnivelly, October-February, Cape and Suez, 4 13-16d. to 4 7/8d., for goods fair, 4 15-16d. to 5d., for fully good fair. Forward delivery American, February-May, 6 1-64d. to 6 10-64d., for middling l.m.c.

TUESDAY EVENING.

TEA.—To-day's sales were again large, comprising 22,377 packages all "without reserve." With occasional exceptions the prices realised were steady. Some breaks of first crop Ningchow Congous sold from 9 3/4d. to 11d. per lb., and several parcels of new make Congous in boxes from 8d. to 1s. 2d. per lb.

COFFEE.—The small quantity of Plantation Ceylon at auction, 121 casks 26 barrels and bags, chiefly fine marks, realised full prices at 87s. 6d. to 98s.; bold, 103s. to 106s.; other grades from 76s. to 84s.; small, 63s. to 65s.

COTTON.—Less business passing, but prices of East Indian descriptions fully maintained.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY CAPTAIN FRED BURNABY,
Royal Horse Guards.
Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cooke's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a 'medicine man' had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

NEW NOVELS AT ALL THE LIBRARIES.
AGNES MORAN. A Story of Innocence and Experience. By THOMAS A. PINKERTON. 3 vols.
Mr. Pinkerton's characters are real and consistent, and the plot, although elaborate, is clear and intelligible. The mystery of Agnes Moran's father is melodramatic, yet neither forced or far-fetched. All this goes to establish the fact that Mr. Pinkerton, while retaining his humorous powers and philosophic fancies, can yet compose an elaborate dramatic tale, and skillfully follow the growth and development of character.—Daily News.

TAY. A Novel. By the Rev. W. O. PHILL. 1 vol.
"Tay" is the name of a most delightfully humorous creature who is at once heroine and autobiographer. The author has a quick perception and a large fund of humour. It is a delightful story, and very far above the level of ordinary novels.—Whitehall Review.

THE JEWEL IN THE LOTOS.
A novel, by MARY AGNES TINKER. 1 vol.
This novel has very considerable merit. It is a story in which there is a good deal of adventure and some sensationalism. There is also much of genuine feminine sweetness and tenderness, and the reader will not fail to be greatly interested in it.—Scotsman.
"A perfect woman, nobly planned, is the heroine of this remarkably clever book—purity of thought, and breadth of idea mark every line the author writes. She is equally powerful as descriptive, and her descriptions are photographic in their clearness, and we must look upon this novel of hers as undoubtedly a chef d'œuvre."—Whitehall Review.

By T. R. E. HOLMES.

"Always lucid, often powerful and picturesque. . . In the sifting and collating of all this enormous store of information he has shown not only industry, but judgment, and, for the most part, rigid impartiality."—Scotsman."Of these and many other stirring deeds of that heroic time, Mr. Holmes gives a most interest-

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 23, 1884.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Jan. 4; Madras and Allahabad, Jan. 2; Calcutta, Jan. 1.

Tax Select Committee on the Criminal Procedure Act Amendment Bill—no longer the Libert Bill—has reported unanimously; and the text of the amendments has been telegraphed in outline by the Calcutta correspondent of the Times. The Bill, in its present form, contains nothing that can possibly be objected to by any Anglo-Indian—and so far, so good.

Lord Ripon's Government must, we supposed, be credited with so much prudence as to have ascertained that the new arrangements are workable without an amount of administrative inconvenience that will be absolutely intolerable.

It will not, however, be easy for Lord Ripon to meet the native demand—which was formulated at the public meeting in Calcutta last week—for the extension of trial by jury to natives.

The demand must surely have been foreseen, as it is a perfectly natural and reasonable one. How much better would it have been if Lord Ripon had elected frankly to accept the "Option" clause—giving to Europeans the option of being tried by a European magistrate, and to natives the option of being tried by a native magistrate.

We trust that the resolutions passed at yesterday's meeting of the London Committee formed to oppose the Bengal Tenancy Bill, will warn the Government of India to desist from this insidious attack on the Permanent Settlement. We give the text of the resolutions in another column, and shall revert to their consideration next week. It will be seen that the objections taken to the Bill refer to its injurious action against the interests of the actual cultivators of the soil, as well as to its confiscation of the property of the zemindars.

We are glad to observe that Sir Henry Ricketts has given the weight of his vast experience, and of his great reputation as the first living authority on Bengal revenue questions, against this pernicious Bill.

The interesting occasion of the centenary of the Bengal Asiatic Society—Sir William Jones's Society, and the parent of the Royal Asiatic Society—has been worthily marked by a banquet, and the election of some European savants as honorary members. Professor Monier Williams, who is already an honorary LL.D. of the University of Calcutta, is appropriately included.

The Viceroy's trip to Hyderabad ought to be instructive as well as interesting, and it is well that the concordat has enabled His Excellency to pay this compliment to the first Feudatory of the Empire.

Our readers will rejoice with us to hear of the improved health of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal. Mr. Thompson can be ill-spared just now; and it will be a fortunate thing for the province if a short sea-voyage prove sufficient to set him all right again.

We trust that the excitement of the past year in India has not prevented due preparation for the adequate representation of the Empire at the forthcoming International Health Exhibition at South Kensington. Much that is interesting and valuable, in the departments of Food, Dress, Dwellings, and Education, ought to be shown from India; and we would draw the especial attention of all our readers to the notice of the "Indian" sub-committee, which we give in another column.

The Times of India gives the following obituary for the week previous to the departure of the mail:—Mr. Keekabhoy Purbhoodas, editor of the Guzerat Mitra; H.H., the Maharajah of Bettia; Major G. Comber Retired List; Mr. T. Martin, C.E., M.I.C.E.; Raja Promothonath Roy, of Digapathia.

With respect to the Freight Market, the following is made up by the Englishman to Dec. 31:—

"We have now two weeks' business to report upon, but owing to the Christmas holidays, there has been almost none transacted. What was done has been restricted to steamers on the London berth, sailing vessels having been almost entirely neglected. The market may be said to close very quiet at the quotations given both by Cape and Canal. Only three ships have been fixed during the week, one for Havre, one for New York, and one from two Coast Ports for Mauritius. Our unfixed tonnage stands at 40,511 tons."

The Indigo Market is thus reported upon by Messrs. Moran and Co.:—

"Owing to the intervention of the usual Christmas holidays, only two public sales have been held since our last issue. The catalogues comprised 2,150 chests, of which 2,020 chests found buyers. The demand for good and fine Indigos has continued to be somewhat slack, but the market for these and for good consuming qualities closes rather firmer. There is little change to notice in the value of ordinary and middling kinds, but prices are slightly in favour of buyers."

We take the following on the same subject from Messrs. J. Thomas and Co's Price Current:—

"In consequence of the Christmas holidays only two public sales have been held during the week, at which 2,092 chests were sold. Prices have ruled rather irregularly for Bengal and Tirhoot, the desirable qualities selling at fully the rates of the former week, while defective kinds occasionally sold easier. But few Ondes have been offered, and although not desirable as a rule, they fetched fully former prices. The quantity out of the market, including the private sales, is about 106,000 maunds, against about 90,000 last year. Of the quantity remaining for sale, it is estimated that about 7,000 chests consist of European Indigo, of which more than 4,500 are Tirhoot."

MESSRS. J. THOMAS AND CO. give the following with respect to the Tea Market:—

"We have only one public auction to report—viz., that held on Dec. 20, when 11,217 packages were sold. There was a good general inquiry, and prices were, if anything, rather firmer. In consequence of the Christmas holidays, the next sales would not be held until Jan. 3."

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

The following is the official summary of the reports of the Agricultural Department on the state of the weather and prospects of the crops throughout India, for the week ending Dec. 26:—

"Rain continues to fall generally in the districts of the Madras Presidency where harvesting of paddy, ragi, &c., is in progress, and standing crops are in good condition, though partial injury has been done in one district by excessive rain. There has been no rain in any other province except slight showers in Dharwar, Bombay Presidency, and Sandoway in British Burma. The rabi crops in three districts of the Bombay Presidency are suffering from blight, otherwise prospects are good. In Mysore rice is being harvested, and standing crops promise well. In the Berars and Hyderabad cotton is being picked and the kharif harvested, and the weeding of rabi crops has commenced. Prospects continue fair in Central India and Rajputana, but cotton has suffered from frost in Ulwar, and rain is needed in that State. In the Punjab, the North-Western Provinces, and Oudh, the rabi crops on unirrigated lands require rain, but prospects are on the whole favourable. In the Central Provinces prospects are excellent. In Bengal the outturn of the rice harvest is very poor, and will, it is expected, fall short of the estimate in Eastern Bengal and Orissa. The rabi has much benefited by the last showers, but more rain is much wanted. In British Burma the rice harvest is reported to be well advanced and the prospects generally excellent. Cholera still lingers in the Southern Presidencies, and small-pox and fever are generally prevalent though not severe. Prices continue to rule high in Bengal."

The following is the Bengal report:—

"There has been no rain this week in any part of the prevince; rain is much wanted for the rabi crops in Behar; elsewhere the prospects of these crops have been improved by the late rain; the harvesting of the rice crop is being vigorously pushed on, but generally there is a very short outturn; even in Eastern Bengal and Orissa the crop will be less than was expected; in Furreedpore it will be only a seven-anna crop; in Mymensingh about the same crop is expected, and in Chittagong the outturn will not be satisfactory; in Cuttack and Balasore the average yield will be about ten annas; high prices continue to prevail throughout the province, though new rice has come into the market in several places; fever is still prevalent in several districts."

TELEGRAPHIC INTELLIGENCE.

THE following is the usual weekly telegram from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, dated Jan. 20:—

"The report of the Select Committee on the Ilbert Bill, and the Bill as amended by the Committee, were presented to the Legislative Council on Friday, but no discussion took place. The following is a brief outline of the amendments:—First, the power of appointing justices of the peace will remain on the present footing; second, all district magistrates and sessions judges will be ex officio justices of the peace, and have jurisdiction to try European British subjects; third, district magistrates will be empowered to pass upon Europeans a sentence extending to six months' imprisonment or 2,000 rupees fine, or both, but a European charged before a district magistrate will have the right to require a jury, of which not less than half shall be Europeans or Americans, or both; fourth, a European committed for trial before a Sessions Court will have a similar right, even in districts in which trials are not ordinarily by jury; fifth, where a jury is claimed before a district magistrate, and he sees reason to believe that a jury composed in the manner required cannot be constituted before himself without unreasonable delay, expense, or inconvenience, he may transfer the case for trial to another district magistrate or session judge, and the Court to which the case is transferred shall try it with the same powers and procedure as the transferring magistrate. Besides these amendments, some additions have been made which apply not merely to cases against Europeans but generally. The High Court is empowered to order the transfer of a case whenever such order appears expedient for the ends of justice. It is provided also that when before the commencement of the hearing of a case notice is given to the Court of intention to apply for a transfer, the Court, before calling upon the accused for his defence, shall adjourn the hearing, so as to give reasonable time for an application for transfer. Power is also given to the High Court to order a commitment. The report concludes with a recommendation that the amended Bill be passed and take effect from the 1st of May. The final reading will be taken on Friday, but as the report has been signed by all the members of the Committee, including the representatives of the Government and the Opposition, there is not likely to be much discussion, unless, indeed, one of the native members proposes an amendment.

"Meetings held in the planting districts have expressed some dissatisfaction with the compromise. It would seem, however, that its terms were not clearly understood by the persons present at those meetings, and the discontent will doubtless disappear when it is seen how completely European rights are safeguarded. The Anglo-Indian Press and the great majority of the public are disposed to accept the arrangement.

"A meeting of natives, called for the purpose of considering the subject, was held here on Tuesday, and was fairly well attended, although most of the leading members of the community were conspicuous by their absence. Three resolutions were carried. The first expressed approval of the principle of the original Bill; the second was to the effect that the meeting regretted the decision arrived at, as adding to invidious race distinctions, and as likely to cause administrative inconvenience; while the third urged the Government to give a similar right of jury trial to natives.

"The Asiatic Society of Bengal celebrated its centenary on Tuesday. The proceedings began with a special meeting, the Hon. H. Reynolds, the President of the Society, being in the chair. Six gentlemen—namely, Dr. Jowle, Professor Hæckel, Charles Meldrum, Professor Sayce, E. Senart, and Professor Monier Williams, were elected honorary members. A review of the society's work since its foundation was laid on the table, and congratulatory telegrams from various British and foreign societies were read. The members and guests then adjourned to dinner. After the chairman had given the Royal toasts, the Viceroy proposed the toast of "Prosperity to the Asiatic Society." Mr. Reynolds, in reply, gave an interesting sketch of the history of the society and of various distinguished men connected with it, from Sir William Jones downwards. Professor Monier Williams replied to the toast of "The Guests."

"Lord Ripon leaves Calcutta to-morrow week for Madras by the Indian Government steamer Clive. He will stay in Madras two days and reach Hyderabad on February 2. After a stay there of five or six days he will return by the same route, possibly visiting Madras on the way. He is expected to arrive here about the 15th.

"The Lieutenant Governor continues to make satisfactory progress. It is now hoped that a short sea voyage may suffice to restore him to complete health. Mr. Thompson can ill be spared at present, but his health must be the first consideration. It is characteristic of his energy and sense of duty that during the two months' idleness which preceded the operation performed upon him he never ceased work for a day; and in spite of acute suffering, and in defiance of the orders of his doctor, he attended the two days' debate on the Ilbert Bill, and even spoke at some length. His debilitated appearance on that occasion was the subject of general regard.

"A steam plough and cultivator, sent to the Exhibition by Messrs. Fowler and Co., was shown at work on the Maidan on Thursday morning in the presence of a large number of spectators. The plough worked well. It may be doubted, however, whether it, as well as other agricultural machines in the Exhibition, is not too expensive and complicated to meet Indian requirements.

"There is no further news of the Akha expedition; but somewhat fuller details are published of the operations already announced. The Akha defences are described as consisting of a triple stockade, chevaux de frise, and bamboo spikes, erected on a hill rising rapidly and steeply from the river Majdhoroli. The crossing of the river was very difficult, the stream being 100 yards broad, and very deep, with a strong current and icy cold water. The little force appears to have undergone much hardship. The correspondent of a Calcutta paper writes:—

"During the day the men on the left bank of the river wear great coats, while those on the right bank sweat in the sun in thin khakee coats. Officers and men who have been in the campaigns in Burma, China, Afghanistan, and Egypt declare that these were simply milk and water compared with the miseries of this campaign."

"The Duke and Duchess of Connaught visit Agra in the first week of February, and will be the guests of the Lieutenant Governor of the North-West Provinces.

The Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab is now at Dera-Ismail-Khan, which city is in some danger of being again overwhelmed by the shifting stream of the Indus. In Dubar on Wednesday Sir C. U. Aitchison addressed a deputation of Provindahs and representative headmen of Shoranis and Waziris. Dresses of honour were given to the Provindahs, warrior merchants trading between Central Asia and India, and Sir C. U. Aitchison thanked them for their services during the Takhit survey expedition. He also thanked the Shorani headmen for assisting on the same occasion, though he added that some youths of the Khidarzia and Manzai section were ill-advised enough to attempt opposition, and paid the penalty with their lives. He informed the Waziris that three of their headmen who surrendered during the Waziri campaign were released, and a fourth who was surrendered after the campaign will be released hereafter. He further stated that he regretted to hear that some of their sections were at feud with the Chittanis and Bakha Kheyls on the Bannu frontier, and advised them to try and settle their disputes amicably before the Deputy Commissioner.

"During the last week there has been some commotion in the Khyber. Abdulla Mir Most, an influential Khyber headman, was shot in a blood feud on Monday. He was long our chief enemy in those parts, but since 1879 has been a steady friend in return for a subsidy given to his tribe, the Kukt Kheyls, for keeping the pass open.

"A news letter from Cabul in a Lahore paper mentions that the Ameer is repairing the Shere Ali's breech-loading cannon factory, which has been in ruins since the war."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE ALPS AND THE CAUCASUS.*

ALTHOUGH most people are quite aware that Italy has of late years taken a position as one of the great powers of Europe, their information is probably chiefly limited to the facts that the army is organised on the German model, and that she has some very large ironclad ships, and exceptionally heavy guns. In the book entitled "Military Italy,"* we have an exhaustive memoir on the power for offence and defence of Italy, written by a man who evidently can speak as an authority on military subjects, and especially on engineering ones. The writer shows that the main object with Italy is, defence against France first, and against Austria secondly, as the two powers to which her territory lies most open. Her chief line of defence is naturally the Alps, but as the whole length of the peninsula lies open to attack from the sea, she concentrates her naval strength in "a few great warships, larger, stronger, swifter, and more heavily armed than any afloat," with the view of breaking up any attempt at invasion by sea. At the present time, Italy is in need of time and rest for organisation, but she appears to have carried her organisation to a very fair pitch.

The number of men that can be mobilised on occasion of war may be put at two millions, the numbers for April, 1883, being 1,928,972 men. But soldiers know well what numerous deductions must be made from such paper calculations. That Italy can, after all fair deductions, completing her garrisons, which are very numerous, and retaining two army corps for the defence of the peninsula, utilize about 350,000 men as a field army within a fortnight, is a fact most important for all who care for foreign politics. Italy having hitherto consisted of many various principalities, and of men of different original nationalities, the problem lay before the constructors of the kingdom and army to "weld them into one homogeneous whole," if we may use a phrase once used of our army, but more appropriate in this case. The arrangement made is that Italy is divided off into five zones, and each unit, tactical and administrative, is formed of equal fractions from those zones. No doubt this will tend to strong nationality, but it will, of course, give an amount of difficulty to mobilization of reservists on emergency which, though noted by the author, is to our mind hardly given sufficient weight.

Another speciality of the Italian army is that of the Alpine troops, who are recruited from mountaineers, and always kept more or less on a war footing. A French writer has himself pointed out the enormous advantages of this arrangement at the outset of a campaign, when hours are worth weeks later on. The author not only goes thoroughly into the whole strength and organisation of the Italian Kingdom, but he also indicates the probable strategy of future passages of the Alps, and, what may be important to our Indian officers and officials, shows how of late since the formation of immense armies, there is a change of ideas as to the strategical and tactical methods of defence of mountain chains and passes. A small, but clear and excellent map accompanies the volume, showing the main points and places referred to.

"Notes on the Caucasus" differs very widely indeed from the book reviewed above, and has not this similarity, which would be very noticeable in any other nation, that we have two gentlemen of military attainments who have evidently spent years in acquiring as full a knowledge as circumstances enabled them of the countries in which they found themselves, and who publish the information pro bono publico. But the notes on the Caucasus give no statistical details, the writer is very discursive, yet often very amusing in his digressions. He has no very high opinion of Russian military management, telling some very queer stories on these subjects, and is strongly of opinion that British co-operation with the Turks in the Caucasus in 1877 would have had most serious results for Russian dominion in those parts. The book will be of great use to future travellers in the Caucasus, and also may be valuable to those considering military politics of the future; for there are many who think, and perhaps rightly, that in the neighbourhood of the Caucasus and Armenia lies the vulnerable point of Russia, on which should be made the counter attack for defence against the long-planned invasion of India.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PHILOSOPHIC ICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I beg to call your attention to the leading article in the Edinburgh Review for this month, which is full of philosophy and secular morality.

The writer omits to take into account the question of sympathy in governing nations; it was sympathy that made Sir Henry Lawrence the best ruler whom India has had during the present century; it is the want of sympathy which is now daily separating us from our Indian subjects.

Does any sensible Englishman believe that all our grand phrases about civilisation and education and Hobbes will help us in the least when a rebellion breaks out? The British nation at the present moment is ignorant of what is passing in the minds of its Indian subjects; it does not learn this from either Indian or English newspapers. The Viceroy is as much in the dark as we are; he must learn the feelings of the subject races from those who know them, from those who are in constant personal communication with them. The Viceroy can neither understand the language of the aristocracy, nor can he speak one idiomatic sentence to them.—Your obedient servant, T.

Jan. 22.

The Governor General in Council has sanctioned the formation of a Volunteer Rifle Corps in the Moorshedabad and neighbouring districts, to be under the orders of the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal. The corps is to be divided into two troops, with its headquarters at Berhampore. The proposed designation is the "Central Bengal Mounted Rifles."

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

LORD KIMBERLEY AND MR. ATKINS.

THE full text of the letters which have appeared in the Times on the question at issue between Lord Kimberley and Mr. Atkins, were published in our issue of yesterday, having been specially wired from Bombay on the arrival of the mail. The perusal of the letters in their entirety will only confirm the impression which had already been created by their telegraphed summary. The reticence of the Secretary for India, in the face of the direct challenge which was thrown down by Mr. Atkins, becomes even more significant than it appeared before, when considered in connexion with the unmistakable terms with which the challenge is formulated by the Indian delegate. It is not denied by either one or the other of the two secretaries whose combined energies it seems to have been necessary to employ, in order to escape from the difficulty which the noble lord's exuberance of verbosity had placed him, that Lord Kimberley charged Mr. Atkins with some message to convey to his constituents in India. And, in the absence of any definite statement of the terms which the Secretary, according to his own accounts, actually used in the interview, it is impossible to conceive of any probable alternative to the version which Mr. Atkins has given to the public, and which is entirely consistent with all the facts of the case. Lord Kimberley desired, it is admitted, to send some special message to the Anglo-Indian population. He accepts all the responsibility of his declaration that the Bill originated in Calcutta, and that he is not chargeable with what he evidently feels is the discredit of its initiation. Whether or not he laid stress upon that declaration is a point that can never be authoritatively settled until an instantaneous photograph, representing Lord Kimberley in the act of uttering the sentence in question, is produced for the inspection of the jury. The assumption of a specially oratorical attitude at that particular moment would lend countenance to Mr. Atkins's account. But, in any case, the statement itself was made, and it must have been made for the purpose of being telegraphed to Calcutta. Statesmen of Lord Kimberley's experience do not talk to working men's delegates for the sake of enjoying the social pleasure of conversation. Mr. Atkins was fully justified in regarding every utterance of the noble Secretary as intended to convey a distinct idea with regard to the attitude of the Home Government towards the Bill. Nor does it require any testimony to make assurance doubly sure as to the disgust with which Lord Ripon's well-meant effort to assist his Whig friends, by introducing Brightite theories into Indian politics, is now regarded in London. And the moral of the whole story is the necessity which is incumbent on the Defence Association to stand loyally by the line of principle on which it has taken up its stand. It is now sufficiently evident that Lord Ripon's colleagues are putting no pressure upon him to persevere in the unhappy campaign on which he has entered. They would be only too glad to hear that he has fallen back on his base of operations, and was preparing to re-embark his troops at the port of arrival.—Englishman, Dec. 15.

MR. SEYMOUR KEAY AND THE "DECCAN TIMES." MR. JOHN SEYMOUR KEAY has filed the following plaint in the Small Cause Court at Hyderabad against Mr. J. Sausman, the editor, and Mr. F. Sausman, the printer, of the Deccan Times. His plaint is:—

"That on the 27th day of November, 1883, at Secunderabad, the defendants published in the correspondence columns of a newspaper called the Deccan Times, the following words concerning the plaintiff:—Sir,—In your leader of the 24th instant anent the Hyderabad Railway scheme and Mr. Keay's letter to the Viceroy, you 'say Mr. Keay's connection with Hyderabad is much known.' It is so, and as Mr. Keay seems bent on gaining notoriety both in India and in England as an agitator, perhaps it is well to let the outside world know a little more of Mr. John Seymour Keay than it now does, if he persists in his present course. His posing as the champion of the dumb millions of India and protector of the English investing public, is amusing, and would be intensely funny but for the fact that those who know him least might give him credit for his professions. During his residence at Hyderabad, which embraces a period of considerably less than twenty years, he has not been notably disinterested nor benevolent. Probably these attributes were on a par with his integrity and modesty, kept in the background until required. He knows how to 'largely advance his pecuniary interests, and at least one of his transactions showed his proficiency in reducing those of others. The complete and skilful preparation and manipulation by Mr. John Seymour Keay of a document substituted by him for another document taken by him from the hand of a native who could not read English, and the causing that native (in the belief that he was signing the original document which had been read to him) to sign the substituted document, whereby the banking firm of Poorunmull suffered to the extent of many thousand rupees, are facts well-known in the bazaars of Hyderabad, but in all probability not to that 'English investing public' Mr. Keay has just now such a disinterested desire to protect 'Verbum Sap.' That again, on Dec. 4, 1883, the defendants published in the editorial columns of the said newspaper the following words:—Mr. John Seymour Keay. Our correspondent, 'Verbum Sap.,' writes that he is collecting the particulars of the transactions published in his letter of the 27th November last, and finds that the firm of Poorunmull suffered to a far greater extent than was at first believed. We hope to be able to lay before the public very shortly this matter in the fullest detail. Mr. Keay, as will be seen from the correspondence which we published in our last issue, demands from us the retraction of the letter of 'Verbum Sap.,' which is stated to contain 'false and grossly defamatory imputations' concerning his character, under the threat that legal proceedings will be taken against us, should we fail to comply with his demands. It needs no threat to induce us to do the right to Mr. Keay, or indeed to anybody who feels that he has been maligned in any way by anything published in this journal, and had we been only convinced that the imputations cast upon Mr. Keay's character in the letter of our correspondent were false, we would have done full justice, and have made ample apology. But since we have no reason to doubt the truth of the allegations made by our correspondent, it would be unjust to the writer of the letter signed 'Verbum Sap.' were we to do what Mr. Keay demands of us. Indeed, it would be unjust to the public as well. Mr. John Seymour Keay poses before the public as one of a body of able, earnest, disinterested and fearless men, 'who have placed their time, talents, and influence gratuitously at India's disposal,' and the public have some right to know what manner of man Mr. John Seymour Keay is. As we remarked in our leading article which appeared in the issue of November 24th, 'Mr. Keay's connection with Hyderabad is much known; but had Mr. Keay not brought himself before the public, we should have taken no notice of him whatever. As a public man, he must not be surprised if the public take some interest in him, and in his sayings and doings, and he must expect public criticism of his public acts. That the said publications are false and malicious. Wherefore plaintiff prays judgment for H. S. Rs. 10,000 damages, the costs of the suit, and such further relief as to the court may seem proper.'—Civil and Military Gazette.

THE ILBERT BILL COMPROMISE.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 2.—An ultra-Radical native paper has an article, written in all seriousness, on the concordat, that is, nevertheless, very funny. It says:—"It is over now. We went to sleep. We have been doubly befooled. We have been terribly tantalised. It is, indeed, a cruel sell. The dear Bill has quite slipped through the fingers. It has been deliberately consigned to the tender mercies of its sworn enemy, a step-maternal faction. It has been throttled on the highway, shafted in the dark, and left for dead. We have wooed not wisely, but too well. We have fallen down at the feet of stocks and stones of our own setting up. We have been in haste to hero-worship. We are now rudely awakened. The father himself has abandoned his pet child. The undying pang is that we must quarrel with a Ripon frailty. The name is Ripon. This concordat is a most bewildering surprise. It is an impossibility that has happened. It altogether destroys the hope of a science of history. It ruins our faith in European statesmen, attenuates our faith in European honour itself; but Lord Ripon will have no peace. He never in his life sought for peace in this world before this uncharacteristic compromise, and now he hardly deserves any. He is to scorn delights and live laborious days."

The following telegram was sent on the 25th ult., from Madras to his Excellency the Viceroy:—"Telegrams published in local papers about the Ilbert Bill Settlement cause great alarm in the native public. Settlement considered worse than the present law. Public meetings will be held and memorial will follow." The following reply has been received from the Private Secretary to his Excellency the Viceroy:—"Your telegram 26th. Considerable misapprehension appears to exist as to compromise; full explanation will be given by Government on Jan. 4."

In discussing the terms of the compromise, the Indigo and Tea Planters' Gazette says:—"The principle of the Bill as understood by the Government of India is the principle admitted in 1872—namely, that native magistrates should have the power of trying Europeans. As we read it, then, the opposition have given up their principle, and the Government have upheld and carried in triumph theirs—namely, that native judges shall have jurisdiction over European British subjects outside of Presidency towns. It seems to us that on this point the Government have scored a victory. . . . Englishmen asked to be tried by their peers, meaning by that, that the officer before whom they should appear in criminal matters, should be a man of their own race, with a knowledge presumably of the race, characteristics, social habits, and modes of thought of Englishmen. The presiding judge, however, according to this agreement, is not to be an Englishman, he is to be a native of a certain judicial standing, who will have to 'charge' the jury and keep them straight on points of law. Where the jury, containing a majority of European British subjects, are to come from in some mofussil districts, is not quite apparent to us."

The Calcutta correspondent of the Pioneer says:—"There are signs of marked dissension among the leaders of native opinion. The men of extreme views who control the majority of native papers published in English and vernacular alike, do not conceal the chagrin which the concordat has caused them, and are giving vent to their feelings in furious diatribes against the Defence Association and the members of the Government. Lord Ripon so far escapes anything but mild censure, all blame being thrown upon his advisers; but it is obvious that with the Bengal Tenancy Bill looming over the landed interest, a great change will soon take place in the attitude of native leaders towards the Viceroy. Men of moderate views among the native community accept the concordat as a way out of the difficulty, and, like sensible men, are ready to do all in their power to heal the breach created by the late agitation. In proof of my assertion that dissension prevails, I need only refer to the proceedings at a meeting of the National Mahomedan Association called to consider the concordat. Many most influential Mahomedans attended. Muntvi Ahmed Hossein, who occupied the chair, said that he thought that practically the compromise would become a dead letter, because in the main sal—of which he could speak from twenty years' experience—cases in which Europeans were concerned were made over entirely to joint magistrates or deputy magistrates, and seldom or never did district magistrates sit to hear such cases. Nawab Syed Vilayat Ali said that he quite approved of the compromise, and did not think that it was necessary to oppose it. A native barrister, Mr. Lutfur Rahman, one of a class of agitators only too common here, after expressing the wish that his name might not appear in any report of the proceedings, attacked the compromise in unmeasured terms, until, having indulged in strong personalities, he was reproved by Moulvi Serajul Islam, who rose to order, and proposed that the discussion should be postponed until after the next meeting of the Legislative Council. This was agreed to."

The Indian Mirror says:—"It will be a pitiable spectacle to the civilised nations of the West, no less than a source of hope to the enemies of England, and especially to Russia, whose sleepless eye is incessantly fixed on India, as a prey it would like to seize, to perceive that the Government of India, even when supported by the voice of 250 millions of the native races, has been unable, in the face of 20,000 Englishmen, to carry out to its logical conclusion, not its own, nor even a novel policy, but the settled and declared policy of the Imperial Government of England for the last fifty years. It would have been more becoming the dignity of the great Government of India, and it would have saved it from falling in the estimation of its native subjects, if the Council had asserted its responsibility by rejecting any terms with an association representing no responsible section of the Indian community, and by referring the measure for the decision and settlement of the House of Commons. . . . But however strong may be the indignation which our countrymen feel at this awkward predicament, it is impossible not to feel the deepest sympathy for the Viceroy personally, who with the best of intentions has either been forced to sanction this underhand compromise, or been imposed upon by its apparently attractive appearance. At this critical juncture our countrymen must combine firmness with judgment and discretion, instead of allowing themselves to be led away by the excitement of the moment. They must carefully consider and ponder over the future consequences of any steps which they may take in connection with their present extremely embarrassing and difficult position. We feel sure they will do nothing which will give their enemies cause for triumph, or enable them to deprive this country of its true and best friends."

Bengal Public Opinion says:—"The Bill, as is proposed to be amended by the concordat, will be a standing monument of native incapacity fairly to try Europeans alone, and will embody in a permanent form all that has been urged against the natives of the country by the Defence Association and its advocates. We would rather wish that the Bill should not pass, than that it should pass in this form. The race-antagonism will be perpetuated. If the Executive Council is so much afraid of the Defence Association, let the Bill be dropped altogether, and let it be openly confessed that Her Majesty's plighted words were never intended to have any meaning at all. . . . The natives of the country will have no confidence upon the benevolent intentions of the Government, and the mutual distrust and race-hatred will go on increasing. Of course, Lord Ripon will be safe from personal insults, but the whole country will be inflamed. The fire will burn slowly but steadily, and one day the smouldering ashes may burst into a terrific conflagration. It behoves the Government of this country to take a calm and serious prospective view of the whole situation before forcing on the natives of India an enactment by which they gain nothing, but by which their enemies gain everything—even virtual immunity from criminal punishment. We really cannot see how a Government which cannot withstand the opposition of 70,000 British settlers in India, taking every soul to be against this measure, which really is not the case, will stand against the opposition of two hundred and fifty millions, if ever they should take a position bodily to oppose any Government measure. We still hope Lord Ripon will not betray the solemn trust which the people of this country have reposed in him."

The Indian Nation says:—"The idea will not unnaturally spread abroad that Government has yielded to the language and the attitude of force, to menaces and threats. We are perfectly aware, however, that every Government is more or less a Government of compromise, and is charged to preserve its equilibrium between contending forces. But since the best men of the European community have proclaimed to the world the value and the paramount importance of the trial by jury, and have at last succeeded in procuring the advantages of it for the lowest classes of their body why should we not, in the name of all that is just and righteous, have the same right extended to our community. Why should not men like Mr. Justice Romesh Chunder Mitter, Mr. W. C. Bonnerjee, Mr. Ameer Ali, and a host of others, on principle, have the same right accorded to them in the mofussil. Let the Council do this, and it will then be impossible to lay the charge of weakness or partiality at the door of a Government which has won so much of our affection."

THE BOMBAY VERNACULAR PRESS ON THE ILBERT DIFFICULTY.

THE following are some further translations of the opinions of the Bombay Vernacular Press on the concordat:—

The Bombay Samachar says that it would not be safe to hazard an opinion on the subject of the concordat made between the Defence Association and Government, as the telegram sent by the former appears to be one-sided and incomplete. It is evident, however, from the text of the telegram that the principle of the Bill in its original form will to a certain extent be effected. In itself the trial of a European by a majority of his own peers would not be considered objectionable, but the question is, will the native magistrates have the power to agree, or disagree, as the case may be, with the European jury? If the magistrate has simply to take their verdict, the proposed change is simply worthless. The form in which the proposed change is announced is rather amusing. It has the appearance of being a 'compromise' or a 'treaty' between an alarmed Government on the one hand, and the Defence Association on the other. But whether it is a 'compromise' or anything else, the conclusion is irresistible that the Europeans have at length to bow to the decision of the Government. The Bill, the entire withdrawal of which the Calcutta Europeans all along insisted upon, will at last be passed in one form or another. They will have in the end to abandon their "natural" and "dear" rights which they made so much of. Although it is true that the rights of the natives have been considerably narrowed, they will be satisfied with the Bill, and thank the Viceroy for the many discomforts he laid himself open to in his endeavours to improve the status of the native magistrates of this country. The Samachar only hopes that the Viceroy will pass the Bill in such a form as may not prove to be inoperative.

The Akbari Soudagar says that the continued agitation of the Europeans, both in India and England, has at length been successful. The Viceroy, in return for the abuse and insults showered upon him, has presented the European community with a parcel of sweets. Nobody ever expected that a determined and impartial man like Lord Ripon would ever consent to such an arrangement. It would have been a good thing if the Ilbert Bill had never been introduced. The Viceroy will leave this country after the expiry of the usual period, but the seeds of bitterness that he has sown will bear fruit for a long time after his retirement.

The Lame-Jamshed declines to believe in the accuracy of the telegram sent by the Defence Association. A man like Lord Ripon would never make or allow to be made the changes proposed therein. The entire withdrawal of the Bill would be much better than the changes announced in the telegram. It is hard to believe that a Viceroy who has shown that he did not care for the abuse of the press and the people, and who treated with contempt those who showered insults upon him, should now consent to a compromise with the Defence Association. The Viceroy could never be guilty of the weakness of committing such a political blunder.

The Indu Prakash says:—"This 'concordat,' as it is called, between the Government and the Defence Association, seems very much like a sudden rebound on the part of Lord Ripon. We are not yet in a position to say under what circumstances the understanding was arrived at, and it is to be hoped Lord Ripon will take the public into his confidence by throwing light on the subject. In the meantime, it is only fair to His Excellency that we should suspend our judgment. We cannot, however, conceal from our readers the fact that in native circles here, the compromise is not considered satisfactory. There appears to be a general impression that Lord Ripon has not only given way very suddenly, but has surrendered the principle and everything for which there has been so hard a fight keeping the Bill alive only in form. It was certainly desirable that before settling terms with the Defence Association, Lord Ripon should have allowed the public an opportunity of discussing them. There is, of course, this thing to be said in favour of the concession of jury trial, that the tendency of all criminal legislation in India is to introduce it in the case of the natives also. But in any case, a concession so vast should not have been made hastily, and, what we particularly regret, in the form of an agreement with a body whose insulting treatment of the Viceroy and blasphemous language against the natives, have been the cause of much irritation and annoyance. On the nature of the concessions themselves we reserve our opinion for the present."

The Jame Jamshed, in its issue of Dec. 24, says that the telegrams received by the English dailies appear to be a correct exposition of the concordat between the Defence Association and Government, and it is not to be wondered that the arrangement has given rise to widespread disappointment in native circles. It is a well-known fact that the English press, and in some instances the presiding English judges, have shown their contempt for the manner in which European juries have dealt with members of their own nationality charged with criminal offences against the natives of this country. It will be simply a mockery of justice to try a European criminal in the mofussil by means of a jury composed of a majority of Europeans. If Lord Ripon is really guilty of the weakness he has been accused of, all that can be said is, that even English noblemen of magnanimous minds sacrifice their honesty in the case of poor India. How can one ever believe that a number of mutinous Englishmen, who have abused and insulted the Viceroy in the light of day, and who have held out threats to drive him and his Government away from India and to possess themselves of the Government, should ever have such concessions made in their favour? The whole thing comes to this, that Lord Ripon has taught the natives a lesson that if they desire to do away with an obnoxious bill they must rebel against the Government, and insult and abuse them. The peace of the country has been unnecessarily disturbed. There must be some good and valid reason for the Viceroy to have condescended to enter into an arrangement with the Defence Association, and if there is one, for the sake of this country and for the sake of himself, it should be made public as soon as possible. But whatever may be the reason, it is a great political blunder to pass the Bill in its present form.

The Jame-Jamshed, in a further leader on Wednesday, says that from telegraphic information received from Calcutta by certain leading native gentlemen of Bombay, it has now become clear that it would be a wicked action to take the Viceroy any more to task for the concordat published in the English newspapers. It is said that the Viceroy wished to pass the Bill in the form recently alluded to by Lord Northbrook at a meeting in England, but having had reasons to apprehend that some of his councillors who had hitherto supported him might secede and oppose the Bill, he had to consent to the concordat. The step taken by the Viceroy appears to be just when it is considered that a personal opposition would have entailed his resignation and a consequent disadvantage to this country. Considering the good that Lord Ripon has done and intends doing, people should not care if two such Ilbert Bills are withdrawn, but should wish for his longer stay in this country. It is, therefore, incumbent on the native press, taking these circumstances into consideration, to entertain good feelings for the Viceroy, and to considerably strengthen his hands in the matter. If India had the good fortune of having a strong-minded and kind-hearted Secretary of State like the Viceroy, the Ilbert Bill would surely have been passed. But why should the noble Viceroy be made to suffer for the weakness of the Secretary of State for India?

In another article of the same day, the Jam says that the writer has seen a letter addressed by Principal Wordsworth to Mr. K. T. Telang, in which he expresses his satisfaction that the principle of equality has been preserved in the concordat between European and native magistrates, and recommends that there should be no protest made against other details appearing in that concordat. He gives hopes that if the proposed system of trial by jury fails, the European and native magistrates will get equal rights some three or four years hence. If the Ilbert Bill had been entirely withdrawn, it would never again have seen the light of day, at least in the present generation. Principal Wordsworth, in his letter, also states that more than one member of the Viceroy's Council must have changed his opinion on the subject of the Ilbert Bill.

The Bombay Samachar says that the Government have as yet taken no measures to contradict the Defence Association's telegram, and the concordat therefore must at all events be carried. That portion of the arrangement which relates to the trial of Europeans by a majority of their peers, could hardly be carried into effect without a gross miscarriage of justice in the mofussil. The English press talk about the people being satisfied with the arrangement come to by Government with the Defence Association, but the Samachar indignantly asks who are these "people" that appear to be satisfied? Certainly not the two hundred millions of the inhabitants of this country; but a few thousand Europeans.

THE COMPROMISED BILL.

It was not, of course, to be hoped that the terms upon which the Government and the leaders of the Opposition to the Ilbert Bill agreed last week, would be accepted without a murmur by the native community; a party to the transaction which does not appear to have been represented at the settlement. So many appeals have been made to native feeling, so much has been done to rouse it, such encouragement has been given to the idea that the passing of the Bill was to be regarded as a test of the sincerity of English professions of fair play to India, that its collapse could scarcely fail to be the signal for an outburst of disappointment and indignation. Yet the native official has gained some substantial concessions to the susceptibility which found a substantial grievance in the want of jurisdiction to try an European British subject. As a sessions judge and a district magistrate, he will henceforth stand exactly on the same footing as his European compeer. It is true that this equality has been purchased at the price of probable administrative inconvenience in those districts to which it has not been thought expedient hitherto to extend the jury system. It is true also that the race distinction remains exactly what it was in the case of all native officials below the rank of magistrate of the district. The first class European magistrate will still, as before, exercise a jurisdiction over Europeans, that a first class native magistrate will not; and so far, Mr. Ilbert's programme of sweeping away all distinctions, based on the nationality of the magistrate who is to exercise jurisdiction, from the list of privileges enjoyed by Europeans in criminal cases, has collapsed. Still, the whole so-called grievance was a sentimental one; and the young native officials, who look so becoming, some years hence, magistrates of the district or sessions judges, will, we must hope, feel the happier and better for the thought that, when that elevation has been attained, they may possibly enjoy the questionable privilege of presiding over a jury, a majority of whom are Englishmen, in the trial of a European British subject. We have never been able to understand why a native official should be anxious to obtain a cognizance of a class of cases which even European officials is inscrutable, and there are native officers, we must suppose, whose vanity tends in this curious direction.

It is something gained that anyone should be pleased; the satisfaction, however, of the newly-empowered officials will be dimmed, in the minds of the more thoughtful, by the reflection that the jury system is one which, whatever be its other advantages, invariably breaks down when sect, race, or party-feelings are called into play. An Englishman on his trial before a jury of Behar or Assam planters, would undoubtedly have heavy odds in favour of his acquittal, how cogent soever might be the evidence against him. Trial by jury is not a form of trial much in favour with lawyers, legal writers, or the public, just at present. It figured conspicuously in English political history a century ago, and the aid which it lent to the assertion of popular liberty against monarchical aggression has rendered it dear to Englishmen, despite its notorious drawbacks as an instrument for finding out the truth. In India, however, no such honourable associations surround it; it has secured impunity on various occasions to offenders of whose guilt not a shadow of real doubt existed in any reasonable person's mind; and the sessions judges in more than one district have formally complained of the venality, cowardice, and weakness with which native jurors perform their duties. It was on a well-grounded distrust of this form of trial, it will be remembered, that the Lieutenant Governor of these Provinces partly founded his opposition to the investiture of native sessions judges with the new powers. On the whole, we confess that, for our own part, we should have been inclined to regard the sentimental grievance of a few judicial officers of less importance than the substantial grievances to which the introduction of this form of trial may easily give rise.

However, the step is now taken, and the only thing to be done is to provide, as well as the circumstances allow, against any ill-results. It is one of the numerous pieces of ill-luck which have befallen the Viceroy in connection with this measure, that he should have been personally ready and willing—so well grounded rumour asserts—to make a settlement on this very footing as long ago as last August, but should have been on that occasion overborne by the more stubborn spirits of his Cabinet. How much heart-burning, how many animosities and, not least, what a fearful waste of official time, temper, and nerve might have been avoided, had the present concession at that time been admitted as a possible solution of the dispute.

THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

We have shown that to a very large proportion of the ryots of Bengal the proposed Rent Bill will not be an unmixed boon. It may perhaps excite a smile if a few lines are devoted to plead the cause of those who are about to be immolated to gratify the views of statesmen whose theoretical ideas of what the relations between landlord and tenant should be have induced them to bring forward a measure which the European community consider will be fraught with disaster to the rural community of Bengal.

The landlords of Bengal have been, and are, the most law-abiding community in these provinces. There is not the slightest apprehension that, if even their rights are transferred to others and their property depreciated, as they have too good reason to fear will result from the proposed legislation, they will be found otherwise than law abiding and orderly. This case is very much on a par with the landlords in Ireland whose property a Radical Cabinet has confiscated, and whose tenantry has been ranged against them. In both cases, it may be said that this orderly and law-abiding spirit is the result of selfishness. In both cases the maintenance of law and order is as much to the interest of the landholding classes as it is to the Government itself. However this may be, the fact remains that in both countries the Government has looked to the landholding classes for aid in times of trouble, and in neither country did it look in vain.

There is, however, something more than a mere avoidance of breaches of the law which is essential to good government. There is, first of all, the feeling of confidence between the Government and those who stand next to them in the country. There is also the feeling of good will between the owners of land and the tillers of the soil. We consider that the proposed legislation gravely imperils both. We may be guilty of repetition and nonsense in discussing these points, but our avowed object is to have the measure which is being sought to be forced upon a community who have never expressed any desire for radical change withdrawn, and the law of landlord and tenant recast in the light of facts and of practical experience. It may be, perhaps, too much to hope that when, in the face of the official opinions which we have laid before our readers, this Rent Bill is still to be brought forward, any words of ours would have any influence. We think, however, we are justified in showing how the Bill, as it at present stands, will militate against the conditions which we have said are essential to good Government and the general welfare of the people. The proposed legislation will destroy all security of feeling as regards their property in the minds both of those who possess property now or who may hereafter acquire it.

For ninety years, no matter how widely the right of Government to interfere between landlord and tenant may be construed, the Government of India has practically not interfered in any way which could be considered as depriving landlords of their property and giving it to others. Act 10, though it defined occupancy rights, never sought to create a proprietary interest in those rights, and its provisions were accepted without much cavil. During this long period men bought and sold estates. Property in land was considered in this, as in all countries where ancient traditions and conservative feelings prevail amongst the people, as the most desirable investment. The successful lawyer, physician, or merchant looked upon it as the form in which he would secure to himself and his children the well-earned fruits of his labour.

For ninety years this has gone on, and, despite the recent construction given to the word "proprietor," it has gone on amongst the people of this country under the impression that the word bore the meaning ordinarily attached to it in the English language. The people were never undeceived upon this point by the many Governments which successively have held their sway in this country. They were not undeceived for the reason that, up to the present time, no Government dreamt of attaching any other interpretation to the word.

They are told now that the word "proprietor" has a totally different significance, and that those who imagined themselves, and whose fathers before them imagined themselves, to be owners of the land which they inherited or purchased, are merely a kind of Government rent collectors, and that Government has never surrendered to them the proprietary rights which they fancied were guaranteed to them by the Permanent Settlement. They are told, moreover, that, supposing they accept with meekness the cup that is placed before them, they are not to delude themselves into the idea that they have seen the last of their misfortunes, and that they now can know for certain the conditions under which they are to live, and the relations which for the future will exist between them and the cultivators of the soil.

It would have been easier to understand the question had we been told that a grave social or political necessity had arisen in which it was the duty of the landholding classes of the community to come forward, and, by surrendering, once and for all, a portion of their patrimony, to remove the difficulty and give peace and security to the country. We can conceive that, were such a social or political necessity clearly shown to exist and to call for sacrifices, many would have considered it to have been a call of duty, and would, without much demur, have obeyed that call. Whether they demurred or not, there would have been some reason in the demand, and some justification for the call made upon the pockets of the zemindar. But not only does no such necessity, either social or political, exist, but the landlords of these provinces are not even promised that this measure is to be the last of its kind. On the contrary, we are told that, so far from having the elements of finality in it this Bill has all the elements of unrest. We are told that its distinct tendency is to create a class for whose benefit it will again be necessary to legislate; and that to the then Government is to be left the task of introducing the legislation that will then be necessary. We are not told at whose expense this newly-created class is to be delivered from the bondage into which the Rent Bill will bring them, but zemindars cannot be blamed if they suppose that they will once more be the victims, and that the word "own" which is attached to the definition of proprietor in this Bill, will be held to mean something wholly different to the ordinary acceptation of the term.

Not only, then, are the landholding classes widely awakened from the sleep of fancied security in which for ninety years they have reposed; but they are told that, like the budmashes who are under police observation, they will be liable to be roused again whenever the vigilant Radical watchman goes his rounds and fancies that things are suspiciously quiet and wishes to make a stir amongst the community. Thus every element of security in landed property will have been widely shaken if this measure passes into law, and that confidence in the stability of the rights of property under the Government which has hitherto prevailed in this country, will be to a very serious extent lessened, if not entirely destroyed. One of the first essentials, therefore, to national prosperity will be weakened.

As to the relations between the landlord and the cultivator of the soil, whatever cordiality existed between those classes will inevitably disappear. It matters not that this legislation is not the outcome of any complaint on the part of the ryot. The landlord cannot help seeing that his property and his rights have been made to suffer for the benefit of the tenant. It would not be natural if the result will not be a decided tension in their mutual relations. The ryot and the landlord may have the most friendly feeling one towards another, and may wish to give expression to that feeling by entering into an agreement for their mutual advantage. They are no longer to be permitted to do so, unless they invoke the interference of the revenue officer, who is to decide whether the agreement is a fair one, or in other words, whether two men whose interests may be identical are capable of securing these interests without interference.

If this is not unnecessarily interfering with the most fundamental right of sane adult beings, we fail to see what is. The zemindar, on the one hand, is told that Government cannot trust him to abstain from wronging and defrauding his tenant. The ryot is told that he is far too great a fool to be allowed to judge for himself what his interests are, and must submit to have them decided for him by the revenue officer.

Nothing could be imagined more degrading to either, or which could more tend to set one against the other. There are undoubtedly bad landlords in Bengal, as there are bad men in every community, but why the entire class should be, as they are by this prohibition of the right to contract with their ryots, branded as unscrupulous and grasping men, we really fail to see. If there are bad landlords in Bengal there are also many good ones. There are men who, in years of scarcity and drought, have cheerfully remitted their rents, and have done what in them lay to better the condition of the people on their estates, and avert calamity from their midst. Yet all are branded alike. Their proceedings, as regards agreements they may wish to make with their tenants, must either pass the inquisition of an officer of the Government, or be considered as only worth the paper on which they are written. The upshot of this prohibition will be, in the cases in which landlord and tenant are on friendly terms with each other, that the imprimatur of the revenue officer will never be sought for, but an agreement to pay an illegal cess will take its place.

This very habit of the exaction of illegal cesses shows us how utterly unnecessary and even futile it is to try and prohibit the right of contract between landlord and tenant. On many estates those cesses, where not considered oppressive or unjust, are paid as a matter of course, yet the ryot knows as well as possible that, if he wished to dispute them, no court would decree them against him. The new law will thus, as we have seen, tend to effect an estrangement in cases where the landlord and tenant are on terms of friendship and mutual goodwill with one with another. Its effects where relations are already at all tense between them will be tenfold more marked. The ryot will have it in his power to inflict annoyance in every shape and form upon his zemindar. He will be able, if he himself is on bad terms with his fellow villagers, to become a perfect pest to them by subletting his land to persons who may be utterly objectionable. He can, as Mr. Monro describes, introduce a state of things in which a landlord will see his property occupied by ryots with rights of occupancy in the shape of his bitterest enemies. Where a law which defined existing rights and provided for the due discharge of existing obligations would have had a tendency to have thrown oil on the troubled waters, and to have brought any disputes, when they exist, between landlord and tenant to an end, the present law, by giving undue power to one class at the expense of the other, will but prolong the conflict and render still more bitter any mutual feeling of hostility. The tendency of the proposed law will be, therefore, to estrange the zemindar from his ryot where they are now on mutually friendly terms, and where such a happy relation does not exist between them, it will intensify the ill feeling which already exists.

We have thus seen that the result of the proposed Bill, which is being introduced without any necessity to demand its enactment, will be to shake the confidence of the landholding classes in the stability of the right of property in land, and to disorganise the relations that at present exist between landlord and tenant in Bengal. We do not think, therefore, we are asking too much when we desire that this Bill, which is founded upon purely theoretical ideas, should be recast on the basis of the true requirements of the country; that these requirements should be ascertained after patient local inquiry, and from the experience of officers whose training and work in the interests of the people of this country entitle them to form correct opinions as to the direction in which legislation is needed.—Englishman.

INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION, LONDON, 1884.

WE have received the following memorandum from the Indian Sub-Committee, with a request for its publication:—

"The object which this Sub-Committee think should be kept in view in considering the arrangements for the Indian Section of the Exhibition is the illustration, in as vivid a manner as possible, of the actual life of the masses of the people of India, as regards the three especial objects of the Exhibition, their Food, their Dress, and their Dwellings, also, but to a less extent, their Education.

"The Committee feel that they must not rely solely on contributions from India, but that they must also expect the aid both of traders and of private individuals in England, in securing an effective Indian display. They are, therefore, anxious that it should be distinctly understood that applications for space from Indian traders in England will be readily considered, provided of course, that the proposed exhibits are of a character suitable for the Exhibition.

"As regards Group 1, Food, it will be desirable that there should be complete collections of the ordinary food of the people in some selected districts of each principal Province. Where possible, it would be desirable to have the prepared food itself; when this cannot be done, the raw materials and models might be shown. Thus for a Deccan district, samples of Bajra and jowar, the chief grain foods, of wheat, dhal, and pulses, and of the flour as prepared by the natives for use; models of the chowpattis or loaves; then the condiments, salt, pepper, pickles, &c., as actually used; ghi, gur, and sweetmeats with the grindstones; models of "chulas," or cooking stoves, and the like; cooking pots, dishes, &c., as used. For a coast district, rice in its various preparations, salt and dried fish, &c.

"Specimens also of Indian food-stuffs imported in this country are desired, as well as specimens of the various condiments, pickles, preserves, &c., manufactured either for European or local use. Models of edible fruits, especially those known in this country in a dried state, would be useful. Also representations or stuffed specimens of animals and fish used as food.

"Any illustrations of the processes of preparing Rice, Tea, Coffee, &c., would be welcomed.

"It would certainly create great interest here if a few native cooks could be brought over, with plenty of materials, who would cook daily, for sale, say a good Mussulman dinner and a good Hindu dinner, with accompaniments such as are used at caste feasts, weddings, &c.

"As regards Group 2, Dress, the most important thing will be to show the clothing, &c., of representative classes in representative districts of each province; thus, from Bombay, there might be a Gujarati Patidar, a Deccan Banya, a Konkan fisherman, a Borah trader, a Parsee merchant—with their women; from Bengal and Madras similar typical examples. The dresses should be shown on lay figures, and should be the ordinary habiliments of the people, with their ordinary ornaments, also with Charpais, Kamlis, rasais, &c.

"Exhibits illustrating the destruction of Indian fabrics, and specimens of any fabrics of special interest are desirable, also illustrations of silk culture (especially tussur).

"In Group 3, the Dwelling, possibly there might be exact models of the better classes of houses in representative districts (say of a cultivator of the better class, a banker, a shopkeeper), of the cottages of the lower classes, the huts of weavers, fishermen, &c., of European up-country bungalows, and of a bit of a bazaar in an up-country town. With these models should be shown small figures, dressed to represent the people at their usual vocations; models of their furniture and of their domestic animals might be put into their houses.

"Models of native schools, and any matters connected with the education of the people, would be acceptable.

"Punkas, Tattis, and Thermanditotes should be admitted, and other means of cooling air, drinks, &c.; also means for carrying and preserving water.

"If, besides the cooks above mentioned, other Indian workmen could be brought over, potters, blacksmiths, weavers, clothworkers, embroiderers, silversmiths, &c., it would form a most interesting feature in this Exhibition, and as illustrating the life of the people of India, possibly not an unsuitable feature."

Communications relating to the above to be addressed to the Secretary, International Health Exhibition, South Kensington, London, and marked on the envelope for "India Sub-Committee."

Dr. J. W. Field is appointed Honorary Surgeon of the G.I.P. Railway Volunteers.

THE REPORT OF THE INDIAN EDUCATION COMMISSION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

SIR,—Having had much to do with the movement which led to the appointment of the Education Commission, a result the form and proportions of which I never aimed at or anticipated, will you be so good as to spare me a little of your valuable space to make a few remarks upon the report now at length received?

The objects aimed at were twofold; as clearly laid down in the "resolution" of the Indian Government. First, "it will be the duty of the Commission to inquire particularly into the manner in which effect has been given to the principles of the despatch of 1854;" and, secondly, "to suggest such measures as it may think desirable, in order to the further carrying out of the policy therein laid down." It is unnecessary to say that the second of these was the great object for which the Commission was appointed; and yet the other was not by any means unimportant.

It is true that in the matter of collecting general information as to the working of the despatch of 1854, they have added little that is absolutely new. The return drawn up by Mr. Arthur Howell, and printed by order of the House of Commons in 1870, is a volume of 370 closely-printed folio pages, of which an admirable summary was prepared by the same hand for Lord Mayo's Government, and printed in India in 1872. The invaluable report on the "moral and material progress" of India from 1862 to 1872, by Mr. Clements Markham, ordered by Parliament in 1874, contains twenty-five pages of condensed facts on the subject most clearly put, besides the annual report on education from each province of India, many of them so minute and voluminous that the Director of Public Instruction must be a hard-worked man if he does more than prepare such a report every year. A small selection of about sixty volumes of these is in my hands, and the shelves of the Indian Record Office groan under a load of unread and unreadable information. Well might Lord Hastington, after some days of hard study of these dry documents, say to a deputation of our council, "There is more information in the India House than can well be made use of." And yet the Commission has done much good, even in the matter of the inquiry into the working of the despatch and its present results. These old documents on the shelves of the Record Office of London and Calcutta were dead and powerless—spent shells, or rather old bombs which had lain until the powder had gone damp and useless. They never had and never could produce any practical results. The information with which they were crammed was formal official stuff, of which no man could make any use, unless it were an enthusiast, such as I am supposed to be. It was by a post-mortem examination of these old dead records that I got materials enough to convince a number of intelligent men who were deeply interested in education in India that things were not as they should be, and that there must be a fresh inquiry and a new departure if the people of India were to be educated; and had it not been for the circumstances of our having at the head of Indian affairs men of great candour and conscientiousness, our efforts would have been in vain, as a great many had been before.

The facts we exposed and laid before Lord Ripon and Sir Louis Mallet led to an earnest investigation, and Lord Hastington, with that thoroughness of inquiry by which he gets at the root of any subject which claims his attention, saw the importance of the question, and his own calm but earnest way encouraged the appointment of a commission.

And now what have we in this report? Little that is absolutely new; but we have the old facts examined in situ. Not in the old formal official way, but information got from men and women who know and feel what they speak of. We have the whole of India aroused to the importance of the general education of the people. A great stimulus has already been given, of which the best evidence is the fact that while for three years before this movement began the increase of pupils had been only about 50,000 during the last three years; it has been over 700,000. Not only the body of the people of India now convinced that something must be done for the masses; but the parties who have hitherto been the great obstructions to popular education, and have managed to get the lion's share of the small Imperial grant devoted to their favourite object, the higher education of the few, are convinced that there must be a change. Even professors and inspectors see that the richer classes must do much more than heretofore for their own education; and in regard to the system of grant-in-aid the Commission does most important service by encouraging self-help, and showing the importance in the present state of Indian finance of doing much of the work of education by aiding and stimulating voluntary liberality.

But it is by the furtherance of the second and all-important part of their inquiry—with a view to "suggest such means as it may think desirable in order to the fuller carrying out of the policy of the despatch of 1854"—that the report must be judged. On this subject personal inquiry on the spot and from living testimony was most important, and here the information gathered is invaluable. It would occupy too much of your space to enter on an examination of it. Suffice it to say that the most minute and detailed information has been obtained as to the peculiar wants and circumstances of every part of India. The work has been, as might be expected in such a country, most delicate and arduous. But the work has been done, and done, upon the whole, in a satisfactory way, perhaps as satisfactory as could be expected in the circumstances.

Then, as to the recommendations of the report, with which I do not in all respects agree, the departmental and old official spirit shows itself where opinions are expressed in the report, or recommendations formulated on any point which touches, directly or indirectly, on the higher education. But I cannot withhold my testimony to the generous spirit of sympathy with the poor and down-trodden classes, especially the females of India, and to the breadth and wisdom of the recommendations. The best and most important judges are fully convinced that if they are carried out by provincial Governments fully and fairly, they will go far to introduce, in the course of time, a system of education which will greatly extend and improve the physical, intellectual, and moral education of the people.—I am, most respectfully yours,

JAMES JOHNSTONE, Hon. Sec., General Council on Education in India.

MAIL NEWS.

The Viceroy spent the Christmas holidays at Barrackpore. H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught proceeded on the 27th ult. on inspection duty to the standing camp recently formed near Roorkee. His Royal Highness returned to Meerut next evening, and subsequently inspected the two squadrons of the 5th Bengal Cavalry, which are in quarantine owing to an outbreak of glanders.

The valet of H. B. the Governor of Madras was seized with cholera at Government House on Dec. 29, and died shortly afterwards. Mr. Grant Duff and his family immediately removed to Guindy, and the place was fumigated. There has been no further outbreak of the disease.

In the course of the return visit which the Viceroy paid to the Nizam on the 24th ult., his Excellency announced that his Highness's installation would take place on Feb. 6 next.

The Calcutta Exhibition continues to attract large numbers of visitors. During the Christmas week the attendance was unusually large, no less than 34,000 persons paying for admission on Christmas Day alone.

The Jewellery Court, one of the great features of the exhibition, was opened on Christmas Day.

A dinner was to be given to M. Joubert by the exhibitors at the Calcutta Exhibition, on the 10th inst.

The Ilbert Bill compromise still continues to attract public attention. Most of the native papers condemn the celebrated concordat in strong terms, and not a few of them attack the Viceroy for consenting to what, in their opinion, is a humiliating surrender.

The Hon. C. P. Ilbert, whilst returning from Dacca to Calcutta a few days since, was hooted by a number of planters at Kurseong.

Sir Oliver and Lady St. John have arrived at Calcutta from Cassimere, and are the guests of the Viceroy.

Professor Monier Williams, C.L.B., reached Calcutta on Christmas Day, and is the guest of the Viceroy at Government House.

Sir Alfred and Lady Lyall left Calcutta on their return to Allahabad on the 31st ult. by the evening mail train.

Mr. Pimms, late M.R. for Derby, and Sir Sydney Waterhouse are at present on a visit to India.

The recalcitrant Bikaner Thakore has surrendered to Colonel Bradford, and the troops, having blown up his citadel and residence, are now returning.

The result of the inquest held on the Maharejah of Kolhapore, whose death was announced last mail, is that a jury composed of seven natives, returned a verdict attributing the unfortunate prince's death to accidental causes, and exonerating every one from blame. The ashes of the deceased were taken from Ahmednuggur to Kolapore, and deposited in the monumental temple of the family amid great ceremony.

The troops sent to punish the Akas for their recent raid had a small brush with the enemy a few days since. On our side one naik of the 43rd Native Infantry was killed and several men wounded. The enemy were beaten off with considerable loss.

The usual Proclamation parades were held on New Year's Day at the various military stations throughout the country.

The list of new appointments of Companions of the Indian Empire has been published. The list includes four Europeans and six native gentlemen.

The arrangements for the Bangalore Camp of Exercise are being actively carried out, and it is expected that the affair will be a great success. The operations were to commence on the 5th inst.

Sir Donald Stewart and other officers appointed to attend.

the Bangalore Camp of Exercise, were to embark on the morning of the 7th instant at Calcutta for Madras.

A camp of exercise on a small scale is being held at Poona.

A monster meeting of the zamindars and landholders of Bengal and Behar was held in Calcutta on the 29th ult., to protest against the provisions of the Bengal Rent Bill. A series of strongly worded resolutions were passed unanimously, and it was decided to adopt a memorial to the Viceroy embodying the contents of the resolutions. We shall give a full report next week.

The Calcutta Races came to a close on the 29th ult., after a successful meeting.

A farewell dinner was given at Calcutta on the 29th ult. to Mr. E. C. Levinge, Chief Engineer and Secretary to the Bengal Government.

The Behar Mounted Rifles, 140 strong, arrived at Calcutta on the 28th ult., and are encamped on the Ballygunj Maidan. A ball is to be given in honour of the Rifles before the camp breaks up.

On Christmas Day a party of Shinwarees, aided, according to one account, by some Zakkra Kheyl, made an attack on a kafil near Lundi Kotal. Shots were fired, but the thieves were beaten off, and five of them, it is said, were captured.

Meer Sekunder Shah Khan, brother of Meer Bacha, having escaped from Cabul, has arrived at the city of Peshawur.

Ayub Khan is reported, on good authority, to have left Telleran for Meshed.

The branch line of railway from Wasirabad to Sealkote was opened for traffic on Jan. 1, and the line from Umritsur to Dinanagar was opened at the same time.

A private of the 10th Regiment N.I., stationed in Bombay, murdered his wife on Dec. 29 by shooting her, and subsequently killed himself.

A very successful agricultural exhibition was held at Gondal in Kattywar during the Christmas week.

INDIAN MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

(From the Bombay Gazette, Jan. 4, 1884.)

Sir John Ross, commanding the Poona Division, presented their Afghan medals to the native officers and men of the 28th Bombay N.I., at Poona, on Dec. 31.

General Gordon, C.B., commanding the Mooltan Brigade, was to leave for the camp of exercise at Bangalore on the 26th instant. Colonel A. J. Colvin Birch, commanding the 25th Punjab Native Infantry, commands the Mooltan Brigade in the absence of General Gordon.

It is reported from Meerut that His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, accompanied by his aide-de-camp and the Assistant Adjutant General of the Division, proceeded on Thursday last on inspection duty to the standing camp recently formed near Roorkee for the practice of siege operations. After leaving the line of rail at Muzaffarnuggur, a drive of about sixteen miles brought the party to Enr where the actual camp is formed. The Duke returned to Meerut on Friday evening, and proceeded on Saturday to visit the camp of the two squadrons of the 28th Bengal Cavalry, in quarantine about three miles out on the Gurmukhtesar road. Glanders is not quite stamped out yet according to veterinary opinion, and it is doubtful whether the detachment will be permitted to take part in the field manoeuvres.

The command of the 5th Bombay Native Infantry falls vacant on the 3rd proximo, on which date Colonel F. Roome succeeds to Colonel's allowance. It is believed that the successional steps will go in the regiment, Colonel Hunt becoming commandant, Major Poole second in command, and Major Hemmelf wing commandant.

Lieut. Colonel Bertie Hobart, formerly Military Secretary to the Governor of Madras, it is stated, has been appointed to the command of the Royal Artillery at the Cape of Good Hope.

Major A. G. Wyman, Derbyshire Regiment, who was posted to the 2nd Battalion of that regiment, pending absorption, has been ordered to England.

Captain P. J. W. Postace, R.A., is appointed aide-de-camp on the personal staff of H.R. Sir Donald Stewart, Commander in Chief in India.

Captain J. K. McCausland, Paymaster, Army Pay Department, Kings Dragoon Guards, has arrived at Calcutta on special duty.

Captain Mosely Mayne, Commandant of the Bodyguard of H.R. the Governor of Bombay, has obtained furlough for twelve months.

Captain E. V. P. Monteith is appointed 3rd Squadron Commander 1st Sind Horse, and Captain Abbott becomes 3rd Squadron Commander 2nd Sind Horse.

Lieut. the Hon. J. E. Vereker, R.A. Battery, R.A., has been appointed to C.B. E.H.A., and proceeds to England to join his new battery for duty.

Lieut. R. L. Bettelack, East Kent Regiment, having resigned his probationary appointment in the Bombay Staff Corps, is ordered to proceed to Hongkong, and join the 2nd Battalion of that regiment, and Lieut. G. N. Watts under similar circumstances is directed to proceed to England to join the 1st Battalion of his regiment, the Derbyshire.

Vet. Surgeons S. Gillespie, A. C. Webb, and P. Rostock return to England, on completion of their tour of foreign service.

The Indian Government sailing ship, Czarwitch, Captain W. C. Hotham, arrived in harbour yesterday from Kurrachee, which port she left on the 23rd inst. at 1-10 p.m. in tow of the Indian Government steamer Dagmar, Captain Hawland. The Czarwitch brought the following details:—Lieut. Col. Adam, Major Rowlandson, Lieut. Alban, Lieut. Alpin, Lieut. Holloway, wife, and two children, Surg. Macgregor, Lieut. Salmon, Conductor Young, Sub-Conductor Allen, one Inspector, Commissariat Dept., 13 European men, 1 woman, 13 native officers, 366 native men, 67 followers, 1 woman, 4 children, 7 horses, 3 bags of mails, and 303 packages of Government stores. During the voyage one follower died from natural causes. The Dagmar brought the following details:—Captain J. Grant, Lieut. L. H. C. Heyman, 1 tindal, 29 lascars, 1 man, Medical Department, 1 private, Adjutant General's Department, 1 follower, and 2 officers' servants. The Czarwitch will sail for Kurrachee in tow of the Dagmar to-morrow, the 29th inst., with the right wing of the 26th Regiment N.I., consisting of Major J. R. Watson, Lieut. P. R. Legh, 8 native officers, 364 men, 73 followers, and 2 horses; and also 12 details.

The right wing of the 7th Regiment N.I., arrived in camp at Poona on Saturday morning from Belgium, under the command of Colonel Adams. Strength:—4 European officers, 9 native commissioned officers, and 361 rank and file. The regiment proceeds to Amednuggur after the camp of exercise is broken up. The 19th Regiment N.I., under the command of Colonel G. T. Heathcote, also arrived from Mallegaum en route to Deesa. It will, however, stay at Poona for the manoeuvres at the camp of exercise. Strength:—8 European commissioned officers, 18 native commissioned officers, and 917 rank and file.

The special journal of the United Service Institution of India recently published contains, besides the two prize-essays on volunteering, a capital paper by Captain C. Gordon, 6th B. C., on the operations of the Bengal Cavalry in Egypt. The paper given in diary form the actual services of the officers and men throughout the campaign, and is accompanied by a map of the battle-ground of Tel-el-Kebr.

THE BEHAR MOUNTED RIFLES.—The main contingent of the Behar Mounted Rifles arrived by special train at the Howrah railway station on Friday morning, and were played to the quarters fixed upon for their encampment, by the band of the Warwickshire Regiment. The soldierly get-up and equipment of this body mark them as the corps d'élite of the Volunteering movement, and their appearance elicited deserved admiration. Lieutenant Colonel Hudson, secretary of the Behar Indigo Planters' Association, has reason to be proud of a corps which sustains its efficiency by that dash of esprit which animates each individual member of the planting community in good-fellowship and jealous concern for the corporate interest. The corps is particularly fortunate in having for its Adjutant Major Vousden, who obtained the Victoria Cross for distinguished gallantry in the Afghan campaign; and being otherwise officered by popular members of the planting community. We are confident that the many who have known what the hospitality is of the Behar planters, will take the opportunity of their visit to Calcutta to make it a pleasing recollection.—Statesman.

COURT-MARTIAL.—At a District Court-martial held at Meer, on the 17th Dec. Private Robert Wilson, 8th Hussars, was charged with striking his superior officer in the execution of his office, Lance Corporal John Yeo, of the same regiment. The prisoner was found guilty of the charge, and sentenced to be imprisoned, with hard labour for one year. This finding has been confirmed by Lieutenant General R. Hume, C. B., who in consideration of this being the first time the prisoner has been tried by court-martial, has remitted six months of the imprisonment awarded.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON A RIFLE RANGE.—We regret to hear that a painful accident, terminating fatally, occurred at Rawalpindi a few days ago, the particulars of which have just reached us. Two officers of the Volunteers went to the Artillery butts for practice; one of them fired and made a bull's-eye, and the marker, having signalled it and covered the mark, retired to his butt. Just then the other officer lay down and fired, when the marker was seen to come out from behind the target and run a distance of some twenty yards to his butt. It then struck the officers that he must have been behind the target; and on their going up, the man was found dead, having been shot through the heart. The target was a paper one; and it is supposed that it had fallen forward, and that the marker ran round out to refit it, omitting to show the danger flag, evidently thinking that he would be able to get back to his butt before the next shot was fired. This action of his was not noticed by either of the officers, one of whom was engaged in cleaning his gun, and the other in lying down and getting into position for his shot. The deceased had done service as a Volunteer marker for some time. There seems no doubt that had he not omitted to show the danger flag, the accident, which ended so fatally, would not have occurred.—Civil and Military Gazette.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 23, 1884.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT IN INDIA.

GREAT schemes of Local Self-Government are being set on foot by the Government of India; and on the success or failure of those schemes will greatly depend, in the eyes of many, the credit of the principle of Local Self-Government. This principle has, nowadays, extravagant admirers, who hope from all sorts of miracles from it, as if it were like the philosopher's stone which turned all metals into gold; as if it were an instrument which the Government might apply at will, and make all men good, happy, and prosperous. Such hopes can never be fulfilled. The Government has very little power in the matter at all. It has, as in the case of all forms of life, much power to destroy, but little to construct. The principle is a living principle. Like the leaven, which must pass from atom to atom of the lump, it must spread over the people, man by man. The friends of the principle cannot but feel uneasy at the pomp and mighty plans with which it is being ushered in. That is not the way it should come if it is to thrive. "Not with observation;" little by little; step by step; here and there; quietly and unostentatiously it should take hold and grow.

It may be true that there are two hundred million people in India. What then? Are ignorant people less ignorant because they are many? Can many be taught more easily than few? The task is made heavier by those vast numbers, but no change of method can be made for them. Patience, labour, and, above all, time, are still chiefly wanted. Of course, the appearance of progress may be produced without the reality, but it is the reality we want: not the appearance.

The central idea of all Government, and of Self-Government, like the rest, is control. Freedom is the absence of control. Freedom being good, control is not good in itself. Love of freedom, and dislike of control, are one and the same feeling. Control can only be good when it prevents evil. The British Government in India is the chief controlling power there, and has endeavoured to justify its existence by putting down many evils. Three chief evils that it has put down may be noted: (1) Foreign invasions; (2) Intestive raids of people upon people; (3) Open robbery and violence. By these and other good works it has justified its existence in the past, and hopes to do so in time to come.

Of late years the Government has thought it needful to interfere more closely in matters affecting the health and comfort of the people. Their vast numbers and backward condition have quickly raised difficulties in cost of management and in supervision. New wants have been found, new works cast on the Government, and, at the same time, there has appeared among non-officials an ambition to take part in the Government. To meet the new wants, and relieve the Government of the difficulty of finance and supervision, at the same time giving a field for local ambition, the principle of Local Self-Government has been accepted. But just as this principle limits the principle of freedom, so must itself submit to the limit of British control. Thus British power would not allow slavery, suttee, infanticide, and other practices which used to be allowed. So long, however, as the British policy of toleration is continued, the British yoke is not likely to be very grievous.

The distinctive principle of Local Self-Government being control from within, Local Self-Government cannot be carried on by means of the power of the British Government, which is from without. This would be Government, but not Self-Government.

We have said that a vigorous effort has recently been made by the Government of India to develop extensively the principle of Local Self-Government in India. The very vigour of the effort seems to have produced some risk of failure. Three points may be noticed whence danger is to be feared.

- (1.) The general invasion of freedom.
- (2.) The loan of its powers by Government.
- (3.) Unearned honours for public service.
- (1.) Freedom invaded.

This may, at first sight, seem a startling view to take of a measure that is undertaken above all things in the name of freedom.

In all matters affecting the daily life of the people, as sanitation, roads, schools, the old master, the Government official, is to be removed. But this is not all; every person and every place is to be under a new master—the Board. The old masters were few, the new masters will be many. The old masters had vague powers seldom used, the new will have definite powers which they will use more often. The old had many to rule and little attention to give to each, the new will have fewer under them, and thus more attention for each. As regards the Government, the people will have more freedom, but as regards themselves, less!

(2.) Government lending its powers. When the Government creates an office, vests its holder with powers, and appoints some one to hold it, that person becomes a Government official, whether he was one before or not.

If the holder of the office is nominated by the electors, without their having any choice as to whether there shall be an office, or what the powers of its holder shall be, what is the position of the holder of the office?

Towards the people it will be independent, for they have been compelled to elect somebody, and that person elected needs powers given, not by the electors, but by the Government; towards the Government the holders will be independent, for it looks upon them as representatives of the people, and will leave the control over them to others.

Because they get their powers from Government, the people cannot control them; because they "represent" the people, the Government will not control them. They will exercise power free from control, but that is despotism.

(3.) Unearned honours.

Some men will seek appointments as members of Local Boards on account of what they can get for themselves, and some on account of the work they can do for others. The Government, by going out of its way to offer rewards and remove difficulties, is likely to bring to the front the former class, who ought to be kept back, instead of the latter, who would be really useful. One or two instances will explain what is meant.

It is proposed to give a title to each member of a Board on his appointment. Titles should be rewarded for work done, and not for office attained.

It has been said that gentlemen are not likely to take any trouble in the work of a Board unless there are great interests to manage. So a single Board of amateurs is to have in its keeping the sanitation, roads, schools, and general local business of hundreds of thousands of people, inhabiting hundreds of villages, and spread over hundreds of square miles. These great interests are to be placed in their hands, not because they have been faithful in little, but because they are not likely to be faithful in less. This is not safe.

As a last instance, the objection was raised that a Government official at the head of a Board would overawe its members. They would have voting power, but not the courage to use it. One would think that this want of courage would unfit them to manage important affairs. Instead of this view being adopted, the Boards are to be left, but the foil that exposes their weakness is to be taken away.

Thus the cart is put before the horse. Title, which should be the reward of zeal; importance, which should be the meed of energy; independence, which should be granted to strength, are to be given with the hope of drawing zeal out of indifference, energy out of lethargy, and strength out of weakness. We give prizes beforehand, in the hope that the receivers will do something to deserve them.

We reserve for our next issue the consideration of the teaching of facts, and of recent inquiries in India, as to what is the proper attitude of the Indian Government, and how it can best help the true development of Local Self-Government.

The following paymasters, who have been ordered to India, have been posted to the battalions and regiments specified against their names:—Captain J. G. O. Robotham, 1st Battalion East Lancashire Regiment; Captain H. M. Caine, 2nd Battalion Royal West Surrey Regiment; Captain G. F. Thunder, 2nd Battalion Royal Fusiliers; Captain G. W. TIRHOOT LANDHOLDERS' ASSOCIATION.—MEMORIAL AGAINST THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

To His Excellency the Most Noble George Frederick Samuel, Marquis of Ripon, K.G., P.C., G.C.B., G.M.S.I., Viceroy and Governor General of India in Council.

The humble Memorial of the undersigned zemindars of Tirhoot assembled at a meeting of their Association, called the "Tirhoot Landholders' Association," and their other fellow-zemindars

MOST RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH,—That a Bill, entitled the "Bengal Tenancy Bill," is now pending in your Excellency's Council; and your Memorialists cannot feel sufficiently grateful to your Excellency for having given them an opportunity of expressing their views and opinions with respect to the Bill before sealing it with your sanction, and they venture to express a hope that your Excellency will not feel disposed to pass a Bill which has met with so much and merited opposition from the whole body of zemindars, who have the greatest stake in land.

2. The Bill under notice, your Memorialists believe, is the outcome of the repeated prayers on the part of the landholders of Bengal to simplify the procedure for the realisation of rent. They complained that the existing processes of law were impediments in the way of an easy and speedy realisation of their just dues, and the tardiness and expensiveness of the procedure, not unfrequently exposed them to difficulties and harassments. The Government of the time recognising the difficulties of their situation held out a hope to provide a simple procedure, and to redress their other grievances. Accordingly, a Bill providing for the speedy realisation of undisputed arrears of rent was introduced into the Bengal Council during the incumbency of Sir Ashley Eden as Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, but it was not passed. Subsequently, it was thought desirable to revise, amend, and consolidate the whole Rent Law, and the Bill under notice is the result of the deliberations of those entrusted with the consideration of the subject.

3. Among the several objectionable features of the Bill, your Memorialists venture to point out some prominent ones as under:—

4. Though the primary object of present legislation was to give reasonable facilities to the zemindars in the realisation of their just dues, your Memorialists submit that the new Bill does not contain a single provision for the promotion of that object; on the contrary, it circumscribes so narrowly the procedure of distraint, the only easy process available to zemindars for realising rent in time, that it will become almost inoperative in practice.

5. The Bill, while it will be positively detrimental to the interests of the zemindars, does not promise much good to the ryot. Instead of promoting their comforts and prosperity, it is, in your Memorialists' humble opinion, likely to have a contrary effect; and in the end to be ruinous to them. There can be no two opinions on the point that the Bill, if passed into law, would give rise to endless litigations, and create ill-feeling between class and class; that the Courts will become their everyday resort; that agricultural operations will thus fall into neglect; that in consequence, the ryots will fall into debt for which even the proprietary right in land proposed to be conferred upon them will not afford them relief. The same will be the fate of the unfortunate zemindars who, being at constant feud with their tenants all round, will be plunged into litigation and debts. Eventually, scarcely any vestiges of the primitive zemindars and ryots will be left on the service of this province, and the zemindari of the former and the holdings of the latter will pass into other hands.

6. Your Memorialists respectfully submit that the Bill under notice is a serious encroachment upon the proprietary rights of the landholders vested in them by the Permanent Settlement. In virtue of that solemn pledge of the Government held out in the proclamation of the "Permanent Settlement," that the proprietary right in the soil was vested in the zemindars and the Government contented itself with its right, the revenue assessed and fixed for ever without retaining in its hands any dominion or control over the internal management of villages and estates so permanently settled. In support of their opinion on this point, your Memorialists beg to invite attention to Sections 2, 3, and 4 of Regulation I of 1793, the provisions of which leave no doubt as to their proprietary rights. Under the circumstance, any measure involving a breach of that sacred compact would be an act of very doubtful policy of State, as it will inflict a grave injustice on a class of loyal subjects of Her Majesty the Queen-Empress, and shake the public confidence in the inviolability of legislative enactments and solemn promises of Government.

7. That in considering the Bill, it should be remembered that by far the greater portion of the zemindars of the present day have purchased their zemindari at an enormous outlay in good faith and perfect reliance upon the guarantees of the Permanent Settlement; not a few of them have done so with borrowed capital. It is but fair and just that before introducing the violent changes contemplated by the Bill under comment, the Government should take into consideration the fact of the serious loss which they will entail upon the zemindars.

8. That while your Memorialists allow that the Government has the power to legislate for the protection and (under clause 8 of Regulation I of 1793) welfare of the ryots, they respectfully submit that the power does not warrant such a violent interference with the vested rights and interests of the zemindars as is contemplated under the Bill.

9. That the Bill is so voluminous, that a detailed criticism of all the objectionable provisions would make this Memorial tiresome. Your Memorialists, therefore, will content themselves with making observations on a few only of the objectionable provisions of the Bill in showing its revolutionary and aggressive character.

10. Under section 5 and 6 of the Bill, all lands appertaining to a village or estate other than those in the private possession of the landlord, designated "khamar land," have been declared to be ryoti lands. Your Memorialists humbly submit that this provision in the Bill is open to serious objection. It arbitrarily makes over all lands to the ryots not hitherto included in their holdings without any ostensible reason, and without compensating the zemindars for this transfer of property. Extensive tracts of land which are left for grazing and other purposes are not brought under tillage in the expectation of leasing them out in more profitable ways, and yet not held as khamar land, would thus pass over from zemindar's hands to those of the ryots at one stroke of the pen. This provision, while it confiscates valuable rights of the landlords, creates one in favour of the ryots, which raises them from a subordinate position, to one of equality with, nay, even of superiority over, the zemindars. Your Memorialists also beg to point out that while khamar lands are generally converted into ryoti lands by the acts of the landlord, large additions are made to them by accretions, relinquishments, reclamations of waste land, deaths of ryots without heirs, and purchasers of holdings. The effect of the Bill would be that while the khamar or nijote lands may suffer diminution from year to year, no additions to it would be allowed. The measure, besides being very unjust to the landlord, is eminently impractical, for there are various kinds of land, in village or estate, such as rent free and service lands, and lands given for the service of temple Brahmins, Moulavies, and for annual celebration of village festivals, &c. Should the measure unfortunately come to pass, all these classes of land, which revert spontaneously to the landlord, will become the property of the ryots without their possessing a shadow of rights to them.

11. Chapter 5, relating to occupancy rights, is open to very grave objections both from landlords' and tenants' points of view. The creation of a right of alienation of holdings in favour of occupancy ryots would be a source of constant trouble to zemindars, in that it will pave the way for objectionable tenants to come in. In Tirhoot especially, where land is in so great a demand from the indigo planters, such a provision would work to the great inconvenience, trouble, and detriment of the zemindars; that this is no imaginary difficulty may be perceived from the fact that already, perhaps, in anticipation of the Bill, thousands of holdings have been transferred, or mortgaged to indigo factories by inducements held out by planters who have failed to procure thicca (farm) of certain coveted villages from the zemindars. The ryots also who are the objects of tender solicitude with the legislature will, it is seriously apprehended, be reduced to the state of landless classes by being deprived of their holdings, the only means of subsistence possessed by them in the world. The limited right of occupancy laid down in section 6 of Act 10 of 1859, is considered by several eminent judicial authorities to be an encroachment on the proprietary rights of the zemindars; what then may be said of the great expansion of that right contemplated by the Bill? Your Memorialists are surprised to notice a singular inconsistency in the Bill—viz., that while it supposes the ryots capable of receiving and enjoying such valuable rights, the exercise of which to prove to their interest surely requires great prudence, the Bill supposes them to be so blind to their interest as not to be capable of understanding the nature of a free contract, and therefore proposes to declare that any contract entered into by them which may have the effect of stopping the occupancy right shall be considered to be null and void! All legislative measures generally have prospective effect except when otherwise provided for by reason of some extreme necessity. Your Memorialists do not see what necessity there is for making void all contracts purporting to be against the accrual of occupancy right in certain holdings entered into before March 2, 1883.

12. In Chapter VI. (b) there is a provision for the preparation of a table of rates to guide the Courts in assessing fair and equitable rates of rent in the cases of occupancy ryots; it is also provided that objections may be made to the table of rates prepared, and that the same shall remain in force not less than ten years. This your memorialists beg to submit will be cumbrous procedure. These tables will involve much time and expense in their preparation, and foster and increase litigation. Every individual ryot, if he should like, will be free to contest the application of the table of rates to suit his own purpose, and the prolonged and harassing litigation will be the consequence. In the first place, it is sure there will be objections, appeals, and cross-appeals up to the Board against the tables of rates. In the second place, there will be further and prolonged disputes in the application of those rates in each case. A table of rates once prepared, to continue in force for a period of not less than ten years, will, it is submitted, entail difficulties on both the parties concerned in establishing a rate of rent at once fair to both. As an illustration of the inapplicability of the table of rates to all cases, your Memorialists beg leave to observe that the rate of a particular class of land is prepared at a time when a valuable crop, say opium, is grown on it. The rate appraised at the time will undoubtedly be high; but subsequent to the preparation of the table, the ryot takes to another crop less valuable. Under the scheme contemplated, the ryot will be put to hardship by having to pay rent at a higher rate, than what may be fairly demanded from him. So also the zemindars will be put to loss, if the ryot, subsequent to the preparation of the table of rent, should take to a more valuable crop than the one which he grew before.

13. A very novel feature of the Bill is that it overrides all contracts between the parties. It strikes at the root of a very well-known and recognised principle of jurisprudence. If a ryot for considerations best known to him agrees with the landlord to forego certain rights of his, your Memorialists do not understand why the legislature should restrain him from doing so. Such a restriction upon the freedom of contract will, under many unforeseen circumstances expose him to serious difficulties.

14. Your Memorialists now come to the chapter on distraint. Distraint is a valuable right which has been enjoyed by the landlords before and ever since the Permanent Settlement. It is an indigenous institution of very remote antiquity. It is an effectual and speedy means of realising just dues. The procedure of distraint laid down in the Bill would practically involve so much expense and delay that the zemindars would rather not have recourse to it. By the time that the preliminary arrangements for the deputation of an officer to distraint the crops are completed and the officer arrives at the spot, the crops will have been cut and removed. Your Memorialists are strengthened in their protest by the valuable opinions of experienced district officers of Behar on the subject. Mr. Macdonell, the late Collector of Sarun and Durbhanagh, now one of the Secretaries to the Government of Bengal, wrote:—"I have had a good deal of experience of the use and abuse of the right of distraint. I know it has been perverted to ends foreign to its object, but I know also that if a magistrate collector only exercises with attention, perseverance, and firmness the legal powers with which he is vested, such misuse of the right can be checked. Instead of abolishing the right of distraint forthwith, I would retain it in case of occupancy holdings. I want to avoid bringing occupancy right to auction sale as much as possible. Such sales would indeed benefit the indigo industry, as the Indigo Planters' Association seems to recognise, but though I am anxious to do what I can for that industry, there are larger ends to be secured. The security of the Government revenue depends on the speedy realisation of the landlord's rent, the prosperity of the province depends on the prevalence of harmony between zemindars and ryots. The right of distraint is an immemorial custom which effectually secures the first point, while distraint, by a ryot's crop sets the ryot less against the zemindar than a suit in court to sell him up would do. Passing, however, from occupancy to non-occupancy holdings, I cannot but express amazement at the credulity of the Commissioners, that without a right to distraint, zemindars could never collect their rents. I speak on this point with the intimate knowledge, derived from the personal supervision of Wards Estates and the personal management of Government khass mehals. Without the exercise of the right of distraint of the crops of ryots who are here to-day and away to-morrow, or without the knowledge on the ryot's part that such a right exists and may be immediately exercised, a zemindar has but small chance of getting his rent." Mr. Edgar, C.S.I., the late Collector of Chumpanun, now Commissioner of a Division, wrote as follows:—"It is perhaps now needless for me to state in detail my reasons for strenuously opposing the abolition of distraint in Behar. But as the representatives of the planting interest have been and are strongly in favour of the abolition, it may be just as well to record what I believe would be the effect of the measure on indigo planters. I hold it to be certain that the first result of the abolition of distraint would be a general refusal on the part of the ryots to pay at least recently enhanced rent, and in many cases a refusal to pay any rents whatever. Now, this would scarcely affect planters whose primary object is not to realise rent, but to grow indigo, and who in many cases have to pay the ryots as the price of their indigo, an amount nearly equal to the rent payable by the ryots. The result would be that the landlords would get the rent due from the indigo thikas in full, and diminished or possibly no rents whatever from their remaining lands, and that the indigo planters would become masters of the situation. I stand of having to pay heavily for thikas, as they do at present, they would be compelled for as the only profitable tenant."

15. That the idea of an award of compensation mentioned in Chapter relating to ordinary ryots is quite a new thing. Such an innovation is an infringement of the proprietary right of the zemindars. Properly speaking, the going out of the ryot cannot be construed into disturbance, it is for no fault of the zemindars that he has to go out of the land; if he had paid the enhanced rent demanded of him, he would not have to leave it. Even in most of the countries in Europe, such as Greece, Belgium, Saxecoberg, Gotha, no ryot is entitled to compensation for improvement, unless secured by any special agreement to that effect. Practically, no ryot will ever go out under this provision owing to the inability of the landlord to pay the fine.

16. That no advance has been made in the Bill in the way of simplification of the procedure for the realisation of rents; on the contrary, the proposed relaxation of the right of distraint will make the zemindars almost helpless in realising rent. If your Excellency will be pleased to bestow a little attention on this point, your Excellency will find how vast is the disparity between the responsibility of the zemindars and the procedure with respect to the realisation of rent, as it existed before the passing of Act X. of 1859, and as it now exists, and as is contemplated by the Bill. Before the Act above referred to came into force, the zemindars had the right to call the tenant to pay in the rents, failing which, they could have him arrested by a simple application to the Court, followed by a summary inquiry. The right of calling in the tenant was taken away under Act X. of 1859. All suits for arrears of rent were before triable under a summary procedure by the Revenue Court, but they are now realisable only by a regular civil suit, under the expensive Civil Court procedure, the result of which is that suits are delayed in their decision, and rents remain unrealised for several instalments, and swell to such an extent that the ryots find it impossible to meet the decrees of Court when passed. This exposes the poor zemindars to the risk of having their estates sold by public auction, under what is known as sun set-law. It is remarkable that the procedure for the realisation of the rent in a khass mehal is quite different, there a summary procedure is applicable. When the State, with its unbounded influence and prestige, sees fit to keep a summary power for itself, how much more necessary is that procedure or a similar one for the protection of the interests of your Memorialists?

17. Your Memorialists beg to submit that the provisions of the present Bill, of which the above are only few instances, are most arbitrary, extremely one-sided, and entirely opposed to the principles of justice and equity. The vested right of zemindars to be taken away from them; the existing facilities for the realisation of their dues to be curtailed; and they are to be deprived of their position and prestige. And all this is going to be effected without compensating them in any way, and with the severe Revenues sale law staring them in the face! What can be an act of greater injustice to the zemindars than the devise, a measure so eminently calculated to destroy and extinguish their valuable properties upon which only they have to depend in the world for a respectable living. Under the operation of the Bill ruin will veritably overtake them with rapid strides; and every day they will find their position worse and worse, and any subsequent awakening to a feeling of commiseration and attempt at legislation on the part of Government on their behalf will be too late for their relief.

18. Your memorialists are very much grieved to find that their property is being subjected to confiscation without their having done anything to merit such a treatment. Under the careful administration of district officials and superintendents by higher Government officials, oppressions on the part of the zemindars have now become a thing of the past. And your Memorialists venture to assert that should your Excellency order an inquiry to be made into the matter most searchingly, and through unbiased officers, your Excellency will be convinced that if there are a few cases of oppression on the part of the zemindars towards their ryots here and there, they are so insignificant, that the so-called oppression can be entirely checked by a slight increased vigilance on the part of district officers, and that a measure of wholesale confiscation of property and redistribution thereof is not at all called for.

19. Under the circumstances, your Memorialists pray that the Bill may be withdrawn. If, in submitting this Memorial, your Memorialists have used terms which may appear to be objectionable, they hope to be excused, and they beg to assure your Excellency that from a desire to state their cause as plainly and sincerely as they think and feel about it, they might, without being aware of it, use words and expressions which they did not intend.

And your Memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Major H. C. Creak, Bengal Cavalry, lately officiating as Cantonment Magistrate of Dum Dum, whose services have been replaced at the disposal of the Commander in Chief, is posted to Bareilly for general duty.

HOME NEWS.

DRAFTS FOR INDIA.—Drafts are now under orders for India, to leave this country on or about the 4th of March next, as follows:—2nd Battalion South Wales Borderers: Captain Weallens, Lieutenants Dury, Kirkpatrick, and Field, seven non-commissioned officers, 270 privates. 2nd Battalion Royal Scots: Brevet Major Auchinleck, Captain Carr, and Lieutenant Collings, five non-commissioned officers, 135 privates. 2nd Battalion Northumberland Fusiliers: Major Dyke, Lieutenants James, Caulfield, and Wilmot, three non-commissioned officers, 105 privates. 1st Battalion Connaught Rangers: Lieutenants Schlesinger and Fowles, two non-commissioned officers, 50 privates. 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade: Majors Prideux-Brune and Norcott, Lieutenants Drummond and Mackenzie, four non-commissioned officers, 160 privates. 4th Battalion 60th Rifles: Captain Hammond, Lieutenants Fergusson and Lord W. Fitzgerald (each of the Rifle Brigade), four non-commissioned officers, 40 privates. 2nd Battalion Derbyshire Regiment: Major Bowles and Lieutenant Impery, three non-commissioned officers, 140 privates. 1st Battalion Leinster Regiment: Major Prior, Captain Thomson, Lieutenants Tighe and Huddart, five non-commissioned officers, 140 privates—making a total of 26 officers, 33 non-commissioned officers, 1,040 privates.

INDIAN AND ORIENTAL ELECTRICAL STORAGE WORKS COMPANY.—The adjourned ordinary general meeting was held on Wednesday week, at the City Terminus Hotel. Mr. E. Noel, M.P., presided, and in moving the adoption of the report, expressed a hope that there was a future before the company yet. The failure of the batteries in India to give satisfaction had been from causes other than defects inherent in the instruments themselves. The motion was adopted, and resolutions were afterwards passed reappointing the auditors and authorising the directors to pay the expenses of the committee out of the funds of the company. An extraordinary meeting has held subsequently, when the resolution passed on the 2nd inst. was confirmed. It authorised the directors to accept the surrender by the Electrical Power Storage Company (Limited) of the 5,000 fully paid shares held by them, and to issue in lieu thereof 5,000 deferred shares. It also provided that of the 80,000 shares forming the original nominal capital of the company, 10,000 should be deferred shares, the balance being ordinary shares, and that the deferred shares should not be entitled to dividend until 5 per cent. had been paid on the ordinary shares.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders for Rs. 50,00,000 in bills on India and telegraphic transfers were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—In bills on Bombay, Rs. 1,60,000, average rate, is. 7'56d. In telegraphic transfers, Calcutta, Rs. 27,75,000, average rate, is. 7'59d.; Bombay, Rs. 15,00,000, average rate, is. 7'59d.; and Madras, Rs. 5,25,000, average rate, is. 7'59d., or a total of Rs. 49,60,000. Tenders for bills at is. 7'9-16d. received in full, and for telegraphic transfers on all Presidencies at is. 7'19-32d., 75 per cent., and above in full. Subsequently transfers for Rs. 1,25,000 were allotted on Calcutta at is. 7'6d., and Rs. 1,00,000 on Madras also at is. 7'6d. Between April 1 and Jan. 15, the total amount allotted had reached Rs. 15,28,97,650, and realised £12,410,981.

THE BANK OF BENGAL AND TELEGRAPHIC TRANSFERS.—The directors of the Bank of Bengal having found it necessary to raise their discount rate from eight to nine per cent., the telegraphic transfer rates responded at once, and were quoted at is. 7'17-32d. in both Bombay and Calcutta. The prospect of dearer money in India materially changed the aspect of the Silver Market. On Saturday fine bars, so far as Indian buyers were concerned, were neglected at 50¾d., but on Monday they were in much better demand for the East, some business having been done at 50'13-16d. per ounce. The firmness was, no doubt, partly due to the market being very bare of supplies. Only a nominal price could be obtained for Mexican dollars, as no business in them was heard of. The Shanghai exchange rate advanced to 5s. 2¾d., but Hongkong remained at 3s. 8¾d. As regards Rupee Paper, sales were made rather freely in India on the continued dearth of money, and prices here kept dull. The Four-and-a-Half per Cents. closed at 81 to 81½ and the Four per Cents. at 78 to 78½. Yesterday the discount rate of the Bank of Bombay, which was raised from 5 to 6 per cent. on the 2nd inst., was fixed at 7 per cent. The announcement of this change, coming so close upon the decision of the directors of the Bank of Bengal, imparted a much firmer tone to the silver market. Refined bars, besides being wanted for India and other quarters, continue very scarce, and with telegraphic transfers quoted at is. 7'17-32d. in Calcutta and is. 7'9-16d. in Bombay, the price of the metal has advanced to 50¾d. per ounce, at which a small amount of business has been done. China rates of exchange were unaltered at 5s. 2¾d. in Shanghai and 3s. 8¾d. in Hongkong; Rupee Paper was again quoted at 81 to 81½ for the Four-and-a-Half per Cents., and 78 to 78½ for the Four per Cents., with but little business.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL COMPANY have notified their intention to establish a new service once a month between London, Marseilles, and Bombay, and vice versa. To prevent misunderstanding, we are asked to explain that this line, while connecting in Egypt with Her Majesty's small steamers to and from the East, is in addition to the Peninsular and Oriental Company's existing weekly services between London, Venice, Brindisi, and Egypt, India, China, and Australia.

LONDON PRODUCE MARKETS.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson say that the produce markets have a quiet tendency, and buyers do not at present extend their operations. Quotations are, however, fairly supported, excepting for sugar, which continues exceedingly flat, partly on account of the further and unlooked for increase in the generally accepted estimate of the best supply. The returns of former years are also altered, and these frequent variations in the statistics by an authority having so much weight are, to say the least, very perplexing. An outturn of 2,240,000 tons for all Europe in 1883 is now considered probable. Some decline has again been accepted, and quotations are lower than at any other period; also for cane jagghery and dry refined goods. Crystallized Demerara has fallen 3d. to 6d. per cwt. for current qualities, fine and finest being steady. The coffee market is unsettled, but Rio continues firm. At auction, part of the foreign descriptions only found buyers. Fine coloury Plantation Ceylon obtained full valuation, while other kinds sold with irregularity. The first public sale on account of the Netherlands Trading Company this year is fixed for the 21st inst., to comprise 88,992 bags Java, including 58,000 bags good ordinary and 797 cases Padang. Valuation of the former about 36 cents. New Rangoon rice offers at some reduction on late nominal rates without finding buyers. The increased supplies of tea brought to auction have slightly affected prices, and the Indian growths met with good competition. There is no increase in the demand for China tea by private contract. Speculative movements in black and white pepper have further forced up prices, the latter being remarkably high. There is a pause in the demand for Zanzibar cloves, after the excitement of last week. The depressed quotations of tapioca attract attention. The cinnamon sales on Monday will consist of 1,037 bales Ceylon.

TEA.—Messrs. Hawes and Hertz, in their fortnightly Report, state that the arrivals during the fortnight have been four steamers from various ports. Public sales have been held on eight days, and comprised a total of about 59,000 packages. The tone for average grades has been firm and steady throughout, the lower quotation for common teas being accounted for by the inferior quality of the few breaks which have established it. Business by private contract is smaller than usual at this time of the year.

JUTE.—To arrive the inquiry has been somewhat languid, and easier rates were last week accepted, especially via Canal, the decline in freights having assisted shippers to meet buyers, but the reported small available supplies in Calcutta do not permit of anything like free offers, and a firmer tendency in freights has checked the decline. Consumers still buy very sparingly, and with an absence of demand for the manufactured article, there is little inducement for them to operate. Messrs. Ralli Brothers give entries for half month as 47,000 bales, of which 15,000 are via Canal, and reduce their estimate for present month to 125,000 bales.

COTTON.—A good business has been reported. American futures have recovered yesterday's decline. The sales amount to about 3,000 bales, including Tinnivelly at 4½d., Western at 4½d., and Northern at 4½d. to 4¾d. per lb. For arrival, Tinnivelly, October-December, Cape and Canal, 4¾d. to 4'15-16d. for good fair; Bengal, January-March, Suez, 4d. to 4'1-16d. for fully good g.c. Forward delivery, American March-June, 6d. to 6'8-64d. for middling l.m.c.

FRIDAY EVENING.

INDIAN TEA.—Upwards of 25,000 packages have been offered at auction this week. The result has been a large business at prices, upon the whole, favourable to sellers, all teas with good quality finding ready buyers at firm rates. Inferior grades, however, have sold irregularly, closing rates showing a slight decline.

COTTON.—A moderate business has been done at steady prices. American futures close about 1-64d. lower. The sales amount to about 1,000 bales, including Tinnivelly at 5¾d., Western at 4¾d. to 4'9-6d., and Northern at 4¾d. per lb. For arrival, Tinnivelly, October-November, Cape 4'13-16d. for good fair; January-February, Suez, 4'15-16d. for fully good fair.

TUESDAY EVENING.

TEA.—16,850 packages were sold to-day without reserve, 15,000 packages were Congou. The sale passed flatly, and at easier rates for fair to medium red and black leaf Congou. New make Congou in boxes brought full prices.

COFFEE slow, but not lower for Plantation Ceylon, 259 casks 91 barrels and bags, mostly sold—small to low middling, 66s. to 74s.; middling to good, 79s. to 89s. 6d.; bold, 92s. to 100s.; 723 bags East India, medium to bold Coorg, 81s. 6d. to 97s. 6d.; other kinds, 65s. to 71s. 6d.; small in proportion.

COTTON.—The market continues very quiet, with only a small business at about previous rates. Sales about 800 bales including Bengal at 4¾d. and Oomrawatte at 4½d. per lb. Forward delivery American, April-May, 5'63-64d. per lb. for middling l.m.c.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY

CAPTAIN J. FRED BURNABY,

Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fave as a "medicine man" had not died out; but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

THE VOICE OF INDIA. A NEW MAGAZINE INTENDED TO GIVE EXPRESSION TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect it is now desired to remedy, by publishing monthly in Bombay a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which will provide a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. It is hoped that the Voice of India will thus give with a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine will advocate no views of its own. It will seek only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it is believed that the writings thus brought before the English public will be found to be characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by a practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances will from time to time be set forth; but it is a policy of prudence no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be welcomed by all Members of Parliament desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in clubs, reading-rooms, libraries, and institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 200 millions of our fellow-subjects.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Jan. 11; Madras and Allahabad, Jan. 9; Calcutta, Jan. 8.

Requiescat in pace! The past week has witnessed the quiet burial of the Ilbert Bill; and we do not wish to mar the general sense of satisfaction at this happy consummation by any detailed notice of the debate in the Vice-regal Council that served the purpose of the funeral obsequies. We cannot profess to feel much enthusiasm for "Act III. of 1884," which has taken the place intended for the defunct; but as Lord Ripon has taken the responsibility of the administrative working of the measure, it behoves the rest of the world to be content.

SINCE writing the above note, and just as we go to press, we have seen the deplorable speech of Mr. Cross, Under Secretary of State for India, delivered at Bolton last night on the Ilbert Bill. We have neither time nor space to devote to it to-day, further than to protest most emphatically against its gross misrepresentations, and against the shameless breach of faith involved in the public statement, by a member of the Government, that the law now passed by Lord Ripon and his Council is nothing better than a concession to the "unworthy fears of their excitable fellow-countrymen."

WE look for valuable results from the Viceroy's personal presence at Hyderabad. We trust it will shortly be announced that Sir Stuart Bayley joins His Excellency there. Sir Stuart's incumbency of the post of Resident, though comparatively a short one, was still sufficient to give that able and resolute officer an accurate insight into the many difficult and intricate questions which demand solution in the dominions of His Highness the Nizam; and Lord Ripon could have no better or more competent adviser.

It is an ill wind that blows no one any good. We hope it may be assumed that the much-to-be-regretted furlough of Mr. Rivers Thompson involves the suspension of the Bengal Tenancy Bill. The more time that is given for the re-consideration of that ill-starred measure, the less (we are sure) will it be liked. The delay of a year at the present stage may, we trust, eventuate in the withdrawal of the Bill, and the vindication of British faith in the maintenance of the Permanent Settlement intact.

THE able speech of Mr. C. T. Buckland, at last week's meeting of the London Committee formed to oppose the Bill, will be read with the greatest interest, as giving matured and deliberate opinion of one who speaks with the highest authority of practical knowledge and experience. Mr. Stewart-Reid's words, too, are hardly less weighty; for though his distinguished Indian career was run in the North West Provinces, he is able to draw from the working of the varying revenue-systems of those provinces the most valuable guidance for use in Bengal; and his long service, culminating in some thirteen or fourteen years in the Board of Revenue, gives him knowledge that is of a very special and practical order.

AND Lord Ripon will doubtless not forget that, in the advice of such men as Sir Henry Ricketts, Mr. Buckland, Mr. Stewart-Reid, and Mr. Cornell, he obtains the results of the experience of those who have borne the burden and heat of the day, and who are now absolutely disinterested witnesses. Mr. Dacosta, too, long and honourably known in India as a writer of acknowledged authority on economical questions, brings to the subject the ripe views of a deep thinker, long and largely interested in the successful application of British capital to the development of the material resources of India: And the speeches of Mr. Chapman and Mr. Roper Lethbridge, representing the views of the lawyer and the professor on the question, may fairly be said to have a special value of their own. Mr. Chapman has a well-known hereditary interest in India; whilst Mr. Lethbridge's position, both as editor of the Calcutta Review, and as a Professor of Political Economy in the Presidency College of Calcutta, during the whole period of the inception of the present land legislation, has given him unique opportunities for the careful and impartial study of the whole subject on the spot.

BUT, as Mr. Buckland observed in his speech last week, these gentlemen who now come forward to head the protest in England against Mr. Ilbert's revolutionary and confiscatory proposals, derive their chief authority from the weight of experience embodied in the members of the General Committee whom they represent.

OUR readers will watch with interest and sympathy Mr. Hallett's plucky expedition to the Shan States, to co-operate with Mr. Colquhoun.

FROM the Chinese frontier of Burmah to the Persian frontier of Beloochistan is a long jump. Not far from this latter frontier, Sir Robert Sandeman is wisely and successfully utilising his great personal influence among the Belooch Chiefs and Sirdars.

IN the window of Messrs. Watherston and Son, the well-known silver-smiths, of Pall Mall East, may now be seen specimens of Indian silverplate, upon which duty has been paid to the amount of £25, but which is forbidden to be exposed for sale in the United Kingdom under a penalty of £50, because it has not been hall-marked at Goldsmiths' Hall. There is also a specimen of artistic Indian silver ware exposed to view which has been "smashed," because it was found to be composed of "rupee" silver, which is about three-halfpence per ounce in value below British standard. We sincerely hope that Mr. Watherston will succeed in convincing the powers that be that an immediate reform of law is necessary, in order to establish perfect freedom of trade in the precious metals, as between India and the mother-country.

WE are glad to see the Indian Land Question being vigorously taken up by influential journals in the English provinces, like the Bristol Times and others. We observe that the Farming World and Journal of Land Tenure Reform discusses the subject of the Bengal Tenancy Bill. We cannot doubt that the verdict of our contemporary must ultimately be one of entire condemnation, when regard is had to the mischievous divorce the Bill is to effect between rights of tenure and the actual cultivation of the soil.

WE have much pleasure in congratulating Mr. D. Panioty, the amiable and talented Assistant Private Secretary to the Viceroy, on the success achieved by his son, Mr. C. D. Panioty, in London. The Council of Legal Education have just notified that they have awarded to Mr. Panioty a certificate of his having satisfactorily passed the public examination.

A WELL-KNOWN figure will be missed from our Anglo-Indian and Indian gatherings in London. We deeply regret to have to record the death of Mirza Peer Buksh, which occurred here last month. The Mirza was always an attendant at every meeting of Indian interest, and was on terms of friendship with a large circle of Indo-phils.

THE Journal of the Anjuman-i-Panjab, a leading native paper of Lahore, has throughout the Ilbert Bill controversy written of it with most commendable moderation and good feeling. This is what it says of the settlement :—

"We would hope that the agreement at which the Government and the Anglo-Indian Defence Association have arrived on the subject of the Ilbert Bill might accepted by all parties as a Christmas Message of Goodwill and Peace. Our native friends will have something to bear and forbear, for they have not got all they expected. Our English friends will have to accept the principle of an extension of native jurisdiction over European British subjects. But both may yield something if at the same time both have really gained something. Every just and honest bargain, political economists tell us, is to the advantage of both parties in it. It is unreasonable to expect all the advantage for oneself, and inflict all the disadvantage upon one's opponents."

THE same paper says :—

"We have read the speech delivered by Mr. Lal Mohun Ghose before a large audience at Norwich, which enthusiastically cheered to the echo the remarkable words which he addressed to them. Mr. Ghose, with a remarkably able and fluent command of a foreign language, told the people of England that the Queen's Proclamation of 1858 was the great charter of the political rights of his countrymen, and that if any attempt were made to alter the interpretation which had been put on it, or to quibble away its purport, a blow would be struck at the root of loyalty and peace in India; that if instead of the policy of Lord Ripon we were to revert to the misrule and jingoism which characterised Lord Lytton's days, the very existence of the British Empire in India would probably be imperilled. Mr. Ghose has the advantage of being bold as well as fluent; but we think that his way of putting these particular points was not one that he would himself have approved on mature thought; he was, perhaps, a little carried away by the occasion, and by his powers!"

WE heartily endorse the following remarks of the Journal of the Anjuman-i-Punjab :—

"It remains at some distant time—at present it is, of course, impossible—to extend fully to native prisoners the right of trial by a jury of their countrymen. The present agreement is a step in that direction, and on this account should be looked upon by the educated natives of India as containing within it the promise and potency of much future good. The right way, and the only, that will be left for removing such race distinctions as now survive, will be to raise the natives of India to the enjoyment of the same privilege that is henceforth to be the recognised birthright of European British subjects."

THE Madras Mail says :—

"The zemindars of Bengal are to be congratulated on their choice of a spokesman in their appeal to the British public. Mr. Roper Lethbridge, the late Press Commissioner in India, has read an elaborate paper on their behalf to the East India Association in London. His advocacy is, of course, one-sided. At the same time, while we admit his ingenuity, we cannot credit him with ingenuousness. Neither can we accept his reading of the Permanent Settlement. He simply adopts the view propounded by the Hindoo Patriot as the accredited organ of the British India Association. He accordingly asks us to believe that Lord Cornwallis and his colleagues conferred upon the zemindars of Bengal the absolute proprietorship of the land in Bengal, subject to the payment to the Government of a tribute in perpetuity of something less than four millions sterling per annum. Not a word is said about the anxious solicitude expressed by Lord Cornwallis on behalf of the ryots, for whose sake chiefly it was that he fixed for ever the assessment, so far as the zemindars were concerned. To prevent any necessity, and, if possible, to avert all temptation to raise the rents of their tenants, the Government agreed to make a settlement with the landlords free from all danger of enhancement. It was also strictly enjoined upon the zemindars that under no circumstances were they to levy abwabs and cesses upon their tenants and cultivators of the soil. Roads, canals, dams, and so forth, were to be kept in thorough repair, and, generally, the zemindars were to act in a fashion similar to that of landed proprietors in England. It is really a matter of little moment whether the zemindars ninety years ago were simply revenue collectors, or themselves landowners. In all probability they were both. Indeed, it is unlikely that they would have been trusted with the collection of the revenue had they not been men of some substance, whose property could be easily seized and realised as against defalcation or embezzlement."

THE Journal of the National Indian Association for February has reached us as punctually as ever; and ever becomes more and more interesting and useful. We take from this number of the Journal the following items of personal intelligence, relating to our Indian visitors :—

"At the late Examination held at the Inns of Court, the Council of Legal Education awarded to the following Certificates that they had satisfactorily passed a Public Examination :— Mr. Shapurji Kavaji Sanjana (Inner Temple), and Mr. Rastamji Dhanjibhoj Sethna (Middle Temple).

"The following passed a satisfactory Examination in Roman Law :—Mr. Mancherjee Merwanjee Bhownaggee, (Lincoln's Inn), Mr. Mohammed Abdool Majid (Middle Temple) and Mr. Mahomed Hameed Ullah (Lincoln's Inn).

"The Council of Legal Education have awarded a prize of £50 to Mr. Satyendra Prasanna Sinha (Lincoln's Inn) in Roman Law, Jurisprudence, Constitutional Law, and Legal History.

"The Council of Legal Education have awarded a prize of £50 to Mr. Rastamji Dhanjibhoj Sethna in Real and Personal Property Law. The two gentlemen above mentioned both obtained prizes in a previous year.

"Mr. George Nundy has passed the L.L.B. Examination of the University of Dublin.

"In the Previous Examination of the University of Cambridge, held at the close of last term, Mr. Ramdas Chubildas (Christ's) passed in Part I., 1st Class, and in Part II., 2nd Class. Mr. Lowji M. Wadia in Part II., 1st Class, and in the Additional Subjects, 2nd Class. Mr. Aziz Ahmed in Part II., 2nd Class. Mr. Abdool Vahid (Christ's) in Part II., 1st Class. Mr. J. B. Sathupathy in Part I., 2nd Class. Mr. Hameed Ullah (Christ's) in Part II., 1st Class."

"We regret to record the death, early in January, at Davos Platz, Switzerland, of Mr. D. D. Cama, of Bombay, who had resided for some time in England."

WE desire to draw the attention of our Indian readers to the following notice, which appears in the February number of the same Journal :—

"We are anxious to mention that Miss Beilby, who was entrusted by the Maharani of Punnah with a message to Her Majesty the Queen, expects to have completed her medical course in a few months, and that she will then be desirous of engaging in practice in India. She would like to have an appointment in some large town or in a native state, where there would be also opportunities of private practice. We have Miss Beilby's authority for stating that she intends in future to confine herself strictly to medical work, without any interference with the religion of her patients. The Committee of the National Indian Association will be glad to receive communications from India in regard to any opening for a medical woman (with a guaranteed salary), in which Miss Beilby's knowledge of native life and habits, acquired during several years' experience in the management of dispensaries in India, and her acquaintance with Hindustani, would make her medical qualifications of special use among native ladies."

THE following obituary of the week is taken from the Times of India :—

"The Hon. John Marriot, Advocate General of Bombay; Colonel Wm. Macdonald, commandant of the 12th Bengal (Kelat-i-Ghilzai) Regiment; Baboo Keshub Chunder Sen, leader of the Brahmo Somaj movement; Mr. D. Mawson, late Superintendent of his Highness the Maharajah of Durbunghah."

WITH respect to the Freight Market, the following is corrected by the Englishman up to 2 p.m., Jan. 8 :—

"The new year has opened very quietly in the Freight Market, and the small amount of business transacted has been at even lower rates than last week. Only two vessels have found employment, one for London and one for Liverpool, while steamers on the berth have found great difficulty in obtaining sufficient cargo to fill up their requirements. The prospects for the next month or two seem very miserable. Our unfixed tonnage has increased to 43,000 tons."

MESSRS. W. MORAN AND Co. thus report upon the Indigo Market :—

"During the past week three public sales have been held, at which 3,130 chests were sold, nearly the whole quantity offered finding buyers. There is scarcely any change to notice in prices generally, Tirhoot and Bengal qualities closing firm at last week's quotations. Middling and defective Benares and Azimghur lots have been well competed for, and these descriptions show an advance of fully Rs. 10 to Rs. 15 per maund on the prices paid for similar qualities before the holidays. And about 400 chests of Native Ghads have been sold at prices varying from Rs. 95 to Rs. 147-8 per maund. The total quantity out of the market is about 120,000 fy. mds., against 104,000 at the same date last year."

THE same firm report as follows on the Tea Market :—

"Public sales were held on Jan. 3, when 15,073 packages were offered, of which 14,920 changed hands. The inquiry was good for all descriptions, and the auctions passed off with spirit at about previous rates, teas for price being in most demand, especially Souchong kinds."

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

THE following is the official summary of the reports of the Agricultural Department on the state of the weather and prospects of the crops throughout India, for the week ending Jan. 2 :—

"There has been slight rain during the week in parts of the Madras Presidency, Mysore, Punjab, Oudh, and Assam; none has fallen elsewhere. In one district of Madras (Bellary) the standing crops are reported to be poor, and in another (Chingleput) they have been partially injured by past heavy rain, but prospects on the whole continue good in Madras and Mysore. In Bombay prospects are generally fair. Blight has, however, damaged the rabi crops in parts of three districts, and the condition of cotton and the later sown crops in Sholapore is unfavourable. Cotton-picking and harvesting of the kharif are in progress in Berar and Hyderabad, and the rabi promises well. In Central India and Rajputana prospects continue satisfactory, but rain is needed for the rabi in some States. Rain is also needed in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, where a change of weather appears to have set in. In the Punjab and Central Provinces the rabi crops are doing well, and prospects are favourable. Rain is much wanted for the rabi in Bengal, especially in Behar; and the yield of the rice harvest, which is still in progress, does not exceed half the average outturn, except in Eastern Bengal, Orissa, and parts of Chota-Nagpore. In Burma harvesting is well advanced with prospects of a good outturn. Cholera still lingers in parts of Southern India, and has made its appearance in Bengal and British Burma. Small-pox and fever are also more or less prevalent. Prices continue high in Bengal."

The following is the report for Bengal :—"No rain has again fallen during the week in any part of the province; rain is still much wanted for the rabi crops in Vohar; elsewhere they are reported to be fair; the rice harvest is still proceeding but the average outturn in most parts of the province will be very short, being variously estimated at from four to eight annas, and even less than four annas in some localities; the outturn is expected to be fair only in Eastern Bengal (Furzedpore and Mymensingh excepted), and in Orissa and parts of Chota Nagpore; high prices continue to prevail throughout the province, though in some places the market has been a little lower owing to the appearance of the new rice; fever is still prevalent in several districts, and cholera has made its appearance in a few places, and small-pox in Durbhanga and Manbhoom."

TELEGRAPHIC INTELLIGENCE.

THE following extra telegrams were received during the week from the Times correspondent :—

CALCUTTA, JAN. 23.—"The Maharajah of Durbungah has notified his intention to move, as an amendment to the Ilbert Bill, a clause giving the option of claiming a trial by jury to all persons charged before the Sessions Court."

CALCUTTA, JAN. 24.—"Not only have the Akhas given up the two native employés of the Forest Department, lately carried away by them, but the Akha Chief, Mehdi, promises to surrender in a few days, and disclaims all responsibility for the hostile proceedings conducted against the expeditionary force."

CALCUTTA, JAN. 28.—"This morning the Viceroy and Lady Ripon left Calcutta by rail for Diamond Harbour, where they are to embark in the troopship Olive for Madras. Mr. Gibbs will act as President of the Council during the Viceroy's absence."

CALCUTTA, JAN. 25.—"To-day's meeting of the Legislative Council witnessed the last stage of the Ilbert Bill."

"Business was commenced by Mr. Ilbert moving that the report of the Select Committee, and the Bill, as amended, be taken into consideration. He stated, briefly, the nature and scope of the amendment. Alluding to an amendment which the Maharajah of Durbungah had placed on the paper, he said that he presumed it was not meant seriously, but merely for the purpose of recording the Maharajah's views. He hoped it would not be pressed. If it were pressed, the Government must oppose it, as it involved a question too large to be opened this stage."

"The next speaker, Mr. Evans, said it must be distinctly understood that the provisions of the Bill, giving Europeans the right to claim a jury when charged before a judge or magistrate of their own race, had not been demanded by the Europeans, but had been insisted upon by the Government. He hoped that those provisions would not cause administrative inconvenience; but if they did cause it, the responsibility would lie with the Government, not with the European British subjects. Similarly, the causes granting a postponement of the trial for the purpose of an application for its transfer, and the amendment inserted by the committee on the Ameer Ali's motion, were not asked for by the Europeans; and if they did not work well, the Government, and not the Europeans, must bear the responsibility."

"The Maharajah of Durbungah then moved an amendment, extending the right of claiming a jury in sessions cases to natives. He said that the amendment did not affect Europeans. He did not wish to touch the privileges of Europeans, as he considered it would be utterly impossible to place Europeans and natives in the same position—the one being the conquering, the other the conquered race."

"Dr. Hunter said that he sympathised with the Maharajah's amendment, but he thought the time inopportune for opening so large a question."

"The Ameer Ali and Kristodas Pal supported the amendment."

"Mr. Evans said that, having agreed on a compromise with the Government, he could not support any amendment which the Government was not prepared to accept."

"Mr. Ilbert urged the Maharajah to withdraw his amendment."

"The Viceroy also asked the Maharajah to withdraw it. He said that the question was one of great importance, and deserved fuller consideration than could now be given to it. He would not express any opinion on its merits now, but he hoped the Maharajah would not divide the Council."

"The Maharajah of Durbungah thereupon withdrew his amendment, and Mr. Ilbert, without further remark, moved that the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, be passed."

"The Ameer Ali said that he congratulated the Viceroy on the acceptance by the Europeans of the main principle of the Bill. He regretted that the Committee had not accepted some further amendments which he had proposed, but he hoped the Government would turn its earnest attention to other reforms of the criminal law."

"Kristodas Pal followed. He remarked that the great principle of the Bill was admitted, but many inequalities were still left. He hoped that his countrymen would accept the present settlement as final, but would band themselves together to obtain further concessions and the complete extension of the jury system. He trusted that in quieter times the pilot might steer the ship of State on the same course—towards absolute equality."

"Mr. Evans next addressed the Council. He observed that he had not meant to speak again, but he could not sit quiet after what had fallen from the last two speakers. He proceeded, with some warmth, to say that he thought he had made it quite clear that neither he nor the European community had assented to the so-called 'principle' of the Bill. They had accepted a settlement for the sake of peace, but had never assented to any principle. It must be distinctly understood that if anyone should be so ill-advised as to disturb the present settlement, then law and natural justice would require that the Europeans should be placed in statu quo ante. They would insist on being so placed, and would defend their rights."

"The Viceroy closed the debate in a few words, repeating what he said on a former occasion—that the natives had lost nothing, and had gained the vindication of a great principle. He hoped the controversy would be now closed."

"The question was then put, and the Bill was passed without a division."

THE following is the usual weekly telegram from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, dated Jan. 27 :—

"The final debate on the Ilbert Bill on Friday last attracted a smaller audience than any previous discussion on the measure, and for the first time the natives greatly outnumbered the Europeans. Curiosity regarding the fate of the Maharajah of Durbungah's amendment, and possibly a desire to hear whether the Government would promise any further concessions, were doubtless the motives which induced so many of the former class to attend. The Europeans, on the other hand, took but little interest in the proceedings, knowing that the result, so far as they were concerned, was a foregone conclusion."

"The most important speeches were unquestionably those of Kristodas Pal and Mr. Evans. That of the first-named gentleman afforded a marked and lamentable contrast to the moderation and discretion which had characterised his previous utterances. His remark that by the new arrangement the natives lost more than they gained, called forth a rebuke from the Viceroy, while his attempt to re-open the question, and to fasten upon the Europeans an alleged assent to the principle of the original Bill was met by Mr. Evans with a prompt and indignant answer. I cannot better show the present position of the European community with respect to the compromise, than by quoting the words of their learned and able representative, Mr. Evans, as follows :—

"If, as my honourable friend Kristodas Pal says, his countrymen are going to insist that we have conceded the so-called 'principle' in this settlement; and if, as he very clearly indicated, it is their intention, some day or other, to attempt to rip up the settlement; then I say that the principle of law and of natural justice is that the parties should go back to the status quo. And if any 'pilot' of the future, instigated by such suggestions, should be so unwise as to steer the vessel of the State deliberately upon this rock, then most undoubtedly I and the other Europeans will claim this principle of law and natural justice, and will stand on the status quo of 1872. God forbid that this should come to pass. But it is necessary for me to state clearly that if it should, we will defend our rights.

"Mr. Evans, moreover, made it clear that the terms of the compromise were proposed by the Government and accepted by the Europeans for the sake of peace, and that if the arrangement caused administrative inconvenience the Government, and not the Europeans, must bear the blame.

"The Viceroy, in summing up the debate, made no reply to these and other remarks; so that it may be taken that the Government accepts the position, as stated by the leader of the Opposition. With the exceptions of his answer to Kristodas Pal's misstatement, and of a well-deserved rebuke to the fulsome flattery of another native member, his lordship confined himself to vague commonplaces.

"Mr. Ilbert studiously avoided all questions of principle or policy. The only other incident that calls for notice was the candid admission of the Maharajah of Durbungah that it was preposterous to think that a conquered race could ever be put on a footing of equality with its conquerors.

"The amended measure has now taken its place in the Indian statute book, as Act No. 3 of 1884, and its form is very different from that in which it first saw the light, nearly a year ago. Thus closes, let us hope for ever, the bitterest controversy ever witnessed in British India.

"The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has rapidly regained his health, and is now able to resume work, although he is still forbidden to leave the house. He has been advised to take a short trip to Europe, and has accordingly obtained six months' leave—of which he will avail himself early in March. It is no longer a secret that the operation performed about a fortnight ago, was of a most critical nature, and that it afforded the only chance of saving his life. His Honour, knowing this, placed his resignation in the Viceroy's hands; and it is greatly to Lord Ripon's credit that he refused to accept it so long as any hope remained. Mr. Thompson's departure will be much regretted; and all classes, except, perhaps, a few virulent native editors, who have never ceased to assail him with scurrilous abuse an account of his opposition to the Ilbert Bill, will desire to see him return in September with his health completely restored, and ready to enter upon a fresh term of public usefulness.

"Sir Stuart Bayley is generally believed to have the reversion of the Lieutenant Governorship when the next vacancy occurs; but as his acceptance of the office for a short period would necessitate the resignation of his seat in the Supreme Council, the acting appointment will meanwhile be filled by Mr. C. E. Bernard, C.S.I., Chief Commissioner of British Burmah, who has just returned from furlough. Mr. Crosthwaite will continue to act as Chief Commissioner of British Burmah.

"The Akha expedition may now be said to be at an end. The surrender of the captives makes it no longer necessary to continue the operations; and the troops are returning. The chief, Mehdi, does not appear to have yet redeemed his promise of giving himself up; but his capture is hardly an object of such importance as to warrant the continuance of the operations.

"Sir Robert Sandeman arrived at Panjgur on the 15th instant, and met with a very cordial reception from the Khan of Khelat's son and Heir-Apparent. He is accompanied by Sardar Azad Khan of Kharan. All connected with the mission were in health. There were assembled at Panjgur at the date of the despatch of the latest news all the principal Beloochee Sardars of the great tribal divisions of Dharan, Sarawan, and Jelawan, and of the Mekran tribes, representing the strength of the frontier from Gurmeh, near the Helmund River, to the sea at Gwadur. There is every reason to hope that the efforts of the mission will be successful, and that many long-pending disputes between Khelat and Kharan will be settled, which have kept the frontier State in a condition of disquietude for many years.

"Mr. Hallett, who is travelling in co-operation with Mr. Jolghoun, will leave Hleneboay for the Shan States on Wednesday next. The party is to consist of Mr. Hallett, Dr. Qualimey, two interpreters, five followers, and six elephants. They have found no obstacle to the work of railway construction up to the frontier."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE JEWEL IN THE LOTOS.

ITALY must always be the most interesting of all lands to the cultured reader. Its climate, its scenery, its history, its art, are all supreme; and its people, through many vicissitudes, and through evil report, as through good, are to this hour intelligent and amiable above the average of mankind. Their politics have greatly quenched their mental productiveness; their poetry almost sighed its last in the pessimist plaints of Leopardi; their painting and sculpture have dwindled into copies and casts; their last composer of originality died fifteen years ago in Paris. But even these losses have endeared the Italians to a certain class of our countrymen, those who find pleasure in practical life, and a pride in human nature, when they see it turning from the Muses, to worship in the old Roman shrines of civic duty. Fifty years ago Italy seemed dead. To-day she is alive again, the only nation that has ever achieved resurrection! Foremost among sympathisers of Italy, in these her strivings, have, for some time, been the thinkers of America. What Margaret Fuller was, perhaps, the first to find out, has since been a field of enthusiastic appreciation for many of our gifted consins from beyond the Atlantic. The fair author of Signor Monaldi's Niece is the latest of these; and her new novel—in one volume, like its predecessors—is a worthy renewal of her labours of love. The descriptions of nature in the lovely Roman Apennines; the pictures of domestic life among all classes, all show keen observation, healthy morality, and an educated style. A certain vein of namby-pamby transcendentalism is apparently almost inseparable from United States literature, as also a weakness of plot. Apart from these characteristics—which, with the many good qualities above enumerated, are surely venial—the book is a truly refreshing contrast to the sensational, heated, and vulgar productions which are daily pouring from the press. It may sound a bold saying, but a more high-toned, eloquent Italian fiction has not appeared since the days of Corinne; and readers who take our word till they can judge for themselves, will not disagree with this sentence, or preface for hemselves any disappointment.

CORRESPONDENCE.

PROFESSOR MONIER WILLIAMS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Yesterday's post brought me from Calcutta, a letter from the Sanscrit Professor Monier Williams, the substance of which I should be very glad to see communicated through your columns, to the public. My desire is founded on the belief that it will interest many, and gladden the hearts of not a few. It is known to all his friends, and to not a few members of the great Republic of letters, that his toilsome journey to India had neither pleasure nor private advantage for its object, but the promotion of knowledge and the benefit of mankind. More than this, I know that this active servant of the God he humbly, and from the heart, worships by thought, word, and deed, went there in the service of his Heavenly Master; for to knit races of men together by bonds of love is surely a religious service.

This letter was dated Jan. 1, 1884, from Government House, Calcutta, where he is the welcome guest of a kind and warm-hearted host. After a stormy voyage, he and Mrs. Monier Williams reached Bombay, his native place, in good health, and nothing disheartened by the discomforts, if not the perils, of the sea. Thence, after a few days' stay, he travelled to Calcutta by rail. At Allahabad he appears to have stayed a short time on his way. He describes to me the exhibition at Calcutta in so graphic a manner, that it reproduces India to my old eyes. There he goes daily, he says, not so much to see the works exhibited there, as the more lively and wonderful works direct from the hands of God, the human beings of all diversities of race and creed frequenting it. These occupy his mind, rivet his eyes and his thoughts upon them. Their faces are books to study; their dresses, mien, and manners are to him lessons as full of instruction as his books, and his words have been to me the crumbs of Eastern learning which fall to me from his rich table. No doubt he will, if God spares his precious life, give us more "Indian wisdom." These supposed worshippers of white elephants, and I know not what, are [to him, as they should be to all, images of God and our brethren. He makes them his teachers, and concludes his most affecting story of the effects of this assemblage on him with some kind words expressive truly of my fellow-feeling. Lastly, he tells me that he has succeeded in the object of his journey, and that his projected Sanscrit scholarships at Oxford are, he trusts, now beyond the region of doubt and fear. Well does he deserve this success; at his age to leave his home, his books, his pen, his loved studies, to encounter stormy seas, fatigue of travel, risk of climate, and unknown perils which flesh is heir to, for the promotion of Oriental learning, marks the zeal of a convert, rather than the mind of age, which prompts scholars to retreat. Any ordinary day of this great scholar is a constant wonder to me—who fondly thought my own day not an idle one—so much does he contrive, by method and discipline, to put into the twenty-four hours. He, in this part of our island, Miss Sewall at Bonchurch, and Lord Tennyson at Freshwater, keep alive my memory of the fair Isle as a place where the sons and daughters of men have made their minds directors of their pens to raise the thoughts of the world, daily and laboriously, to the contemplation of the human wonders with which the world abounds, of their mission, and proper employment.—I have the honour to be, sir, your obedient servant,

RAILWAY CONSTRUCTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Any further delay in dealing with the question of railway construction in India will be in the highest degree reprehensible. During the past wheat season every railway line in the North of India was blocked for many weeks together, and at one time there was wheat, weighing seventy thousand tons, lying at various railway stations exposed to the chances of bad weather.

The English public have been repeatedly reminded in your paper of the crying wants of the dense population inhabiting the rich Chutteesgurrh Plain, or Ruttunpoor, as it used to be called. Belaspoor is the Northern capital, Raespoor the Southern. The farmers have no means of getting their wheat to the seaside. Mr. Morris slowly, during many years, caused to be constructed a little rail from Nagpoor Eastward towards Raespoor; but the line of railway to the Bay of Bengal at Vizagapatam, advocated by Mr. Crozier and the Maharajah of Vizianagram, has been already approved of by the Viceroy, and only awaits the sanction of the House of Commons to have rails laid down.

With reference to the direct railway from Bombay to Calcutta through the Chutteesgurrh Plain, we may trust the Chambers of Commerce in those two cities to keep up an agitation.

The fourth line is to connect the Chutteesgurrh Plain with the great railway junction at Jubbulpoor on the Nerbudda River, where the East Indian Railway Company meets the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company. So indifferent does Government appear to be on the subject of this Imperial road, that the Map Department delays year after year to publish a quarter sheet map of the county East of Mundla; even an advertisement in favour of the English, this one and sixpenny quarter sheet would pay; the European public would learn how a naturally rich country, which was formerly devastated by Mahratta robbers, has been reclaimed by us. The culpable inactivity of the Imperial Government in Westminster is under present circumstances very ill-timed.—Your obedient servant,
January 28. T.

SPIRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

THE MISCHIEF OF FREE SALE UNDER THE PECULIAR CIRCUMSTANCES OF BENGAL.

WE propose to consider in this article the remarks of the Lieutenant Governor on the subject of the transferability of the occupancy holding. His Honour says:—

"Having given the matter his most careful attention, the Lieutenant Governor believes that the weight of the argument and fact is in favour of legislation in the direction indicated by the Bill; and he accordingly would recognise the transferability of the ryot's occupancy right throughout these Provinces. It may be accepted that freedom of transfer was not an incident of the khudkust ryots holding; and the Lieutenant Governor is not unmindful of the fact that in Jhansi, in the Deccan, to some extent in the Sonthal Pergunnahs, and possibly in other parts of India, free sale has had evil results on thriftless peasantry. If he had to deal with the question as one of mere theory, Mr. Rivers Thompson would probably not remain uninfluenced by its historical aspect, and by the dangers of vesting a population with transferable rights of property before habits of thrift among them had been fully confirmed. But the Lieutenant Governor has here to deal with a question, not of theory, but of actual practice. It is not a matter of 'introducing a source of temporary prosperity,' and encouraging an 'increase of thriftlessness on the one hand, and of greed on the other,' as was the case in the Deccan, but of confirming and recognising a growing custom, to which the needs of the country have spontaneously given birth, and which has so far produced no evil results."

It will be seen from the above that the Lieutenant Governor admits that "freedom of transfer was not an incident of the khudkust ryot's holding." This was the ancient land law, and as the object of the present Bill is to restore that law, the provision in question is upon the face of it ultra vires. His Honour talks of "custom." But how could "custom" apply to the modern occupancy ryot, who was the creature of Act X. of 1859? The custom referred to in that Act must have had antecedent existence, but the occupancy tenure, founded on twelve years' continuous possession, had had no such existence. The custom upon which reliance was placed was applicable to khudkust tenures of old, and not to modern occupancy tenures. So much for custom.

The Lieutenant Governor admits that evil results have flowed from the free sale of ryoti holdings. His Honour quotes Jhansi, the Deccan, and the Sonthal Pergunnahs. We will give the following extract from the report of Mr. Elliott, the Famine Commissioner of Mysore, in 1877-78:—

"A custom has grown up (not, as far as I could learn, confirmed by any legal authority) under which he possesses a transferable interest in the land he cultivates, and this right of sale and mortgage is being followed by the same baneful results as in other parts of India. The ownership of the land is fast passing out of the hands of those who are directly interested in it. Anyone who, in technical language, 'tests the jamsbandi'—that is, who takes the village papers and walks over the fields to compare the actual with the recorded facts, will learn that this field belongs to a Brahmin at Seringapatam, and that to a revenue official at the headquarters of the district, and the third, perhaps, to a trader in Bangalore. Not single fields only, but large blocks of land, and sometimes whole villages, are alienated in this way; and the actual cultivator, the old owner, remains on the worst and most precarious of tenures, a metayer tenancy at will, paying half the crop to the distant proprietor. In this way the glory of the ryotwari system, the union of cultivation and proprietary rights in one person, is departing from it, and zemindari system is growing up without a traditional basis, without historical justification, and without the careful protection of subordinate rights which the experience of three generations has introduced to remedy the evils inherent in the less simple tenure which prevails in Upper India."

But the Lieutenant Governor says that the transfer of occupancy holdings is going on in Bengal, and that the apprehended evils have not been realised. His Honour makes the following remarks on the statistics given:—

"These statistics prove that not only in every district of Behar, but in every district of these provinces (except Darjeeling, where altogether exceptional conditions prevail), occupancy rights are now more or less freely sold as a matter of private agreement without objection on the landlord's part, and we know from independent evidence that many of the districts in which the custom seems most firmly established are those in which ryots are best off. It is true that about 16 per cent. of the purchasers of occupancy rights are mahajuns; and this is a fact which has created misgivings as to the ultimate effect of formally recognising the transferable character of occupancy rights. That is a danger, however, for which it is believed some provision has been made in the earlier portions of this letter, and with which I am to deal at greater length further on. Here I am to observe that it is now quite too late for landlords to object to a custom which already seems, without any opposition on their part, to have taken root in the agrarian economy of the Province."

The Lieutenant Governor ought to remember that there are ryots and ryots. The so-called ryots, who generally purchase occupancy holdings, are in fact mahajuns, and other small capitalists.

On this point, we cannot do better than quote the following remarks contained in the petition of the zemindars to the Viceroy:—

"The figures are relied upon to show that occupancy rights are generally sold. That, however, is not the point. The point is, they are sold without the landlord's consent. Occupancy rights are frequently transferable under an implied or express agreement with the landlord, and they are always transferable with his consent. The figures in the Lieutenant Governor's letter do not show that a single transfer took place against the will of the landlord. The established law of the land, both at the present time and before the Permanent Settlement, is the same, that an occupancy ryot cannot transfer his land without his landlord's consent. This is the law, and why is it to be altered?"

That is just the question. If it is not necessary to take the landlord's consent, if the ryot already enjoys the right of free sale under a growing custom, where is then the use of fresh legislation?

There is one point to which we would draw attention before we conclude. An experienced Revenue officer writes:—

"It is believed that to make the tenure saleable would (1) be an undoubted advantage to the ryots, and (2) on the other hand, it would frequently be a convenience to the zemindar to be able to realise arrears of rent by the sale of the tenure instead of resuming direct possession of the land. I join issue with both these conclusions."

"The first feature of the change which will be made apparent to a body of cultivators, nine out of ten of whom are in debt, is the increased facility with which they can borrow money—a feature not calculated to arrest improvidence among an improvident class. The mahajun will then take care that no other feature is allowed to present itself."

"In districts where industries are carried on by European or native capital, requiring for the production of the subject matter of the industry an amount of land more or less under the control of the capitalist, there would be a great danger of his becoming a large monopolist of land in neighbourhoods where he required it were occupancy tenures transferable. In the three principal indigo districts of Behar tenures would be bought up all around the factories, the good land put into indigo, the bad land made over to cultivators at comparatively high rates."

May we ask whether it is the intention of Government to facilitate the purchase of ryoti jotes by planters? We cannot believe that that is its object. But we fear that will be the direct result of the proposed legislation. And the ryots will doubtless bless the Government that will bring about such a consummation.—Hindoo Patriot.

MR. J. K. CROSS, M.P., ON INDIA.

At the meeting of the London Chamber of Commerce, on Wednesday, Alfred Sir W. MOARTHUR, M.P., proposed the toast of "India and the Colonies." Mr. J. K. CROSS, M.P., who responded to that portion of the toast which referred to India, said,—I am quite sure that the colonies and India would only be too delighted if they knew the esteem in which they are held by the London Chamber of Commerce. The weight of responsibility which attaches to anyone who attempts to answer for India is so great as to be almost overwhelming. At the same time, I can only say that to me it is a political duty and a personal pleasure to have an opportunity of meeting a number of gentlemen connected with the London Chamber of Commerce in this room to-night, and to have an opportunity of saying a few words to them on behalf of the great dependency which I have the honour to represent as Her Majesty's Under-Secretary of State for India in the House of Commons. (Hear, hear.) I dare say it is within the recollection of most of those here present that various Chambers of Commerce have lately been rather pressing upon the Government of India the necessity of developing public works in India in a very much more rapid manner than that in which they have been carried on in late years. We receive these recommendations not only from this Chamber of Commerce, but also from Chambers of Commerce in Bombay, Calcutta, Manchester, Liverpool, and other towns. I think it will at once be agreed that it is the absolute duty of everyone connected with the Government to give to such representations his utmost and most earnest consideration. (Hear, hear.) Now, it is sometimes said that India is slow, while the colonies are rapid; but if we compare the progress of India with the progress of other colonies—namely, Australasia, the Cape and Natal, the West Indies, and North America, you will see that there is a remarkable similarity between their exports. In 1850 we began in India with an export amounting to eighteen millions of products a year, and our other colonies at that time were exporting thirteen millions and a-half. In 1869 the exports from the colonies amounted to forty-one millions, while India had then got up to fifty-two millions. Going on ten years further, we find in 1879 that the progress of the colonies in exports is remarkable. Their exports are sixty-five millions, and those of India are very nearly the same. We go on, then, to 1882, and we find that the colonies exported in that year seventy-six millions, and that India exported eighty millions. (Hear, hear.) Thus, notwithstanding that India is a very cold and, according to some, a very slow country, and that many people think that she is lagging behind in the race, she has, as a matter of fact, kept pace during the last thirty years with colonies in which few but Englishmen are living, and, has held her own remarkably well. (Hear, hear.) There is one thing, however, in which the colonies have beaten us to pieces—they have run into debt at about double the rate. (Laughter.) Certainly they have more railways, while the populations are smaller; but would you like to see the Canadian railway system established in India, where the Government have to pay for the railways, and would you like the Government of India to be in the same position as regards its railways as that in which the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada has been? I am as much as any man in favour of expenditure when it is required; but the first duty of an Under-Secretary is to see that both ends will meet, and to those who urge us to use our capital on railways, or to borrow money to spend it on railways, and who say, "Look at America—she has 100,000 miles of railway, while you have only 10,000," I will say, perhaps it would not, after all, be so very good for us to emulate America in this matter, considering that some of her railways have been subjected to foreclosure. But we, who represent India, would be very glad indeed to receive from this Chamber of Commerce any representation which it may be called upon to make, not only on the subject of railways, but on any of the matters that concern that great dependency. (Hear, hear.) It is not only in one thing that India has progressed—it is not only in tea, in cotton, or in seeds. She has progressed in all these, but most remarkable in the last few years has been her trade in wheat. In the four years ending in 1879 the average export of wheat was 3,800,000 cwt. In 1883 it had risen to 10,900,000 cwt., and during the half-year ending last December it rose to 15,636,000 cwt. In other words, the export of wheat was going on during that time at the rate of 1,500,000 tons a-year. (Hear, hear.) India excites a great deal of interest in the House of Commons at the present time, and, believe me, there are few people in that assembly who take more interest in that dependency than I do myself. (Hear, hear.)

THE TRUNCATED ILBERT BILL.

WE are pleased to think that among the controversial questions which will come before Parliament in the course of next week, the state of affairs in India will no longer need to be included. India is now at rest. Controversy there has been, warm, and bitter, and protracted; but it has now happily passed away with the removal of the exciting cause. The Ilbert Bill, as it was originally drafted, was met by the entire European population of India with one general outburst of indignation and surprise. There was no mistake possible as to the depth and reality of the hostile feeling which it called forth. Whatever difference of opinion there might be on other matters, there was but one voice about this. The measure was universally condemned. It was pronounced with justice an ill-timed and ill-advised concession, not to native opinion—for the natives of India as a body cared nothing about the Bill, and had no sense of the inequalities it was intended to cure—but to the demands of a few natives in no sense the representatives of their countrymen, and only listened to because their views happened to coincide with the legislative fancies and reforming zeal of the Viceroy. The more the Bill was discussed, the more intolerable was it shown to be, and the more dangerous to the personal rights and liberties of European settlers. In vain did the Government of India look to its own officials for support. The appeal served only to swell the chorus of disapprobation, and to bring out more clearly than before the valid and convincing reasons on which the opposition to the Bill had been based. The Bill, as our Calcutta Correspondent reports, has now become law, but in so altered a form, and with such large modifications and safeguards, that it has been robbed of its old sting, and has been rendered powerless for mischief. Some administrative inconvenience is the worst result that need now be apprehended from it, and even this has been so far provided against, that it will, probably, not be much felt. On Friday last the Bill was finally debated in the Viceroy's Council, and was passed in its amended form. We are glad to have at length done with it, and we fancy our feeling must be very fully shared by its responsible authors, whoever they may be, and from whatever quarter the original idea of the Bill may have come. Our own view about it has never varied. We opposed it on its first appearance, and we can profess no love for it now. It has done nothing but mischief. It has served chiefly as a gratuitous stirring up of race strife, with its attendant jealousies and antipathies, not easily to be roused in India, but still more difficult to be set at rest when they have been roused. Our own part in the struggle we can look back upon with entire satisfaction. We can claim to have been first in the field, first in bringing the Bill before public notice in this country, and first in denouncing it as it deserved. The rôle of an opposition is not one which we have any wish to play. But with the Ilbert Bill we had no choice. The interests it attacked were too important, and the mischief it threatened too vast for us to suffer it to pass in silence. The final result is not one which we can altogether approve, but it is certainly not one with which we have any great reason to be displeased. We attacked the Bill when a tragic catastrophe was to be feared from it. This danger has been averted, but we can bestow no praise on the authors of the piece for having been driven, against their will, to transform it from a tragedy into a farce.

The Bill has been a mistake in every way. It rested on a wrong idea both of the position of the English residents in India, and of the wants and wishes of the natives. It is essential for the well-being of India and for the development of its potential wealth that no discouragement should be given to the class whose presence in the country is the mainstay of its material progress. The object of a wise Government would be to attract, as far as possible, English capital and English brains. So alone is there any hope that the great inert mass can be stirred and quickened into life. India can do nothing by itself. It can move only in response to an impulse from without. It has no means and no energy of its own. English settlers bring both with them, and a measure which had a direct tendency to drive English settlers away, and to warn them off from a country which it would have rendered unsafe for them, can hardly be thought to reflect much credit on the sagacity or foresight of its contrivers. But their thought, it will be said, was for the natives of India—for the many, and not for the few; for the millions and tens of millions for whom the English rule exists as a sort of earthly providence, and who are the most fit objects for its almost fatherly protecting care. The defence would be sufficient if it were sound. Its fault is that the facts of the case are opposed to it. It is not only that the English residents in India are, as we have said, the most important of all factors for the benefit of those among whom they dwell. A mere comparison of numbers, of those whom the Ilbert Bill was intended to gratify, and of those to whom it was a danger and an outrage, would be enough to condemn the Bill. It was introduced at the instigation, not of the natives of India, but of a little handful of men whose chief glory it is to be unlike the rest of their countrymen, and who have certainly no resemblance to the most manly and most trustworthy portion of them.

It was to please this clique that the Ilbert Bill was devised. It has been due to them that there has been any native agitation for it. From first to last it has been a surface wave at most. The masses of the population have been unstirred by it. Their care is not for the removal of fancied grievances, of inequalities which they either do not feel at all, or which they are content to recognise and acknowledge. It is enough for them if they are well governed, if they are protected in their property and their persons, and are not ground down with weight of oppression and excessive taxation. A race thus minded needs special encouragement, if it is to cry out against the government to which it is now subject. The Ilbert Bill, with the debates and discussions about it, and the numerous public meetings which have been held to oppose it or favour it, was about as well contrived as anything could possibly have been to stir up a mutiny against the English rule. This, however, it has failed to do, but no thanks to its authors, who have done as much as the situation allowed, and have failed only because their complete success has been impossible. The Bill, with its history and its ultimate fate, will serve, we trust, as a lesson not soon to be forgotten. We are willing for our own part to make a tabula rasa of the whole bad business. Lord Ripon has not time for many more mistakes, and we trust the Ilbert Bill will be his last, and that we shall be able from this time forward to give him that hearty support which we never willingly withhold from the responsible rulers of our great Eastern dependency.

THE "WESTERN MORNING NEWS" ON THE AGITATION AGAINST THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

LORD RIPON must expect that another agitation against him will have to be met. The movement against the Bengal Tenancy Bill—another measure of Mr. Ilbert's—is being organised; and as the machinery which was so successful in regard to native magistrates is still in existence, it may prove formidable. A committee has already been formed in London to resist the application to Bengal of provisions which may roughly be described as those of the Irish Land Act. There are soldiers, and judges, and zemindars upon it. Sir George Yule has joined it, and Mr. Roper Lethbridge is acting as its secretary. The declaration of the agitators is that the Bill practically sweeps away the zemindar class, and thus exposes the peasants to trouble, and to the certainty of being overwhelmed in the first run of bad seasons. The subject is one upon which nobody who has not been in the country has a right to speak without a very close examination of the evidence; and the committee, therefore, will endeavour to use the argument from authority. If they can unite as they did upon the other Ilbert Bill all the Anglo-Indian opinion in England, they are certain to shake the easy-minded Lord Kimberley, and that they will do so there is not much doubt. For just now not only is every Anglo-Indian against Lord Ripon, but every Anglo-Indian would be ready to swear that Mr. Ilbert could not produce a good measure if he tried.

THE TARADIDDLES OF A CABINET MINISTER.

PUBLIC men in England certainly draw very confidently on the ignorance of their hearers when they address an audience about Indian affairs. Lord Hartington's speech at Acorington defends the action of the Viceroy in regard to the Ilbert Bill, by a series of statements which twist up the facts concerned into the most curious tangle they have yet been made to present. The Bill, he says, does "not propose to touch one of those privileges" which the European British subject enjoys in India. Previous supporters of the measure have at least been content to argue that the privilege it would abrogate ought to be done away with, but to say that no privilege is touched to go beyond even the large conventional limits of Parliamentary misrepresentation. And then Lord Hartington says:—"We have for some years past admitted natives to a share of the administrative offices of India, and the question is whether we will continue to adopt this policy." He might as well say the question is whether the Ganges shall continue to flow eastward. It is an insult to those of his countrymen who are earnestly protesting against a Government measure they disapprove of, when a Cabinet Minister courts popular support against them by so flagrantly misstating its character. There is hardly a sentence in all that portion of Lord Hartington's speech which relates to India, that will bear the light of knowledge on the subject applied to in this country. He says, trying to win applause for the general administration of Indian affairs by the present Government, that it found a costly war in progress in India, when it came to office, from which "India has reaped no benefit," and that it put a stop to the war. It did nothing of the kind, for the war, except for the Kandahar campaign which was an appendix, had practically put a stop to itself already, and so far as the appendix was concerned, that little war, which was a separate undertaking all by itself, was prosecuted to its natural conclusion by the present Government. "Not only," adds Lord Hartington, "did we put a stop to that war, but by retiring from the Afghan territory in the face of the most strenuous resistance from the Opposition, we have left no reasonable ground for apprehending the renewal of hostilities." The blunder embodied in the withdrawal from Kandahar is one which Lord Ripon's opponents would not have raked up against him now. It was perpetrated in defiance of competent opinion, to make good careless pledges uttered by Ministers before they came to office. It was an act almost of treachery towards many local chiefs. It was a wanton sacrifice of the securities against any "renewal of hostilities" left in our hands by the issue of the war. The prestige of that war still gave us peace for the time, even when the securities had been thrown away, but the advantages of that peace were an inheritance which the present Government received from their predecessors, and which their own recklessness in this matter did not entirely destroy. Yet Lord Hartington presumes to tell the British public that it was their cleverness in putting a stop to the foolishness of their predecessors which earned the country the balance of advantages thus remaining with us. If possible, Lord Hartington's reference to the abolition of the cotton duties, as establishing a further claim on the confidence of the public for the Liberal administration, is even more perverse than his allusion to the late war.

He tells his hearers that "we have imposed no fresh taxation on the people of India; on the contrary, we have relieved the people of India of taxation. We have done for Lancashire that which Lancashire asked us to do, not in her interest alone, but in the interests of the people of India themselves." So it would seem first of all the abolition of the cotton duties was a Liberal idea, that it was unaccompanied by the imposition of any compensating taxation, and that it was a boon conferred upon the people of India, and a stroke of statesmanship admired on all hands. In every way it was the exact reverse of all that. Though rounded off and completed under the present régime, the measure was practically carried out by Lord Lytton—in dead opposition, be it remembered, to a Council protest pretty nearly as unanimous as that now levelled against the Ilbert Bill. The action of Sir Evelyn Baring in the matter was confined to clearing away the wreck. It was the occasion of the introduction of the license tax, which, rightly or wrongly, certainly regarded as the most odious burden that could be imposed on those whom it touched; and was the subject of eager and widely spread native opposition, very properly, too. Apart from the great dislike with which the imposition of the license tax was regarded, the abolition of the cotton duties was certainly regarded by the people of India, not as a relief from taxation, but as a cruel sacrifice of their interests on the altar of Lancashire. Perhaps in some respects, economical, that is to say, they were wrong in this impression; but politically they were pretty nearly right, for the interest of party Government at home determined the surrender to Lancashire; and though the authors of the measure may have taught themselves to believe that it was a good thing for India, whether India looked on it in that light or not, certainly no such view of the case was operative with them at first. And, finally, as to the estimation in which the whole measure is held, Lord Hartington's conviction that the whole transaction now stands vindicated by the result, is, perhaps, not peculiar to himself, but is none the less an offence to the very great number of Indian politicians, probably the vast majority, who look back on the now irrevocable change as a very grievous fiscal blunder—as the great mistake, if not the great sin, of the administration chiefly responsible for it. Public opinion in India is never either sulky or revengeful; when a measure it disapproves of becomes a fait accompli, it has generally made the best of a bad matter, and dropped all controversy about questions that have passed from the stage of practical politics. In this way, neither Kandahar nor the cotton duties are now questions of the day in India. But there is something mean in taking advantage of this, to distort all the facts about them, and present their remains to the public in altogether false colours, especially so when the object in view is to win support and approval from the public for a line of conduct which in the estimation of impartial experts is even more disastrously at variance with the true interests of the Indian Empire than anything for which the present Government is as yet responsible.

THE GOVERNMENT AND INTemperance IN INDIA.

IMPORTANT CONFERENCE AND ADDRESS BY THE GRAND WORTHY CHIEF TEMPLAR OF INDIA.

At the invitation of the Executive Committee of the Middlesex District Lodge, I.O.G.T., a Conference was held in the National Temperance League Lecture Hall, 337, Strand, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 22, to hear from F. T. Atkins, Esq., Grand Worthy Chief Templar of India, an important statement as to the Government action in relation to the increasing intemperance of that Empire, and some observations on the Temperance movement there. The chair was taken by G. L. Turney, Esq., J.P.

Mr. ATKINS said—A spirit of inquiry for more light on Indian affairs is abroad, and as an Englishman settled down in that country naturally takes an interest in all that materially affect its future, I will ask your consideration to-night on questions concerning it which are outside the range of party politics. Those who from time to time are called upon to control the affairs of our Indian Empire, are generally men who realise the importance of the trust committed to them; but in their eagerness to introduce English systems they overlook reforms which should first be undertaken. The efforts to graft Western civilisation on to Oriental ideas has not always been attended with the results hoped for. Our legislators also seem to think that rapid changes of the laws are remedies for all evils. Laws passed yesterday are repealed to-day. Every Englishman and true friend of humanity must desire to see swept away the vicious habits and customs which prevail amongst the natives of India, and which are sanctioned by law. During certain Indian festivals gambling is permitted in the open streets, and obscene songs are sung in the public streets, and at public and private entertainments, native policemen meanwhile looking on with pleasure and enjoyment. Some of the native gentlemen, however, have indignantly protested in the daily papers against the license thus allowed by the Government. Not content with allowing these demoralising festivals to continue, the Government has adopted means whereby the liquor traffic has been increased, and of course drunkenness also. The former rulers of India, barbarians though they must have been, did nothing to encourage drunkenness among the people, and the much abused East India Company repeatedly urged upon their officials, in that country, the necessity of checking the liquor traffic. In 1838 a resolution to that effect was passed; and again in 1843, a letter was sent in which they desired that "no officer should be allowed to believe that it forms part of his duty to throw temptation in the way of the people with a view to increase the revenue of his district." Whilst in the following year this resolution was sent:—"Government would very willingly relinquish all revenue from this source could it thereby abate the increasing vice of drunkenness." Since the Government has been taken over by the Crown, no such attempt has been made to check the spread of intoxication in India. Twenty years ago it was a rare sight to see a drunken native, even in the Presidency towns; now such a sight is common all over India. Even seven years ago distilleries were few in number, and were generally constructed by the State. Only a certain quantity of liquor of a certain strength was allowed to be manufactured, and to prevent an infringement of the rules a police guard was maintained at the distillery, and the magistrates were required to visit the premises from time to time to see that everything was in order. All this has been changed, and now when a man desires to establish a distillery, he has only to make an application to the proper official, who will cause the application to be made public, and notify at the same time, that the right to establish a distillery at the place mentioned, with the right to manufacture spirits for one year only, will be sold by public auction on a certain date. At the auction the right is knocked down to the man who pays the most money, and the purchaser is allowed to make as much liquor as he thinks fit; and, as he may be out-bid next year, he does all he possibly can to secure a large sale. The result of the system is that in one little district alone, the number of stills increased in 1882 from 292 to 322, and the revenue from this source in Bengal has increased from twenty-six lacs of rupees to forty-six lacs. It is estimated that the profits made by the owners of these "out-stills," as they are called, is cent. per cent. Petitions have been sent in to the Government from all parts of India, from mill-owners and employers of labour, from missionaries, and from the people themselves, praying that some steps might be taken to check the spread of intemperance. A commission has at last been appointed to inquire into the working of the "out-still" system, but its composition does not meet with general approval. A memorial addressed to Lord Northbrook said that "intemperance seems to have increased with the increase of education." This will not surprise many when they learn that religious instruction is prohibited in many of the Indian schools, and Contraband College in the Madras Presidency, is notorious for the number of atheists and drunkards it has turned out. The tea planters are affected by the increase of drunkenness. Their testimony proves that often 10 per cent. of the coolies are off duty, either drunk or suffering from the effects of drink. I am connected with a printing press, employing 120 hands, and at least 15 per cent. never work full time. The most deplorable thing is that the liking for distilled liquor is entering a quarter that missionaries have had to struggle hard to enter—the Zenana. It is becoming acceptable to the women of India. The late Keshub Chunder Sen called the Government policy in relation to the liquor laws unwise and cruel. It found the country free, or nearly so, from the greatest curse of modern times, and has introduced the blight.

Mr. Atkins here quoted the opinions of many eminent officials in India, condemning the Government policy, and proving the alarming increase of drunkenness in consequence of it. Continuing, he said—The favourite sites for "out-stills" are by the roadside, so as to intercept travellers as well as to tempt the neighbourhood. Speaking from my own experience, I do not hesitate to say that there is as much, if not more, drunkenness among the lower class of natives of large Indian towns than amongst the working classes of large English towns, and it must be remembered twenty years ago there was but very little drunkenness in India. The Government is responsible for the change. Temperance associations have been established in all the Presidencies. Some admit natives only to membership, some are confined to Europeans, and some admit all races and creeds to membership. The reason that natives have separate organisations is on account of caste. These organisations have appealed with little success for restrictions on the issue of licenses. The Indian Government is despotic, and anything said or done by the people of India in opposition to the Government is useless. It is on that account that I have embraced the opportunity to ask your sympathy and assistance in directing the action of the British public to the injustice that is being done to the people of India, and also, if it be practicable, to raise the question in the British Parliament. (Applause.)

At the close of Mr. Atkins's speech, several questions were put to him by the chairman and others relative to the issue of licenses in India.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Atkins was moved by Mr. John Hiltton, of the U.K.A., and a resolution was passed that a memorial be drawn up and forwarded to Lord Northbrook, calling his attention to the increase of intemperance in India, owing to the action of the Government there.—Blue Ribbon Gospel Temperance Chronicle.

MAIL NEWS.

On the 10th ult. the Viceroy unveiled the statue of the late Hon. Prosomo Kumar Tagore, G.S.I., at the Senate House, Calcutta. Professor Monier Williams delivered an address on the progress of the Indian Institute at Oxford, and the best means of utilising that institution for the benefit of Indian students.

On the resumption of the debate on the Ilbert Bill in the Viceregal Council, Jan. 4, a difficulty arose as to the construction to be put upon certain provisions in the concordat. The debate was adjourned until Monday, and the difficulties having in the meantime been adjusted, the Bill was referred to a select committee with instructions to report on the 18th.

Some dissatisfaction has been expressed at the conclusion of the concordat in the planting districts, and one or two meetings have been held to condemn the arrangement.

H.E. the Governor was to leave Bombay by mail train for Ahmedabad on the 15th ult., on a tour through the Mahi Kantha and the Panch Mahals.

On the 3rd ult. the Nizam was entertained by the Viceroy at a State dinner at Government House, an evening party being afterwards given in honour of his Highness. His Highness left Calcutta for his capital on Jan. 5.

Mr. Grant Duff, in the course of his annual minute, expresses satisfaction at the great advance in material prosperity which the Madras Presidency has made during the past few years.

The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal is still suffering from illness.

Sir Donald Stewart, who was to have attended the Bangalore Camp, was detained in Calcutta by the Ilbert Bill debate, and will not now visit the camp. His Excellency will, however, probably attend the Nizam's installation.

The Lushais are giving some trouble, and troops have been despatched to strengthen the military force in the Cachar district.

The Nepaul authorities have demanded a heavy sum as compensation for the ill-usage and looting of Nepaul traders at Lhassa and are arranging for an expedition to Thibet, with Lhassa as an objective point, in case the Thibetan authorities reject their demands.

Owing, it is believed, to a recent temporary failure of the regular water supply, there has been a revival of cholera in Bombay. Twenty-two deaths were registered in the city during the week ending the 1st ult., and nineteen during the week ending the 8th ult.

The resistance made by the Akas to the military force which has been despatched to punish the tribe is more serious than was expected. Reinforcements and guns are being forwarded.

The Behar Mounted Volunteers left Calcutta on Sunday after a very pleasant visit. The members of the corps were entertained at a ball by the inhabitants of Calcutta, previous to their departure.

Mr. Wilfred Blunt, in the course of an address at a meeting of the Mahomedan Literary Society in Calcutta, on the 2nd ult., spoke of the importance of education to Mahomedans, and urged the establishment of a central university for Mahomedans as a means of rescuing the community from their present depressed condition.

Mr. Wilfred and Lady Anne Blunt left Calcutta on Jan. 5 for the North West Provinces.

Mr. Seymour Keay delivered an address to natives at the Town Hall, Calcutta, on the 3rd ult., on the condition of the people of India. Mr. Keay will shortly address a similar meeting in Bombay.

The manoeuvres at the Bangalore camp of exercise commenced on the 9th ult.

A camp of exercise on a small scale has been held at Poona during the week.

At a meeting of the Bombay Legislative Council on the 9th ult., the Local Funds Bill was read a second time.

Between the 5th Dec. and the 2nd Jan. 238,315 persons visited the Calcutta Exhibition.

Mr. F. L. Latham has been appointed Advocate General of Bombay in the place of the Hon. J. Marriott, who died at Kurrachee on Jan. 5.

Captain W. R. Le Geyt Anderson, Bombay Staff Corps, succeeds Major T. F. S. Mackenzie, Madras Staff Corps, as Deputy Accountant General, Military Department, who, on being relieved, will proceed to Madras to take charge of the Account Branch office, and Lieutenant Ramsden, Military Account Department, will proceed to Calcutta for duty at that station.

INDIAN MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

[From the Bombay Gazette, Jan. 11.]

Colonel W. Macdonald, Commandant of the 12th (Khelet-i-Ghizaf) Bengal M.T., died of consumption at Cachar on Dec. 26. The vacancy in the divisional staff created by General Hughes's promotion will be filled by Major General Wright, C.B., who, however, will be promoted in his turn in about a year. The coveted Sirhind division, which General Hughes vacates, will probably, an up-country paper says, be offered to Major General Hume, at present commanding the Lahore Division.

Sir Donald Stewart and his staff may be present at the installation of the Nizam, and it is said that His Excellency may, perhaps, employ the interval between the breaking up of the Bangalore Camp on the 10th or 11th of February in visiting Poona, Bolarum, and Secunderabad.

Lieutenant Colonel Elliott, 1st Battalion York and Lancaster Regiment, has been granted six months' leave to England on medical certificate.

Captain C. W. Kellie, R.A., has been ordered to Egypt to join No. 6 Battery 1st Brigade Scottish Division, on promotion.

It is believed that Captain F. W. Benson, 17th Lancers, now Brigade Major at Poona, is likely to be appointed Garrison Instructor at Lucknow.

Captain T. C. Hood, Paymaster, 2nd Battalion Derbyshire Regiment, has been granted an extension of leave for three months on medical certificate.

It is reported that Captain Webb, Adjutant, Calcutta Volunteers, is an applicant for the post of Adjutant to the Behar Mounted Rifles, or Behar Light Horse, a change of designation about to be applied for.

The following officers will proceed to England for duty at the regimental depots:—Lieutenant C. A. C. Deane, 1st Battalion Suffolk Regiment; Captain H. Earle, 1st Battalion South Yorkshire Regiment, and Captain J. G. Sparkes, 2nd Battalion Derbyshire Regiment.

Lieutenant E. A. Marret, R. A., attached to No. 3 Field Battery, Hyderabad Contingent, has been appointed to the 4th Infantry Hyderabad Contingent, as a probationer for the Staff Corps.

Lieutenant F. E. L. Claridge, lately a probationer for the Bengal Staff Corps, and at present attached to the 2nd Battalion Leicestershire Regiment, has been re-gazetted to the 2nd West India Regiment.

The following postings have been ordered:—Captain F. Corbett, South Yorkshire Regiment; Major G. Stoney, King's Own Borderers; Lieutenant D. G. Prendergast, South Lancashire Regiment; Lieutenant C. F. Lannock, Suffolk Regiment; Lieutenant G. Browne, Border Regiment; and Lieut. J. L. Govan, Norfolk Regiment—to the 1st battalions of their regiments. Captain G. E. Lloyd, South Yorkshire Regiment; Major H. A. Cherry, Northumberland Fusiliers; Captain A. A. W. B. Bright Smith, Liverpool Regiment; Lieutenant R. P. Wyley, Warwickshire Regiment, and Lieutenants E. H. L. Twyford and E. R. C. Ellis, Scottish Rifles—to the 2nd battalions of their regiments.

Lieutenant Cookson, 2nd Scottish Rifles, has been appointed to the 19th Bengal Lancers as a probationer for the Staff Corps.

Lieutenant E. J. Dewar, King's Royal Rifle Corps, has been posted to the 4th battalion of the regiment.

Lieutenant J. E. Downing, Military Account Department, has been appointed Presidency Paymaster, Calcutta, on his return from furlough, and Captain T. H. Eyres has been appointed Pension Paymaster, Presidency Pension Code.

No. 5 Battery, 1st Brigade, R.A., Southern Division, under the command of Major R. F. Williams, left Boonkee on the 3rd inst. for Agga, where it is expected to arrive on Jan. 7.

The 2nd Sind Horse marched into Jacobabad some days ago, but the 1st Sind Horse do not arrive there until March, and the Lancers remain for the winter at Sibi.

On the 4th inst. the Commander in Chief held a parade of all troops in garrison at Calcutta, for field exercises. The Calcutta and Behar Volunteers turned out in strength, and took part in a sham fight.

The companies of Kurrachee and Hyderabad of the 2nd Battalion Gloucestershire Regiment have exchanged stations, the movement being made by rail. The B-2 Battery Royal Artillery was to march to the Hubb, eighteen miles from Kurrachee on the 5th for practice.

The left wing of the 7th Regiment N.L., is expected in Bombay from Kurrachee, per the Indian Government sailing ship Ozarwith, in tow of the Indian Government steamer Dagmar on or about the 13th inst. The wing consists of one officer, 258 men, eleven followers, and one horse. The men will be landed at Sassoon Dock, and will then proceed to Ahmednugur, via Poona by a special mixed train at 6.15 p.m. on the same day.

It is believed that the Government have resolved to keep up Jacobabad station, but only one cavalry regiment will be stationed there after the 1st and 2nd Sind Horse have had a year's rest.

This year the health of the troops at Kurrachee has been very good, and in marked contrast with that of two preceding years.

It is stated that the veterinary department is to have a code of its own for guidance, and that the Government of India has accorded sanction to its publication at an early date.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1884.

SIR JAMES CAIRD ON THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

SIR JAMES CAIRD's recently published work, "India, the Land and the People," has a special value, far above that of the ordinary production of "The Travelling Gentleman," or "The M.P. on tour," after a rush through India. For it is the work of a very shrewd observer, possessing a good, sound, practical knowledge of one special subject, English agriculture, capable of useful application to the circumstances of India. Its author had the advantage of being brought into contact with all the best local authorities; and he has the honesty to give us the impressions thus derived, without any great distortion from the refracting medium.

The value of this method of Sir James Caird's may be estimated from one illustration. When the author gives us his ideas about a matter of history—the Permanent Settlement—he is hopelessly wrong. But when he discourses about the present relations between landlord and tenant, and about the present conditions of the ryots, and so forth, he gives us a mine of information, all the more valuable because it is given without bias, and without reference to its bearing on such a vexed question as the Bengal Tenancy Bill.

What, for example, could be better testimony on the merits of Mr. Ilbert's latest masterpiece of legislation, than the following remarks of Sir James Caird on the relations between landlord and tenant in the deltaic districts of Bengal Proper:—

"The circumstances here are the reverse of what we found them in the North West Provinces. There the Government interfered to protect the cultivator from the landlord by giving him 'occupancy rights,' which, being transferable, were quickly pawned by the poor man to the money-lender. Here, the cultivators, being near good markets, have become so independent, that the landlord asks for Government assistance against them. Their united action in withholding rent is a serious matter, especially to the small landholders, whose caste and condition often forbid them to cultivate the land themselves, and who are thus dependent on the rent for their living. The lesson to be drawn from these opposite results would seem to be, that the less the Government and the courts of law could interfere in the relations between landlord and tenant, the more likely are they to be satisfactorily arranged by the mutual interests of the parties."

There are many other statements, to much the same effect, to be found in Sir James Caird's book—statements which Mr. Ilbert and Lord Ripon would find very difficult to reconcile with the nefarious provisions of their Radical chef d'œuvre. But if they will not listen to Sir Henry Ricketts and Mr. Buckland, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead. So that we fear the testimony of the Famine Commissioner will not be of much avail, any more than it has been in regard to the measures to be taken to avert famine. Sir James Caird implored the Government largely to augment its railway enterprise; and Lord Ripon has now ordered all railway works to be suspended, as far as possible.

MR. DACOSTA'S NEW PAMPHLET ON THE LAND QUESTION IN INDIA.

MESSRS. W. H. ALLEN and Co. have just published a most important pamphlet by Mr. J. Dacosta, entitled "The Right Hon. Henry Fawcett, M.P., on the Nationalisation of the Land, and the Land Question in India." Mr. Dacosta quotes with warm approval Mr. Fawcett's able exposure of the mischievous fallacies lately put about concerning the rights of property in land—notably by Mr. Henry George, Mr. Wallace, and Mr. Davitt, in their "Nationalisation of the Land," and by Mr. Chamberlain in his development of Mill's "unearned increment" theory. And Mr. Dacosta is able to show with the utmost clearness that the Postmaster-General's just remarks on these points are at absolute variance with the covetous theories of Mr. Ilbert and those who are inclined to break down the Permanent Settlement in Bengal—fallacies from which even the clear mind of Professor Fawcett himself does not seem to be altogether free. We cannot doubt that the facts and authorities cited by Mr. Dacosta will induce Mr. Fawcett very carefully to reconsider his view of the effects of the Permanent Settlement; whilst Mr. Fawcett's own words, as quoted in this pamphlet, may very profitably be studied by Mr. Ilbert and the party of plunder in Bengal. We trust that Mr. Dacosta's thoughtful paper will be read with the care it deserves; it will entirely commend itself to all those who desire that the good name of the British Government in India should not be besmirched by a measure, which is nothing better than a cowardly nibbling at a repudiation of the Permanent Settlement.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT IN INDIA.

II.—THE WAY TO DEVELOP SELF-GOVERNMENT.—THE ATTITUDE OF THE GOVERNMENT.

WE noticed last week three points in the policy of Lord Ripon's Government, whence danger to the principle of Local Self-Government is to be feared. The invasion of freedom, loan of power, and gift of unearned honours, all come from the over-anxiety of the Government for a successful result, and from too great a belief in its power to help or hinder such a result. The life of Local Self-Government comes from within, and not from without. About as much harm is done to a plant by over-attention as by neglect.

What the Government can do for the best welfare of the principle is to refrain from fighting against it; to guard it from attack, and to remove obstacles to its growth. No more. It must be left to grow, not forced on. The power which must cause it to grow is not the power of the Government.

(2.) Public Opinion.

When men are free, living side by side, common wishes and common fears arise. When there is throughout a community a common wish or a common fear, we have what is known as Public Opinion. The people of the community are the Public, their common wishes and fears are Public Opinion. Self-Government is the action of the public to give effect to Public Opinion.

There must be Public Opinion before Self-Government, just as the wish must precede the conscious act. Self-Government must follow Public Opinion, as surely as the act follows the wish.

(3.) The Development of Public Opinion.

We may then set aside, in the meantime, Self-Government, and follow up Public Opinion, which goes before it.

That Public Opinion may exist, we must first have a Public. A Public is not a given number of persons, nor the inhabitants of a given area, but a community, whether large or small, having common hopes and fears. A Public may expand or shrink, it may unite with, or break away from, others. It may be part of a greater Public, or contain within itself smaller Publics. The greatest example of a Public is the British Public, in which Public Opinion and Self-Government are both highly developed.

There may be vast population and varied interests, yet no Public, no Public Opinion, and no Self-Government; and this is how it is in most parts of India.

What is the talisman that is to make the Public? We must trust to the old saying of the Poet,

"Freedom makes men to have Liking."

The Public is to be formed by making the people free, and when they are free they will have "liking," or Public Opinion. If people cannot win freedom for themselves, it is the greatest gift that anyone can bestow upon them. This is the first, the hardest, and the last work that can be done for the people—to make them free. Freedom does not mean merely a state of things where the British Government does not exercise its control, but where no man can oppress his neighbours. This state of freedom it should be the earnest and exclusive endeavour of the Government to bring about and maintain. Let every man be free, and a beginning has been made.

In daily life there are many wishes which free men try to gratify. There are sure to be some of these wishes, common to many, which they can gratify best by acting together. A famine, a flood, a pestilence, excites a violent common wish or fear. Here we have a Public, and Public opinion. The Public is that part of the people affected by the wish or fear, and Public Opinion is that wish or fear. The Public Opinion of a free Public seeks an outlet in action, and that action we call Self-Government.

But free men love freedom, and dislike control; and Self-Government means control. The temporary excitement will die away, and the control which the Public submitted to while temporarily excited, will become irksome. Therefore, the control must pass with the excitement. It must also be temporary. In the infancy of Public Opinion, the action should be temporary, as the Opinion is. It should be somewhat in this way. Public Opinion having arisen, the Public should meet, if they choose, determine what action, if any, should be taken; the conditions of that action; how long it is to last, and finally who are to be entrusted with the work. These should do the work, meet the Public, give their account, and retire into private life.

In every neighbourhood, however small, there are many occasions for giving effect in this way to Public Opinion. Public calamities, a road to make, a drain or tank to dig, sanitary improvements, and such things, may thus become the means of educating the people of a neighbourhood to think and act together. Being bound together only for a short time, and for a definite purpose which all are interested in carrying out, they will become accustomed to the idea of control without losing their love of freedom. Here, then, we have the second stage, Public Opinion being given effect to by the action of a temporary local authority.

The next stage follows naturally from this. A Public work, for instance—say a road, once made, needs to be repaired and guarded against mischief and encroachment. Public business of this kind gradually comes to need steady and continuous looking after, and for this purpose, a Public body is vested by the Public with permanent control. If not disgusted and scared by any attempt to force it on, the Public will in time arrive at this stage, and a permanent local authority is the result, somewhat like our Parochial Boards in England.

It is easy to imagine further developments as interests grow, and Public information widens; but these need not be followed out here. The purpose of this sketch has been to show that progress must be made from the individual to the mass, not from the mass to the individual; and that for the education of the people in Local Self-Government, freedom, and not Boards, must be the means provided by the Government. They should be allowed to choose whether they will have Boards, when they will have them, of what kind, for what work, with what powers, and of whom composed. It is freedom, and freedom only, that must make men to have this "liking."

(4) How Government can Help the Development of Public Opinion.

Government can help the development of Public Opinion in the following ways:—

(1) By Separating its own Control from that of Public Opinion. This has already been insisted on.

(2) By Restraining Anarchy. Before Public Opinion gains strength, the absence of control means Anarchy. To prevent this danger, Government must exert its own control.

(3) By Protecting Freedom. After Public Opinion gains strength, the Public is very willing to impose its control on those who do not share its Opinions. To prevent hardship in this way, the Government control is again needed.

(4) By Gathering Experience and Spreading Knowledge. In this way the people of many places will be enabled to avoid many errors, and profit by the experience of others.

(5) By Giving Advice, which, however, should be kept till asked for.

In all these matters, help should be welcomed from whatever quarter it may come—whether from the press, the school, or the Public where it exists.

But the Government should not trust to such help. No one takes such an interest in the work, and no one, therefore, should take so great a share in it.

Once for all, it should be understood that the development of Local Self-Government involves, at least for many long years to come, not less, but more work for the Government. But it will be work well worth doing, and in the end well repaid.

HOME NEWS.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At the meeting on Monday, Jan. 21, 1884, Sir E. Clive Bayley, K.C.S.I., in the chair, H. Tufnell Esq., was elected a Resident Member, and Messrs. R. Gordon, C. de Harlez, I. Van der Gheyn, and Muz. Mehdy Khan, Hon. Resident Members. Mr. R. N. Cust, Hon. Sec. R.A.S., laid before the meeting a short but complete statement of the present position of the question of the "Origin of the Indian Alphabet," referring in this to two theories. The first, put forth by the late Professor Dowson and General Cunningham, that this alphabet had an independent origin in India itself; the other by Professor Weber, Burnell, and most other scholars, that it came from Western Asia. Such an importation, he showed, was possible, as the Phœnician Alphabet was in full use B.C. 800, while there was also constant commercial intercourse between the West and the East, and probable, in that no allusion is made in any part of Asian or Dravidian literature to the invention of alphabetic writing; while we have, also, no inscription earlier than B.C. 250. The remarkable resemblance between these two alphabetic systems demand the admission of as common origin, especially as no one supposes the Western Alphabet, as well as our numerals, came from the East. The Asoka Inscriptions (with the certain date of about B.C. 250) have two alphabetic forms; the Northern unquestionably of Aramæan origin—the Southern, from which all the existing alphabets of India are derived, an importation by sea. Dr. Burnell has suggested three possible sources—1. Direct from Phœnicia. 2. By way of the Persian Gulf, from some Asamdan Alphabet existing in Mesopotamia. 3. (With Professor Weber) From Southern Arabia. He (Dr. Burnell) inclined to the second, and Mr. Cust the third of these views. At the close of the paper, Bishop Caldwell, Sir Clive Bayley, and other members, discussed the question at some length.

COUNCIL DRAFTS FOR INDIA.—Tenders for Rs. 50,00,000 in bills on India and transfers were received on Wednesday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—In bills on Calcutta, Rs. 11,65,500, average rate 1s. 7½d.; and on Bombay, Rs. 3,75,000, average rate 1s. 7½d.; in telegraphic transfers, on Calcutta, Rs. 23,25,000, average rate 1s. 7½d.; and on Bombay, Rs. 21,00,000, average rate 1s. 7½d.; and on Madras, Rs. 1,50,000, average rate 1s. 7½d.; or a total of Rs. 61,15,500. Tenders for bills at 1s. 7 9-16d. received about 75 per cent., and for telegraphic transfers at 1s. 7½d. about 75 per cent. So great, however, was the demand for remittances, that the Council subsequently sold 8½ lakhs of transfers at 1s. 7 21-32d., of which Rs. 5,50,000 was for Calcutta, Rs. 2,00,000 for Bombay, and Rs. 1,00,000 for Madras. Between April 1 and Tuesday, the total sold reached Rs. 15,83,96,650, and realised £12,859,910.—Yesterday tenders for Rs. 50,00,000 were also received. The amounts allotted were—in bills on Calcutta, Rs. 8,22,000, average rate 1s. 7½d.; and on Bombay, Rs. 10,15,500, average rate 1s. 7½d.; in telegraphic transfers—on Calcutta, Rs. 8,50,000, average rate 1s. 7½d.; on Bombay, Rs. 23,50,000, average rate 1s. 7½d.; and on Madras, Rs. 1,00,000, average rate 1s. 7½d.—a total of Rs. 52,37,500. Tenders for bills at 1s. 7 9-16d. received about 50 per cent., and for transfers at 1s. 7½d. 50 per cent., and above in full. Subsequently the Council sold transfers on Calcutta for Rs. 1,50,000, and a similar amount on Bombay at 1s. 7 21-32d., besides Bills on Calcutta for Rs. 22,000 at 1s. 7 19-32d., and for Rs. 15,000 on Bombay at 1s. 7½d. Up to Tuesday's sale the amount sold since April 1, 1883, had reached Rs. 16,66,00,650, and realised £13,530,778. Messrs. Page and Gwyher's circular of the 25th ult., shows that the average rate at which both kinds of remittance have been sold during the current financial year is now 1s. 7 7-16d., against 1s. 7 7-16d. for the period ending Dec. 28, 1883. The average was raised rapidly during the month now closed, over three crores having been sold during the last four weeks at an average rate of 1s. 7½d. per rupee.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.—The cash available in India for every day business purposes has been so much diminished that the Directors of the Bank of Bombay, notwithstanding the fact that they raised their rate on Tuesday, were obliged on Wednesday to increase their discount charges still further to 8 per cent. Owing to this very rapid upward movement in the value of money in India, the silver market was very firm, there being buyers of bars at 50½d. per ounce. Mexican dollars were quoted at about 49½d. Indian rates for telegraphic transfers were firm at 1s. 7 9-16d., but there was no change in China exchange quotations. Rupee Paper showed no alteration, but was, if anything, steadier at former prices.—On Thursday dearer money in India caused such a demand for out remittances that the India Council were able to get 1s. 7 11-16d. per rupee for 12 lakhs of telegraphic transfers. In consequence of this the silver market was firmer, at 50 15-16d. to 51½d. per ounce, although very little business was done, owing to the scarcity of supplies on the spot. Mexican dollars advanced in about the same proportion, to 49½d. to 49 11-16d., but transactions were extremely limited. The Indian rates for telegraphic transfers were strong, at 1s. 7 19-32d. to 1s. 7½d. Rupee Paper was unchanged and quiet.—Although a few trifling transactions in bar silver were effected on Friday at 50 15-16d. per ounce, business could not be entered into at all freely in the present bare condition of the market. Pending the receipt of fresh supplies, bars continue to be quoted at 50 15-16d. to 51d. No dealings occurred in Mexican dollars, the price for which remained nominally at 49½d. to 49 11-16d. Indian rates for telegraphic transfers were quoted at 1s. 7½d. in both Bombay and Calcutta. Rupee Paper was unaltered.—On Saturday Indian exchanges were unaltered, but the reports received say that the tendency was easier. The Silver Market consequently felt the effect of a smaller demand, and bars were not quoted higher than 50 15-16d., with scarcely any business at that price. Mexican dollars remained at 49½d. to 49 11-16d., but these rates were purely nominal. Rupee Paper was unchanged, and, as usual on a Saturday, almost neglected.—On Monday very little business was done in the Silver Market, but Indian telegraphic transfer rates were easier, at 1s. 7 19-32d., bars at 50½d., and Mexican dollars at 49½d. per ounce. The altered condition of the market for silver adversely affected Rupee Paper. The Four-and-a-Half per Cents. closed at 80¼ to 81¼, and the Four per Cents. at 77¼ to 78¼, but little business was done.—On Tuesday, as the West India packet brought an unusual small amount of bar silver, the brokers were able to get 50 15-16d. per ounce for it, showing a slight advance. The Mexican dollars which were consigned by the same steamer were placed for China at 49½d. The Indian quotations for telegraphic transfers were dull at 1s. 7 9-16d. in Calcutta, and 1s. 7 19-32d. in Bombay. Rupee Paper closed at 77¼ to 78 for the Four, and 80¼ to 81 for the Four-and-a-Half per Cents., and business continued very limited.—On Wednesday the market was steady, with only a small amount of business, and bars and dollars were quoted at 50 15-16d. and 49 5/8d. per ounce respectively. Indian exchange rates were unaltered, and so was Rupee Paper, but the Shanghai rate for four months' bills receded a little, to 5s. 2 1/2d. per tael.

THE INDIA FOUR PER CENT. TRANSFER LOAN.—The Secretary of State for India in Council publishes for general information a notification which has been issued by the Government of India to the effect that the Four Per Cent. Transfer Loan of the 22nd of April, 1854, will, in pursuance of the notification of the Government of India, dated the 22nd of January, 1853, be discharged on the 22nd day of April, 1885, when payment will be made, at the option of the creditors, either in cash in India or by bills on the Secretary of State in Council of India, at twelve months' date, and 2s. 1d. per sicca rupee, with power to the Secretary of State in Council to postpone payment of those bills for one, two, or three years upon allowing interest at four per cent. per annum for the period of postponement.

SHIPMENTS OF SPECIE TO THE EAST.—The following particulars are taken from the annual circular issued by Mr. J. Westwood Thompson (successor to Mr. G. de Quetteville):—"The total shipments of specie from Gravesend by the Peninsular and Oriental steamers to the East during 1883 were £8,117,525, of which £1,288,620 was in gold, and the remainder in silver, against a total of £7,991,381 in 1882, showing an increase of £126,144. From the Mediterranean ports they were £158,574 of gold only, showing a decrease of £2,080,420, there having been an export of over £2,000,000 worth of silver from Trieste to Bombay in 1882. The export by the Messageries Maritimes during the same period was £886,683 (£489,994 gold and £396,689 silver), showing a decrease of £885,771 as compared with 1882. The total amount of telegraphic transfers and drafts drawn by the Government of India was Rs.24,33,85,162'15'9, realising £16,696,931 15s. 9d., an increase of Rs.8,64,11,578'1'2 as compared with the previous year, and an increase of £6,686,284 7s. 2d. in the sterling amount. The highest price of Rupee Paper was 86 1/2 for the Four-and-a-Half per Cent., and 82 9-16 for the Four per Cents., and the lowest 82 and 79 3/4 respectively."

ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION.—The directors have convened a special meeting, for the purpose of enabling the shareholders to determine whether the directors shall proceed with an application to Parliament during the present session for a bill to enable the corporation to register as the Oriental Bank Corporation (Limited), under the Joint Stock Companies Acts, with a reserve liability of £25 per share, being exactly the same extent and measure of liability as at present. In conclusion, the directors state that the Treasury absolutely refuses to modify the charter provisions, if the corporation continues under either its own charter or the proposed model charter form. The policy of Government is now to disconnect the Treasury from all control or interference with banks, and therefore to refuse the allowance of alterations; but on the other hand to encourage all the chartered banks to register, and take control over their own administration. In view of this principle, and in view of the freedom the shareholders of the corporation will acquire if they resolve to register it as a limited company, the directors are further influenced in revising their former recommendation, and in now proposing and recommending limited liability. As a limited company, the corporation would have a choice of methods by which to deal with the question of capital in silver currency countries, or with investments not immediately realisable. Under the Limited Liability Acts, profits could be carried to a reserve fund, without the obligation of first paying a five per cent. dividend, capital could be increased or reduced, or other arrangements made with the sanction of the shareholders.

OBITUARY.—The Ven. George Warlow, Archdeacon of Madras died on Saturday, at Madras. The reverend gentleman graduated at St. John's College, Cambridge, taking his bachelor's degree, as junior optime, in 1860. He was ordained deacon in 1860, and admitted into priest's orders in the following year by Dr. Tait, Bishop of London, and having held for a short time the curacy of Christ Church, Lee, Kent, was appointed in 1863 to the chaplaincy of Trimulgherry, on the Madras Establishment. In 1869 he was transferred to St. George's Cathedral, Madras, where he remained till 1875, when he was appointed chaplain at St. Stephen's, Ootacamund. In 1877 he became chaplain at Bangalore. In 1879 he was appointed chaplain at Fort St. George, and was nominated to the Archdeaconry of Madras in 1881. Mr. Warlow was the joint editor of the Madras Church Pulpit, &c.

INDIAN TEA IN 1883.—Messrs. Gow and Wilson have issued their annual report on the Indian Tea Market in 1883. It contains two useful charts, by one of which the course of prices and the monthly deliveries of Indian tea during the last six years are shown with the clearness which is the special characteristic of the graphic method of setting forth statistics. The other chart shows the average home consumption of both China and Indian teas in each of the last 20 years. There is also a table which shows that Indian teas have come more and more into use of late years. In 1883 their consumption amounted to 34 per cent. of the total consumption of tea in the United Kingdom.

MESSRS. MAPPIN AND WEBB, Mansion House Buildings, E.C., have now on view a very handsome sword with sterling silver, richly chased scabbard, and hilt, the latter having the crest of Sir T. Fowell-Baxter, Bart., to whom it is to be presented. The blade is embossed with the following inscription:—"Presented to Colonel Sir T. Fowell-Baxter, Bart., by the officers, non-commissioned officers, and members of the 2nd Tower Hamlet Rifle Volunteers, as a memento of their regard and esteem on his retirement from command after nearly twenty-five years' service, and subsequently becoming their honorary colonel."

LONDON PRODUCE MARKETS.

THURSDAY EVENING.

Messrs. W. J. and H. Thompson state that business does not make satisfactory progress, and the markets exhibit general inactivity. In several cases, sales have been effected at lower quotations than during any previous period, without leading to speculative feeling, and the home trade continue to take moderate supplies. The result of the Dutch Trading Company's coffee sale yesterday did not reach here as usual, telegraphic communication being interrupted by the severe gale. To-day, we hear that most numbers went 1 to 1 1/2 cents. under valuations. Good ordinary Java about 34 1/4 to 35 cents., or below the November price. Havre, as well as other leading European markets, have been dull, and the tone here is very unsettled. To-day, Plantation Ceylon, and Santos, went at some reduction. East India sold at easier rates. Brazil, in which transactions are of limited extent, barely maintains the recent high quotations. No business is reported in new crop Rangoon rice to arrive. The depression in the sugar market continues unabated; crystallized Demerara has further declined 1s. per cwt., and the trade take limited supplies. Sales of Madras Jaggery and other common brown descriptions are reported to have been made, of which particulars do not transpire. Beet is again cheaper, and offered for delivery upon lower terms than last quoted. At the public sales of China tea, common to fair grades of Congou went at easier rates. Indian growths have met with a steady demand, and show little alteration for the week. The cinnamon offered at auction on Monday chiefly met with buyers at November prices to 1d. advance, but fine qualities were down 1d. to 2d. per lb. This was the first of the monthly series. A large supply of white pepper offered in the weekly spice sale yesterday found buyers at easier rates. Black is weaker. Zanzibar cloves further receded, and cassia lignea offered "without reserve," sold at 30s. per cwt., a price never before accepted.

COFFEE.—Plantation Ceylon, fine and bold descriptions; 216 casks, 55 barrels and bags, small, 66s. to 67s. 6d.; middling to good middling, 77s. 6d. to 85s.; bold, 90s. 6d. to 94s.; fine, 95s. to 104s.; 437 casks, 405 bags East India part sold at and after the auctions, Naidoobatum medium to bold, 76s. to 96s.

JUTE.—A good many parcels in dock have sold at steady rates, but the market is quiet. To-day 6,000 bales have sold to arrive.

INDIGO.—Second Day's Sale.—Bengal and desirable Oudes, and plant Oudes have sold at last sales' prices to some advance, undesirable sorts at 2d. to 4d. discount. Export Kurpahs maintain yesterday's rates, ordinary and low kinds dull. Dry leaf Madras sold about 3d. advance on last October rates. Messrs. Stansbury and Co. say there was rather more animation in the sale to-day, good Oudes, when dry, brought 3d. to 4d. above valuations; ordinary descriptions were frequently withdrawn, last sales' rates being unobtainable. Good Kurpah and dry leaf Madras also sold with spirit, but the other descriptions showed no improvement on the depressed rates ruling yesterday. Of the 2,494 chests which passed the auction, 1,013 were sold, 585 bought in, and 896 withdrawn.

FRIDAY EVENING.

INDIAN TEA.—The supplies brought to market during the week have amounted to 18,000 packages, nearly all of which have been sold at prices comparing favourably with last week's quotations, common descriptions of all styles excepted, which close a little cheaper. With a reduced supply of finest grades, competition has been good at full prices.

COFFEE.—The small public sales have not affected prices, and the market is dull. A few small lots of Plantation Ceylon and East India went without alteration.

RICE.—A cargo of 715 tons Rangoon off the coast, sold at 8s. Market dull, and nothing done in the new season's rice.

INDIGO.—The sales of East India close to-day, 3,400 chests having sold during their progress; they have gone off without animation. The small proportion of Bengals sold readily, and of the late imports, plant Oudes and Oudes, when dry and of desirable quality, have met with a good demand, but the bulk of the latter kinds being damp and wanting in colour, were mostly withdrawn or bought in, as they could only have been sold at a sacrifice, to which importers were not willing to submit. Quotations, as compared with the last October sales rates:—Bengal, middling shipping, 3d. advance; ordinary, 3d. advance; good consuming, 3d. advance; ordinary, par to 2d. advance; plant Oudes, good middling, 2d. to 4d. advance; ordinary to middling, par to 2d. decline; Oudes, ordinary and low, 2d. to 3d. decline. Kurpahs, of which there was a good supply, have met with fair competition; no good or fine marks were offered, but the desirable kinds, fit for export, maintained the advance paid previously to the opening of the sales, while the ordinary and low sold less readily, and required more support from the importers. Secondhand parcels and marks withdrawn or bought in at previous sales were quite neglected, even at a decline on the last sales currency. Quotations:—Good middling, 3d. to 4d. advance; good ordinary to middling, 2d. to 3d. advance; colour, ordinary kinds, 2d. to 3d. advance; undesirable kinds, about par. Dry leaf Madras has met throughout with a good demand, and a general advance on the last sales rates has been established. Good and fine, 3d. advance; middling, 3d. advance; ordinary and low, 3d. advance.

COTTON.—Market strong, but the higher prices asked check business; sales only 1,200 bales, including Tinnivelly, 4 13-16d. to 4 7/8d.; Scinde, 3 1/2d. to 3 11-16d.

TUESDAY EVENING.

TEA.—To-day's sales comprised 13,673 packages, all "without reserve"; 8,945 packages were Congou, chiefly red leaf kinds, and 3,189 scented capers. The auctions passed flatly, but without any change on last week's rates.

COFFEE.—At auction, 187 casks, 831 barrels and bags, Plantation Ceylon sold, small and common, 65s. to 70s. 6d.; low middling to middling, 71s. 6d. to 79s. 6d.; fine, 84s. 6d. to 85s.; rather bold to fine, 89s. to 99s.

COTTON.—A dull market at steady rates. Sales about 1,100 bales, including Tinnivelly, at 4 13-16d. to 5 1/8d.; Bengal, at 3 3/4d. to 4 3-16d.; and Scinde, at 3 7-16d. to 3 1/2d. per lb.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

COFFEE.—The market shows weakness, 119 casks, 20 barrels and bags Plantation Ceylon sold—low middling gray to middling colour, 70s to 78s.; good middling to bold, 82s. to 91s.; one lot fine ditto, 100s.; 10 cases, 177 bags, East Indian Coorg, 68s. to 77s. 6d.

COTTON.—The market is steady, without change. The sales amount to about 1,500 bales, including Timmivally at 4 13-16d. to 5 1/4d., Western 4 9-16d., and Bengal at 4 1/4d. to 4 5-16d. per lb. Forward delivery, American, February-March, 5 59-64d., for middling l.m.c.

Colonel R. A. C. Hunt has been appointed pukka commandant of the 5th Bombay, N.I.; Major A. Poole, second in command; and Major Hennell, wing commander.

The Secretary of State has decided that the tenure of appointment of those Commandants of native regiments who have not completed thirty-two years' service for pension, and who were permitted by G.G.O. No. 110 of 1883 to retain their posts till April 1, 1884, may be extended to a maximum period of nine years, or such less period as may be required to enable the officers to complete thirty-two years' pension service.

Sepoy Goojur Singh, of the 13th Bengal N.I., has been sentenced by a general court-martial at Bareilly to be hanged, for shooting Naick Jaymul Singh at Bareilly on Dec. 7, and causing his death. The Commander in Chief has confirmed the sentence.

COURT-MARTIAL.—At a European District Court-martial held at Poona on the 31st ult., Private William Carey, 2nd Battalion Royal Lancaster Regiment, was charged with using insubordinate language to his superior officer, Corporal J. Cartwright. It appeared that when the court-martial prisoners, of whom Carey was one, were ordered to keep together, he said, "There is too much keeping together altogether about you." He also made use of an indecent expression. The Court, which was presided over by Major Erskine, of the Poona Horse, found the prisoner guilty, and sentenced him to hard labour for 21 months and to be discharged with ignominy from the service. Major General Ross confirmed the sentence with the exception of the "discharged with ignominy," which he remitted. In consequence of the prisoner's general bad character, he directed that the imprisonment should be undergone out of, and not in, the United Kingdom.

WORKS BY

FINAL FRENCH STRUGGLES IN INDIA AND THE INDIAN SEAS. Including an account of the Capture of the Isles of France and Bourbon. Colonel G. B. MALLESON, C.S.I. London: By W. H. Allen and Co 1878

"How India escaped from the government of Prefects and Sub-Prefects to fall under that of Commissioners and Deputy-Commissioners; why the Penal Code of Lord Macaulay reigns supreme instead of a Code Napoleon; why we are not looking on helplessly from Mahé, Karikal, and Pondicherry, while the French are ruling all over Madras and spending millions of francs in attempting to cultivate the slopes of the Neillheries, may be learnt from this modest volume. Colonel Malleison is always painstaking and generally accurate: his style is transparent, and he never loses sight of the purpose with which he commenced to write."—Saturday Review

JAPAN:TRAVELS AND RESEARCHESUndertaken at the Cost of the Prussian Government.By Prof. J. J. REIN,
Of The University of Marburg.The Times.—"Dr. Rein is an accomplished geographer, and is evidently, besides, a scholar of trained powers and untiring industry. The whole work is compiled on a carefully considered plan, and much of it is really interesting reading. As a compendious reference book it is at present without a rival."Nature.—"It is the best of the many publications upon the subject that have appeared in the last ten years."
Daily News.—"This remarkable work has already taken in Germany a high position as a comprehensive study of the whole field of Japanese civilisation, and of the country itself."Sheffield Independent.—"The reader will be amazed at the immense and accurate amount of knowledge he has brought to the accomplishment of his task. The Japanese Government assisted him in the promotion of his undertaking.
This remarkable book deserves very careful study, which it makes easy by its splendidly executed maps and phototypes, and the lucid style of the accomplished author."

THE DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS.

W. THORNHILL & CO., Sole Agents.

The Reputation of the "DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS," originally introduced into England by W. THORNHILL and CO., is now permanently established. The success of their enterprise has surpassed their most sanguine expectations. "DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS" afford the only instance hitherto attained of the absolutely perfect representation of the real diamonds by artificial means. These remarkable stones, by their purity and brilliancy, support comparison with diamonds of the first water, and are undistinguishable therefrom. They are infinitely superior in every respect to real diamonds of inferior quality. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS were exposed side by side with real diamonds of great value in the Paris Exhibition, 1878, and were awarded a Prize Medal and the highest recompense awarded to imitations. They attracted universal attention and admiration, and forthwith became much in vogue with the grande monde and elite of society. They are now worn at the Court balls, and upon all occasions in London, Paris, and St. Petersburg. They are invaluable for intermixing with and replacing parures and other costly diamond ornaments. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS can be worn at all times even by daylight, with confidence and absolute security. They possess the penetrating brilliancy and lustre peculiar to real diamonds, and the concessionaires guarantee the surprise and pleasure of purchasers. The perfection thus attained is the result of investigations and experiments extending over two generations. The cost, nevertheless, of the DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS is about 1-300th that of real diamonds.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLDs, ASTHMA,
BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE—Dr. J. C. BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false. This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. EAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to. See The Times, July 15th, 1884.

DIARRHOEA, DYSENTERY.
GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "IT DOES COMPLETELY CURE ME OF DIARRHOEA." From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880. To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR.—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-earned medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaar, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhoea and Treacherous Spasms, Cramps, Nausea, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhoea, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

PALLIATIVE IN NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,
TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of
EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,
PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSUBTLE IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists. Is. 1d., 6d., and 4s. 6d.

THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

LONDON MEETING OF THE GENERAL COMMITTEE FORMED TO OPPOSE THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

On Tuesday, the 22nd inst., a meeting of the General Committee, formed to oppose the Bengal Tenancy Bill, was held at Limmer's Hotel, Conduit-street, London; Mr. C. T. BUCKLAND (late senior member of the Board of Revenue, Bengal) presiding.

In opening the proceedings the CHAIRMAN said:—Gentlemen, I think we may congratulate ourselves on having got so many gentlemen to attend on such a day as this, when the weather is so adverse to us. I have received a number of letters from various gentlemen apologising for not being able to come here; but if the attendance is not quite so numerous as it might have been, we know that we have behind us a very powerful list of gentlemen who have joined what we have called the General Committee, and whose representatives we are to-day. In that list we have the names of gentlemen who represent all the provinces of India; and, although this Bill is called the Bengal Tenancy Bill, it embodies principles which concern the whole of India; and, therefore, it is a great advantage for us to have the support of gentlemen representing every portion of the country. Amongst our supporters in Bengal we have some most influential names of English gentlemen who are landowners themselves, planters of indigo, and planters of tea. I wished very much to get here my friend, Mr. James Barnes, of Bhagalpore, one of the most experienced men I ever met in that country, but he is unavoidably absent. We have the support of Mr. Gale and Mr. Studd; Mr. Thoms, I am glad to see, is here; and I could mention other names of gentlemen of great experience in Bengal who are with us. After those I should name the civilians, of whom I hope to get a great many more to join our party. I have not had time yet to get answers to many letters which have been sent out in the course of the last week. You will have seen that Sir Henry Ricketts has joined our committee, and those who are well acquainted with Bengal know that there is no one who had so thorough a knowledge of the people and the land laws of Bengal as Sir H. Ricketts. In the course of his various public services at Chittagong and Cuttack, and as a member of the Viceregal Council of India, he always stood up for the true interest of the people of Bengal; and therefore we are particularly fortunate in having his name on our side. Then, also, we have Sir George Yule. That gentleman was very well known to me when he was a collector and commissioner, and I can say there was scarcely a more practical man in Bengal. We have also my friend, Mr. T. E. Ravenshaw, who was for many years a commissioner and then a member of the Board of Revenue. Then we have Mr. Frank Simson, who was a commissioner of Dacca—a better man, and one who better understood the character of the Bengali people is not to be found. I will read you a short quotation from Mr. Simson's letter to me. He sends his apologies for not attending, and he says, "I have not studied the Bill, but it seems to me to savour of interference with proprietary rights which had been guaranteed by the State, and which are looked on in Bengal as permanent, and, in a manner, to be a departure from that high standard of correct, straightforward dealing which always characterised the action of the dear old Company and the legislative proceedings of all Governor Generals before Lord Ripon." Then, gentlemen, in addition to the names I have mentioned, we hope to secure the adhesion of a number of collectors and judges and ex-members of the Board of Revenue, so that before we have another meeting there is no doubt our numbers will be strengthened materially. Now, it is my duty, as chairman of this meeting, to try to explain the objects for which we have come together, and, in proper parliamentary form, I shall "conclude by moving a resolution." By way of making the thing plain, I think it will be best for me at once to read to you the resolution, which will do service as a sort of text to the short address which I shall inflict upon you. The resolution is—

"That in the opinion of this meeting the Bengal Tenancy Bill, which is now under the consideration of the Legislative Council of the Viceroy of India, is in many respects unjust, unnecessary, and injurious to the rights and privileges of the zemindars of Bengal and Behar, and at the same time pernicious to the true interests and welfare of the ryots and cultivators of the soil."

Well, gentlemen, we have come here to-day in order to organise measures in opposition to the Bill now before the Legislative Council of India. That Bill is called the Bengal Tenancy Bill, and I may say—and I do not think anybody here will contradict me—that the subject is one of the most difficult with which anybody could have to deal. The Bill itself is not easy to be understood, and connected with it there is an amount of literature and reading which will weary most people. It is very difficult to understand it; it is still more difficult to make it understood. If you go at all into details you will be met with contradictions on minor points, and you will lose sight of principles. Therefore, for our purpose to-day, it is sufficient to say that the proposed Bill is most injurious and unjust to the interests of the zemindars, and it is equally unfavourable and pernicious to the true interests of the ryots. There are some people who have hesitated to join our movement because they think that we are solely on the side of the zemindars. There cannot be a greater mistake. (Hear, hear.) We must be acting contrary to our own interests if we do anything that is not in the interests of the ryots. The prosperity of the zemindar must lie in the prosperity of his ryots; and I can only assure those who are hesitating, and who think that we are going to support the zemindars, that the ryots will find us their best and truest friends. I should like to mention briefly what has passed in India in reference to this Bill. The Bill is not one of any new birth. It has been going through a state of transmigration, if I may say so, for the last seven or eight years; but, since it was last launched into the world, at any rate, within the last twelve months, taking it as it is in its present form, it has been opposed in every possible shape and way by the zemindars of Bengal and Behar. They have petitioned against it; they have petitioned the Lieutenant Governor and the Viceroy; they have petitioned the Houses of Parliament; they have petitioned the Secretary of State. They have held meetings locally and in Calcutta. In Calcutta, I think, the latest meeting was held in November last, and to those who have read the proceedings at that meeting, it would be unnecessary for me to repeat what was said there. I need only say that the most able native gentlemen, Dr. Rajendra Lal Mitra, and Babu Joykissen Mookerjee and his able son, and a number of other men whose names I need not mention now, spoke with the greatest ability, and feeling, and eloquence. They were supported by my friend, Mr. Keswick, who takes a deep interest in the country through the large estates which are known by the name of Robert Watson and Co.; also by Mr. Henry Bell, a gentleman who combines the experience of a civilian with all the legal knowledge of a barrister. And if you wish to read a powerful exposition of what is to be stated against the Bill, I would recommend you to study Mr. Bell's speech. In addition to the speeches at the meeting, you will find a whole host of pamphlets of every sort. If you want a little light reading, there is the Bill itself, with only 230 sections, and with it you may take the "Statement of Objects and Reasons," by Mr. Ilbert. So much of what has been done in India. In England, the opposition began some months ago, and, I may say, was ably headed by my friend, Mr. Roper Lethbridge. Probably, many of you heard the able speech which he made, and most of you read the very powerful paper which he has since published. To him succeeded, or, rather with him co-operated at the same time, Mr. Dacosta, who, in the pages of the Contemporary Review has published a paper that is full of ability and eloquence. He was followed by Mr. Fleetwood Pellew (whom I had hoped to have seen here to-day), who was a commissioner and collector in India, and has a great deal of practical knowledge, and has done his best to oppose the Bill. Our object in meeting here to-day is to support those gentlemen in their opposition to this Bill, and to do what we can to enlighten public opinion, both in England and in India—in all quarters, and in the highest and the lowest places. I am afraid I must apologise for appearing before you to-day in the capacity of your chairman, because there are many amongst you who are more competent than I am to enter into the merits of the Bill. But, it happens that something like forty years ago, when some people in this room were not born, I was engaged in the Settlement of the Chittagong District. Now, of all the difficult duties ever heard of, that was one of the most difficult. Then, under the guidance of two such good men as Sir Henry Ricketts and Mr. Sconce, whose name is now almost forgotten, I was charged with looking after what were called in those days summary suits. There were two words derived from the Persian, hufum and punjum, which constituted the rent law of those days. I have had to order the apprehension of some thousands of ryots, who declined to pay their rents except by the simple process of the hufum. It was a curious and simple form of procedure. Suppose the ryot said, "I shall not pay my rent because I am not quite sure about getting a receipt." Very good. The zemindar came to the collector and made an application, and, on payment of a small sum, a peon was sent out, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred he brought in—not the man but the rent having given the man a receipt for it with which he was perfectly satisfied. However, nowadays it is considered perfectly immoral, altogether impossible in fact, to have recourse to such at personal procedure as that. But such is the difference between Asia and England, in my humble opinion, that I have always had great respect for the old procedure. But if the hufum law had its merits, I can not say so much for the punjum or the law of distraint. The law of distraint was intolerable. The poor fellow, if his landlord distrained, had not the ghost of a chance. There was a man put in possession, and he remained in possession. Of course, the property you take possession of when you distraint on a native is not very much to talk about; perhaps it is a cow, or a goat, or a bedstead; suppose he had a cow: it was astonishing to see the bill, that was run up in taking possession of that cow. Generally, when we came to square accounts—(and it was my duty to look after these things as a youngster)—the arrears of rent having been so much, the costs of distraint were about double that; the poor man was brought in a debtor of a few annas, which he was let off handsomely! Those, gentlemen, are my early experiences. Then it happened that, in the course of a long service, I had to deal with all the Lieutenant Governors of Bengal, from the time of the institution of the Government of Bengal. Sir Frederick Halliday, Sir John Peter Grant, Sir Cecil Beadon, and Sir William Grey. They all governed Bengal after the old principles; but it pleased "the powers that were" to send Sir George Campbell amongst us. Sir George Campbell came amongst us like—well, you will understand what I mean, if you have ever thrown a duck into a pond—he came flopping into the pond, and he quacked and flopped about, and made a tremendous row. (Laughter.) Well, he did not do any good. It happened to be my good fortune to survive, and to undo a great deal of what I considered the mischief that Sir George Campbell had done—of course, it was according to his notions good. He was succeeded by Sir Richard Temple, and Sir Richard Temple was bound to carry out Sir George Campbell's views. It was in their time that this Rent Bill came into existence; but it was then in quite a different form. It was then a Bill for assisting the zemindars to collect their rents and was not full of all those curious provisions which it now contains. Finally, came Sir Ashley Eden, and he was good enough to put your humble servant in the Board of Revenue, and there I concluded my career. In the course of my forty years' service I think that I obtained some knowledge of the system, and I have given you this long explanation—rather a tedious one, perhaps—by way of apology for now appearing as your chairman.

And now let us come to the actual question before us. It is a very difficult question, as I have said. It is all very well for you, gentlemen who understand a great deal about it, but what we want is also to make the subject intelligible to the British public. You might think that the thing could be made plain and simple by talking about revenue and rent; but when you use the word revenue you find that it is not understood in England; and land revenue is a thing of which people here have no idea. I need not dwell upon that any longer so far as we are concerned; we know that the revenue is what is paid by the zemindars of Bengal (and I am speaking only of Bengal) to the Government of the country under the terms of the Permanent Settlement. But it is like waving a red flag before a bull to talk to some people about the Permanent Settlement. They shake their head at you at once, and judging only by what they know of current events, they think that the Permanent Settlement is the worst thing that ever could have been invented. I have no hesitation in saying here as I have frequently said in other places, that if there had been no Permanent Settlement in Bengal in 1793, the British Government would have had no existence in Bengal in the year 1884. If you only read the ancient history of the Settlement you will get an idea of the difficulties with which zemindars who then consented to it had to struggle. They could hardly collect the rents from which they had to pay ten-elevenths as revenue; the system was on the verge of coming to an end, when luckily it pulled through, and from the time that that old hufum law that I mentioned just now was introduced, enabling the zemindars to collect their rents, to the year 1859—it is a big jump, sixty years—things went on fairly smoothly in Bengal. The Revenue was permanently settled in 1793, and in that Settlement the zemindars were confirmed in their proprietary rights—these are the most important words that I have said to you to-day—the zemindars were confirmed in their proprietary rights. You will find such a full account of them in Mr. Bell's pamphlet, and also in the petition which the zemindars have sent to the India House, that it would be useless for me to dilate upon them; and, according to my view, and the view of many other people, the Settlement of 1793 was merely a confirmation of the rights of the zemindars which they had held from what I may call time immemorial; they were of Hindu growth and were confirmed by the Mahomedans, and were further confirmed by Lord Cornwallis's Settlement. Even if that were not so, one hundred years have passed, and has anybody ever brought a suit in the Civil Courts of India to dispute the proprietary rights of the zemindars? Has not the Government always recognised them? (Hear, hear.) Now, I am going to mention a little thing which is rather technical. The Government of Bengal had the power of buying zemindaries which were in default for payment of revenue; they bought them in for a peppercorn, that is to say a rupee. Supposing a man had an estate worth a thousand rupees a year, and he did not pay his revenue on the day fixed for payment; it was put up to auction, nobody had the good sense to buy it, and the collector of the district bought it in for, say, a shilling. Then the Government proceeded to re-settle it, as it was called. They went and measured it and arranged with the ryots, and fixed a new revenue upon it, and it was managed khass, as it was called. But a certain shrewd man arose, and said, "Why is the Government to keep all these estates in its hands? Why are we to manage khass," when all khass management is bad and oppressive? Let us sell the proprietary right which the Government has thus acquired." Of course, the Government cheerfully proceeded to sell the proprietary right in the estate—mind you, to sell the very proprietary right which is now disputed. It happened to me, gentlemen, when I was at Dacca, to send up an offer of one hundred thousand pies to the Government, on behalf of Khajeh Abdul Gunnee, to purchase Pergunnah Buldakhal, which the Government had bought for one rupee. This shows you what the proprietary right was valued at. And that offer was refused, and the Government made about three times that sum by selling the estate piecemeal. All over Bengal the Government sold this proprietary right, and yet we have gentlemen standing up now in the Legislative Council, and telling us that it never existed. Gentlemen, I do believe in the proprietary right, confirmed to the zemindars at the time of the Permanent Settlement; but it does not suit Mr. Ilbert to recognise it. It does not suit those gentlemen of the Civil Service who have been called Fenians—Irish gentlemen who might perhaps have been Fenians if they had not become Bengal civilians—it does not suit them to recognise it, now that they have plenty of money in their pockets, and can ventilate their opinions with impunity, without any fear of Kilmainham (laughter); some of them have arrived at high dignity, and they deny the existence of anything like proprietary rights. A gentleman formerly in high authority in India said to me not long ago, "It is just like people who go to look at a shield, of which there are two sides, one black, and the other white; those people persist in looking only at the one side of the shield which is black, and they have not the slightest idea that there is any other side of the shield." Perhaps we who look at both sides are not sufficiently inclined to look at the black, but my idea is this. It is a question of evidence, and I will appeal to anyone who will impartially examine the evidence of the Permanent Settlement, whether it is not the fact that the zemindars had strict proprietary rights conferred on them, although it is now the intention of the Government to dispute it. Besides the ordinary evidence, which is appealed to in the Laws and Regulations of 1793, very few people are aware that there is absolutely a written title to each zemindary in Bengal, a long document known, by the vernacular name of the Dowl Bundobust, which is kept on record in the Revenue Board Office in Calcutta. That deed contains full details of the rights and privileges conferred on each zemindar; yet these people who will not look at evidence, persist in denying it. It is not for us to impute motives to anybody, but it is my suspicion, and I believe that suspicion is shared by others, that gentlemen of the school of Mr. Ilbert and the Fenian civilians are merely desirous of undermining the Permanent Settlement with a view to eventually greatly increase the taxation and land revenue of Bengal. That, I believe, is the highly honourable motive by which they are really actuated. Of course, it is very wrong to impute motives, and therefore I will say no more about it. Perhaps I have already detained you too long, but I have one or two words to say as regards the rent and the position of the ryots. Now, rent seems a very simple thing to those who pay house rent and who know of no other form of rent, but the rent of land is a very different thing. Lord Beaconsfield, if I may venture to quote such authority, said that rent could be best ascertained by putting the land which was to be rented into the market, and taking the highest bid. Our old Professor Jones, who lectured when I was at Haileybury, used to say that rent was that which could be paid by the cultivator after defraying the cost of the cultivation, and paying the expenses of the livelihood of himself and family. I remember the great Sir Robert Peel asking me when I was a boy at Haileybury, how to define rent, and I answered him in those words, and he was satisfied. I believe at the time of the Permanent Settlement, the rent of Bengal was fairly and equitably settled, really according to the capacities of the land. It is true that the zemindars at that time had a playful way of putting on cesses and adding what they called abwabs and such kinds of things. The Government when they made the Permanent Settlement promised to protect the ryots against these abwabs and cesses, and they did so emphatically, and so things went on till the year 1859, when what were called the rights of occupancy were invented. In connection with rent you will find hardly twenty words in the whole of the ancient literature of the question which refer to the rights of occupancy. When the phrase was introduced into the Legislature in 1859 it was so little known in the vernacular languages that the Bengali translator to the Government, whose acquaintance I had at that time, came to me, as I had a slight knowledge of the language, and asked how he should translate the phrase "rights of occupancy" into Bengali. Therefore, it seems as if rights of occupancy were rather a plant of foreign growth. However, a quarter of a century has passed, and rights of occupancy have been extended, and the zemindar has such an interest in maintaining his own ryots, that the zemindars themselves are not very anxious to get rid of the rights of occupancy which have been created. But now, what does the Legislature propose to do? These rights of occupancy are, I may say, to be poisoned; the rights of occupancy, instead of being for the ryots' good, are to be so applied that they will be the greatest mischief and injury to him. Rights of occupancy are to be made transferable, the ryot is to be able to mortgage and sell his rights of occupancy, and what will be the result? Hitherto the custom in Bengal has been quite against the transferability of the rights of occupancy or of any ryoti tenure, unless the man leaving obtained the consent of the zemindar to the succession of the incoming tenant; whereas under the law now proposed, each ryot, each man who possesses rights of occupancy, is to be able to go to the money-lender and say:—"Lend me fifty rupees on my land," and utterly regardless of consequences spend that money on marriages, or any other of those ceremonies on which the natives spend their money. What will happen? When the landlord wants his rent, it will not be forthcoming, except as a further supply from the money-lender; the money-lender knows how far he can go, and the time will come when the money-lender steps in and sells up the ryot. Then this beautiful law says that the money-lender or the purchaser, (because if the money-lender himself does not come in, he will have what is called a benamsee man to take his place), may sublet the lands at almost any rate he can get. If the zemindar were to step in he might pay a large sum of money for the rights of occupancy; but he is never to get any profit at all out of it, though he is to have a nominal right of prescription. But I will not go into further details. All I say, is that if the transferability of the rights of occupancy is given unrestrainedly to the ryots it will be a curse to them instead of a blessing. We have a witness on our side—perhaps you have not all read his book—I mean Sir James Caird; he has just published a little book on the land and revenue, and other things of India. And Mr. John Bright has said that it is a very edifying book. Sir James Caird tells us again, and again, that the greatest injury you could inflict on the ryots, is to give them power to sell their tenures, so as to enable them to run into debt and become the serfs of the money-lenders. I have one further question to ask and that is, what have the zemindars done, and what have the ryots done, to deserve this legislation; what have these unfortunate, uneducated ryots done to deserve to have inflicted on them a rent-law of 230 sections, accompanied by explanations and appendices—a much worse gift than a white elephant? How is the poor ryot to understand all this? He must apply to the mookhtar, to his legal adviser, and all his little savings will be spent in legal expenses. Legal expenses may be justifiable, but they are sometimes perhaps a little severe for a poor ryot. I do not believe that the ryots are so opposed to their zemindars as it is the interest of some people to make out. I know there are bad zemindars as well as good zemindars, but I have seen a good deal of village life in India, and although the zemindar has to take his rent from the ryot, the zemindar and his local agents do give back something to the ryot, just in the same way that tenants on an English Estate get back something from their landlords; there are festivals; there are marriages; there are occasions on which the ryots are all invited to the zemindar's house, and share in the fun, and they enjoy it, and they forget their trouble; they forget that they had to pay a few annas extra on the last rent day. I think that the ryots, whose friends I say we are, would infinitely prefer to pay their rents to the zemindars, than to pay them to a tehsildar or a serberakar, or Sir George Campbell's canongo, or some collector peons. If the ryots themselves do not want this law, why is it to be inflicted on the zemindars? Have the zemindars deserved this treatment at our hands? In the course of my experience, there have been certain troubles in India, and the zemindars of Bengal and Behar behaved manfully and loyally towards the Government. I refer to those terrible times of the Mutiny, when almost the whole of Bengal, and almost the whole of Behar enjoyed peace; and it was for this reason because the zemindars kept their people quiet, and did all they could to support the Government, lending us elephants and horses, and all that they had. I can also say that, according to my knowledge, the great zemindars of Bengal have always been most liberal on all occasions of sickness, and famine, and other calamities of different kinds, inundations, and so forth, whenever they have been asked to come forward with subscriptions to relieve the sufferings of the people. I was intimate with the Rajah of Burdwan the chief zemindar of Bengal, and I assure you that he never closed his purse, but opened it most freely to any application made to him on behalf of his own people or any others. I should like to give you the names of all the other good and charitable zemindars whom I know, and I say that for their loyalty and liberality they deserve better treatment, and not to be deprived of their privileges, and driven to contest every point, every pice, with their ryots in those courts of law, from which Sir James Caird says it is most desirous that they should all be rescued. Well, gentlemen, I have been detaining you a great deal longer than I had intended. I only hope that, as I believe, the cause we are now advocating is a strong one, we shall be able to conduct our discussions with perfect moderation and good temper, and without any personal animosity such as other questions may have raised. I have reason to believe that ours is the winning cause, and that the Bill which is now before the Legislative Council will certainly be modified considerably in that Council; and that, unless it is so modified, it will not ever succeed in finding a place on the Statute Book of India. Again I apologise for detaining you so long, and trust that the time will be sufficient for many gentlemen who are present to give us the benefit of their information on this important question.

Mr. H. STEWART REID (late of the Bengal Civil Service, and member of the Board of Revenue, North Western Provinces)—Mr. Chairman, I am rather afraid that you have said almost all I have to say on the subject before us, but as my services have been in the North West Provinces, and I have had to deal very intimately with the rent law thereof, having for some thirteen years supervised its working, I venture to second the Resolution you have moved. During that same period I had frequent occasion to resist communistic and revolutionary proposals similar to, or identical with, some of the objectionable provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Bill. I was on the committee for revising the rent law of the North West Provinces, and many of these provisions were mooted at the time, but fortunately they were thrown out of the Bill. It would be like twice slaying the slain if I went over the ground which you, sir, in your speech just now, and Mr. Roper Lethbridge, in the interesting paper which he read at St. James's Hall the other day, have so well covered. There can be no doubt that the Bill to which we take an objection is a most one-sided Bill, and makes, as I said on a former occasion, a dead set at the zemindar, whose rights are based on immemorial possession and prescription, and have been guaranteed and sanctioned and recognised by the Court of Directors and by the Government of India. Mr. Roper Lethbridge styled the Bill a most unrighteous Bill, and I do not think that that expression is one whit too strong, inasmuch as the tendency of the Bill is to take away from the zemindars the rights which they have so long possessed. I should like to-day to consider the Bill especially with regard to its effect upon the occupancy tenant. The professed object of the Bill is to place the ryot in a better position than he is in at present; in fact in a better position than he has ever occupied yet, but there is one provision in the Bill which will be fatal to him. I refer to the clause which confers upon him the right of transferring the right of occupancy. That question was fought out in the North West Revenue and Rent Act Committee, and the right was made most strictly heritable. The High Court at Allahabad, nevertheless, ruled that the right was transferable; the Board of Revenue referred the matter to the Local Government, and I believe a short amending Act was passed which could not possibly be misread. I do not presume to assert that no legislation is required between landlord and tenant in Bengal. I think that there are many provisions in the North West Provinces Act which might be extended to Bengal. I refer particularly to the compensation for unexhausted improvements where they have been made with the permission of the landlord, and perhaps in the case of old occupancy tenants even without his permission. I should like to see the remission of rent insisted on, provided that at the same time a corresponding remission of revenue was made on the occurrence of calamities beyond the control of man, such as hailstorms, which lay waste whole villages. Also the registration, under efficient safeguards, for the interests of the tenant, of all leases and counterparts which give the zemindars a title to claim an enhanced rent, should be afforded to the zemindar, and greater facilities for the realisation of rent. I believe that in Bengal, if the full quota of revenue is not paid by sunset of the day on which it is due, the zemindar is sold up. Surely, in that case the Government should aid the zemindar in collecting from recalcitrant tenants the rents of which the revenue is the Government share. But I do not find any provision made in the proposed Bill for facilitating the realisation of rents. In fact, the zemindar is throughout the whole Bill treated as a wild beast, who should receive no mercy or pity. In our rent law in the North West Provinces all illegal cesses are strictly prohibited. A proviso of that kind should, I think, be embodied in this Bill, if it is not there already. I believe the Bill, as it stands, will inflict even greater injury on the tenant than it does on the zemindar. Therefore, I think the Bill may not only be described as unrighteous, but also as illogical and stupid. We all know that the tenants, as well as the proprietors, in all parts of India are very generally indebted to the village banker. The ryot is to be enabled, under the provisions of this Bill, to transfer his right of occupancy, and it will be pretty sure to fall into the hands of the money-lender. We shall have, interposed between the zemindar and the actual cultivator of the soil, the money-lender, whose only object will be to squeeze as much rent as he can out of the cultivator. The latter becomes really a tenant at will, and after the money-lender has sucked the orange dry he does not care what becomes of it. I am speaking now from my experience of the state of things in Jhansi, referred to by the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal. Formerly in Jhansi land could not be sold for simple bond debts; but the section of the Civil Procedure Code, which allowed land to be sold for bond debts in other parts of Bengal and the North West Provinces, was extended to that province, and the consequence is that the control of a very large proportion of the cultivated land is in the hands of money-lenders. The same thing would happen, I believe, in Bengal if the right of occupancy were allowed to be transferred. Well, gentlemen, Mr. Buckland has really exhausted the subject, as I said before, and I therefore will not detain you further, but content myself with formally seconding the resolution.

Mr. ROGER LETHBRIDGE, C.I.E., supporting the resolution, said,—Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, before the resolution is put to the meeting, I should just like to add a very few and very general remarks to those which have already been addressed to you this afternoon. I shall not presume to attempt to add anything of a technical nature to the admirable and exhaustive review of the subject that has been presented to us by such great authorities as Mr. Buckland and Mr. Stewart Reid. All that I shall attempt is to speak generally; and in that way I hope that I may be followed by other gentlemen who are present this afternoon. One thing that strikes me as a very remarkable thing, and that I should like to recommend to the notice of the members of the General Committee is, the many-sided character of the objections to the Bill that have been disclosed to us this afternoon by Mr. Buckland and by Mr. Stewart Reid who are so thoroughly well qualified by their experience to teach us the whole bearing of the subject. It seems to me that every intelligent and impartial student of the Bill, whatever may be his own political bias, from whatever side he may approach the consideration of the Bill, whether from the side of the landowner or from the side of the ryot, the actual cultivator of the soil, or from the point of view of the general public—and of course the general public has an equal interest in the welfare of both those contending parties—it seems to me that Mr. Buckland and Mr. Stewart Reid have shown us good reason this afternoon for objecting to the principle of the measure from each of these points of view. If there were no other objection than this, the study of the Bill seems to me to show that at every point and at every turn the result of the legislation which we are now considering will be to drive both the landlord and the ryot into the courts of law. Now, if there is one thing on which every economical authority on the agricultural interest in Bengal is agreed, I think it is this, that the less that interest is harassed in our courts of law the better; and yet, so multifarious are the details in which the Legislature here takes upon itself to interfere with the relations existing between the landlord and the tenant, that it is perfectly clear that the result will be to enormously increase the litigation in Bengal. It is unnecessary for me to dwell on the ruin that will ensue from the Bill to the landholding interest in Bengal, for that has been fully explained to us already this afternoon, and it has just been put before the English public in the petitions of the Behar and Bengal zemindars, who have told us plainly that this legislation will reduce them to the position of mere ciphers on their own estates. As a matter of fact, it is perfectly clear that they will become mere rent chargers. And perhaps the worst part of that is that the persons from whom they will have to recover their rent charges, will be in some cases either persons who have acquired that position from simple commercial motives, who have purchased the occupancy rights simply as a commercial speculation, or else in some cases we are assured it will be—and I think the experience of most of us tells us that it very often will be—the fact that those rights will be acquired simply with the object of harassing and annoying the zemindar under whom the rights are purchased. I turn then, lastly, to the interest of the ryots, the actual cultivators of the soil, and it seems to me perfectly clear, from the vigorous denunciation of this Bill that has been offered to the English public by Lord Stanley of Alderley, who is a well-known friend of the ryots, and by the presence here this afternoon as an opponent of the Bill of one of the best known friends and the oldest supporters of the Bengal ryot, the Rev. James Long—a gentleman who is widely known to be a sincere and warm friend of the ryot—

The Rev. JAS. LONG :—I beg pardon, but I am not an opponent of the Bill; I oppose certain clauses of it.

Mr. ROGER LETHBRIDGE :—That is exactly what I understood. All of us, in fact, oppose certain clauses of the Bill. What we say is this, we do not wish to see the Bill pass, at any rate in anything like its present form. I think it is perfectly clear that the friends of the ryot, as well as the friends of the zemindar, are opposed to this Bill, at any rate in anything like its present form. Sir James Caird, who is by no means an unfriendly witness on the side of the ryot, has told us in his last book (and Mr. Buckland has well referred to this passage) that there could be nothing more dangerous in the conditions of Indian agricultural life than that there should be any permanent divorce between such occupancy rights as the law confers and the actual cultivators of the soil. We ought, according to Sir James Caird, to keep the tenant's rights, if we give them at all, attached to the soil. Yet, under this Bill, such are the facilities which are offered to this divorce between the rights given by the law and the cultivators of the soil, that even Mr. Ilbert himself in his "Statement of Objects and Reasons," Section 41, actually contemplates the possibility of such a state of affairs becoming general—of its coming to be the case generally in Bengal, that the actual cultivators of the soil will have no rights whatever under the law either against his immediate landlord the mahajun or against the nominal zemindar. Now, when we know how the ryots of Bengal are in a way already adscripti gleba—how they feel themselves tied to the land by various ties, and that they will have no protection whatever from the law, either against their immediate landlords or against the zemindars—I ask wherein their position will differ from that serfdom? For myself, I can see no difference whatever.

MR. CECIL CHAPMAN :—Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I have been asked as an outsider, and therefore, perhaps, competent to look at this question from an unprejudiced point of view, to say a few words upon this resolution. I am certainly of this opinion that you who have consented to join the General Committee for the purpose of opposing this Bill need not linger too long upon a discussion of its general purposes, such as Mr. Buckland addressed himself to this afternoon. I think it is very important for us as a Committee intending to make use of our association for practical purposes to confine our attention to those particular points which have already been alluded to, upon which we are more likely to make weight with the Government in making some alteration of this Bill when it comes to be discussed and actually to be put upon the Statute Book. Now, it strikes me in the first place, that in discussing this resolution of Mr. Buckland's, the question of injustice is the one which we have least to consider, when we are discussing our own rights, for it is always assumed as a matter of course, that there is a selfish principle in those who attack a Government by saying that they are unjust so far as they, the parties complaining, are concerned. Now, whether the zemindars obtained proprietary rights under the Permanent Settlement or whether they did not, it seems to me quite obvious that the length of time which has elapsed since that Permanent Settlement does justify them in considering that under any circumstances and under any law, they have acquired such rights at any rate as would justify them in saying that they ought to have some consideration for those rights if they are to be interfered with. Therefore it seems to me useless to discuss the point from an historical point of view. Let us assume that we have some rights to be considered when this legislation has to be proposed. Now, the expediency of this measure which has been discussed by Mr. Buckland from the point of view of the ryots seems to me to be one upon which we are most likely to make weight. I do not know what Mr. Long's views may be with reference to this question, but there is no doubt that he is considering the interest of the ryot in whatever opposition he has to make to this measure. Now, it strikes me that what has already been said is quite sufficient to prove that the one great blot in this Bill, is the one which Mr. Charles Russell pointed out in the Land Act for Ireland—the absolute want of any process by which the subdivision of tenancies can be checked. Mr. Roper Lethbridge has already stated that the cultivator of soil will not be protected under this Bill. Now, it is assumed that although in the first instance, the object of the Bill was to facilitate the process of obtaining rent for the zemindars, still the secondary object was to improve the status of the ryots. If we, as a committee, can prove to the Government that this measure which they intend to pass will not have that effect, but quite the contrary effect, and will raise a class of middlemen, who will be much more likely to be oppressive to the actual cultivators of the soil, than the present zemindars; then, I say, that we shall have very considerable reason for supposing that we shall be listened to in our representations. So much upon that particular point. Then there comes the question of fixed tenure. We have fixity of tenure. It is no use for us any longer to discuss the expediency or the justice of occupancy rights having been insisted upon; as Mr. Buckland says, it is un fait accompli. The Act of 1859 has already established occupancy rights, and the only question is, as to how they are to be dealt with at the present time. We know that occupancy rights have existed in Bengal and in Behar for some time, and we know that they have grown up under a certain system, by which they became hereditary, and for my part if we are to have fixity of tenure, such as the right of occupancy involves, it is better that we should have included with it to a certain extent the other "F," namely, fair rent. It is quite impossible for us to say that if you have fixity of tenure, the landlord should be able to get rid of his tenant by raising the rent in an unfair way. Therefore we admit that the Government would be right in saying, that where there do exist occupancy rights, there must be a fair rent. Therefore, the only thing we can with advantage contend for is that in dealing with the right of occupancy, and the sale of that right, it would be an injustice to the zemindars to have fixity of rent over a large district; in fact, any fixed rent over a large district could not possibly be consistent with justice to the zemindars. Those are two questions upon which, I think, we may, readily and willingly join issue with the Government. I fancy, from what I have heard, and certainly, from what I have read, that it is impossible to take a large district in India, and say that one-fifth of the property in the produce of the soil should be the maximum limit of rent all over that particular district. We all know that the produce of the soil and the profits to be made out of it, vary in every district in a most extraordinary way; and, it seems to me a most fanciful thing for the Legislature to have suggested that, not only should a maximum limit be now fixed, but, that there should be a limit on the possible enhancement of rent. As Mr. Roper Lethbridge says, the increase of litigation, which is likely to follow upon the process suggested by this Bill is a radical evil in it—namely, that when you want to have an enhancement of rent, there should not be a simple process to obtain it, and that there should be no elasticity in the rate to be fixed, but that you should bring a suit for enhancement, which would, naturally, be resisted, because it would probably pay one better to fight the question than to go before the commissioners and have it settled once and for all. Upon those two points I fancy that we should lay the greatest possible stress. Then, as I should contend, the question of the sale of occupancy rights is, of course, another thing. The zemindar is most distinctly put to a disadvantage by the proposal. As all the speakers who have preceded me have already pointed out, it not only deprives zemindars of rights which they now hold and transfers them to other people, but it renders them liable to all sorts of hardship in the sense of having strangers, people who may be their enemies, planted upon their own soil. The zemindar is no longer to those who may be his tenant, or whom he will have by his side, but anybody may come there; and that it is proposed to enact, without any suggestion of compensation. Now, I think that that is another point upon which we may all insist most strongly, viz., that if a reform has been proved to be necessary—and on that, certainly at present, I am at issue with the reformers, for I do not think that any reform has been proved to be necessary, because I think that everything that requires reform could be reformed in another way, viz., by preventing extortion in a totally different way, without really altering the status and the relationship between landlord and tenant—but even assuming the necessity of reform, and then assuming again the necessity for reforming in this particular way, I think we ought to insist upon compensation being given to the zemindars. It is an idea which is a great deal too common at the present time that rights may be interfered with, and that reforms should be paid for out of the pockets of the reformed. It seems to me to be one proposition that we ought strongly to insist upon, viz., that if a reform is to be made at all, it should be paid for by the reformers, and not out of the pockets of those who are reformed.

The CHAIRMAN then put the resolution, and it was carried unanimously.

MR. J. DACOSTA moved :—

"That an Executive Committee be appointed, consisting of the following gentlemen, with power to add to their number, and that Mr. C. T. Buckland be requested to become chairman of the Committee, and Mr. Roper Lethbridge to act as honorary secretary :—

Agnew, Major General W., late Judicial Commissioner of Assam.

And that the Executive Committee be authorised to adopt such constitutional measures as may be deemed necessary to obtain the modification or the withdrawal of the Bill now before the Legislative Council, and to enlighten public opinion in England and India regarding the real merits of the question."

He said:—Mr. Chairman and gentlemen,—The difficulty in understanding this Bill thoroughly has been lessened very much by the publication of the opinions of the officials of Bengal who have been consulted on the subject by the Government, and who reported upon it during last summer—the commissioners, district judges, and collectors, and those reports have assisted me at all events in coming to the conclusion that the real effects of this measure would be to call in, under pretence of facilitating the transfer of occupancy rights, a new class of middlemen. They cannot be the cultivators, because to acquire the occupancy rights a man must have capital, and the ryots, the actual cultivators themselves, have, many of them, no capital at all. It seems to me that the facility with which these occupancy rights are to be acquired, simply amounts to an invitation to moneyed men to come and acquire them. A man who has a plot of half an acre of land, and has held it for twelve years, and who afterwards tenants 500 acres on the same estate, has an occupancy right over the whole. Of course, if a man has half an acre, he will easily be induced to acquire the right in respect to more land than he can cultivate, simply for the sake of selling it. Thus, the money-lender will be called in, and the effect will be to create a new class of middle-men who are not to have any restrictions placed upon them as to the rents they may claim. The cultivators, therefore, will be rack-rented; and that is evidently the intention of the Bill; for there is nothing put forward to prevent this result. This new class will be instituted at the expense of both parties; at the expense of the zemindar, whose rights are to be curtailed by the Bill, and at the expense of the ryot, who has now, under several existing laws, some protection against an undue enhancement of his rent, and who will have none under this Bill. The object of the Bill seems, therefore, to enrich this middle class; at any rate, whether that is the object or not, that will be its ultimate; and Mr. Ilbert, in section 41 of his "Objects and Reasons," foresees that such a state of things will result from the Bill. If the opinions of those officials who were consulted during the last summer were published in this country, I think it would aid very much the formation of public opinion on the scope and tendency of the measure. They are rather voluminous, and had better be condensed; without such aid, I do not think the general public could form a correct opinion on the subject. With the aid of these reports the public will find that the effect of the Bill which has been proclaimed to them as a measure for improving the condition of the cultivator will, on the contrary, be to reduce the cultivator almost, as Mr. Lethbridge has said, to the condition of a serf—certainly to deprive him of the protection that he now has. I beg to move the resolution which I read to you.

Mr. W. CORNELL (late Bengal Civil Service, and Judge of Midnapore) said:—Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, after the speeches to which you have listened, and at this stage of the proceedings, it would ill become me to go at any length into the details of the Bill. There are, indeed, certain points upon which previous speakers have not dwelt, but I do not wish to trouble you at any length upon them. If it be true, as you have already declared by adopting the first resolution, that the measure is unjust, unnecessary, and injurious, and that it is absolutely pernicious, it seems to me that my duty is a comparatively easy one when I call upon you as a natural sequence of the first resolution to adopt the second, and take practical action to arrest its progress at least in its present form. The appointment of an Executive Committee, is, of course, a mere prelude to further measures, constitutional measures, as stated in this resolution, and the object is the modification or the withdrawal of the Bill. It may be perhaps too much to hope that the Bill will be entirely withdrawn, but if we can get it seriously and extensively modified I think we shall have done our duty. I find myself, when I come here to-day, a mere junior amongst veterans. As to our worthy chairman, I find that when I went to India, he had been already nearly twenty years in the service; and the same, no doubt, with many others who are here. But it has fallen to me to second this resolution, and I can only admit that if those more experienced officials have found the matter difficult and intricate, if it is one in which old residents of long Mofussil experience find a problem, the solution of which is by no means easy, it certainly is one which would require great care in laying before the British public. These ideas are entirely new to the British public; and to enlighten public opinion is a task which will require considerable care. We are very likely to be met on the threshold when we attempt this task by a reference, and a very plausible reference, to the Government of India. We shall be told the authorities of India are responsible; that it is their business to deal with this matter; and we shall be asked why we come before the English public with matters which cannot be understood by them. It will be said, if there is anyone in India who is aggrieved by the Bill, be he ryot or zemindar, or anyone else, let him agitate, and make out his own case before the authorities of India. Although that objection may very possibly be made, still, I think if we come to look at the matter closely, I consider our constitution as a representative committee, really representing all classes in India, and a vast amount of experience—I am not speaking merely of official but of Mofussil experience, and experience in presidency towns—we may hope that our judgment on this Bill will be received with some respect. We are told that the people who are most interested ought to agitate and make a noise; as a matter of fact, the zemindars already have made a noise, and I have no doubt they will continue to agitate, and they are quite right to do so, because it is a question of life or death to them. But when their protest is laid before the British public it will be met with the obvious reply, "This is mere selfishness; you are only wanting to keep your ill-gotten gains." When, however, a committee of the status of the gentlemen I am now addressing expresses its judgment in a formal manner, I think it must be received as an independent opinion—the opinion of gentlemen of position, entirely removed from all class feeling, free of personal ambition, and from anything like prejudice. That being so, I venture to say that any action which you can take in support of the zemindars' case is very important to them, and I think we may take even higher ground as regards the ryots. The ryots, no doubt, if we could but get at them, if we could but ask them their sentiments, would probably say, "The best thing you can do for us is to leave us alone;" but as we could not hope to get quite such a candid opinion as that out of them, the next thing they would say would be, "If there is anyone we can trust, it is those on our own side." I think if you went into the villages and asked the ryots about trusting Sir Henry Ricketts and Mr. Buckland's side, many thousands of them would come forward and say, "We know that side and we can trust them; if they say such and such a measure is good, we will support it." In that way I think we can, perhaps, as a committee, claim to represent the ryots in rather a different point of view from that of anyone out in India. Furthermore, I think there is another point of view with reference to this Bill, which has not, perhaps, been sufficiently brought out, and that is this. The ryots, as I have already said, if they could speak, would ask for rest. They would ask to be left alone to digest and to assimilate, as far as possible, the numerous products of that legislative mill which is perpetually going on grinding; which even grinds its own children, for no sooner does a Bill become an act than there is a Bill to amend it; a few years later and there is a further Bill; then there is a consolidating Bill, or a Bill to declare, or to confirm, or something of that sort. Well, gentlemen, certainly, I think the officials are all tired of this action of the Legislature, and I think it will be of great benefit not only to the State but to the bewildered officials and to the harassed public, if the Legislature could be induced by any chance to give the country just a few years, or even a few months' rest, so that people might see what would be the real effect of the actual working of the laws as far as they have gone. However, that consummation is, perhaps, too much to be expected. It would be a very self-denying ordinance to those most concerned. But if we cannot hope for that, we can at least hope that an important subject like that we are now considering may be approached with due caution, I might almost say, with timidity. If I might be allowed to resort to the language of metaphor I would compare the agricultural interest of Bengal—I might almost say the British rule in India—to one of those large masses of stones we meet with in the Druidical remains, in which you find one large rock is based upon a pivot; it is so skilfully poised by the patience of our forefathers that, although you may shake it with one hand, it has resisted for thousands of years the fortuitous circumstances of wind and other disturbing forces. So would this fabric of the British rule in India, and especially of the agricultural prosperity of India, so long as that rests on the pivot which is sanctioned by antiquity, so long as it rests on the groove which is hollowed out by the oscillations of many years, so long is it in a suitable position. But if rash and irreverent hands make this a plaything of their experiments—if they proceed to alter the pivot and displace the centre of gravity, we shall very soon find that the position is one of instability, and that some fortuitous circumstance, something which in former years would have passed over the country without any serious result, may be famine, may be some commercial crisis or anything else, but such circumstance which we can in no way foresee would bring down this mass on the unfortunate authors of the mischief, and cause widespread disaster. It may be, I do not say it is true, that the course of events in the last twenty-five years have, to some extent, displaced the centre of gravity of the body politic, but if they have done so, if there has been any displacement, the true and the wise policy is to revert to the old lines and the old traditions, and it is because this Bill is in no wise characterised by any such caution or discretion that I think we should oppose it. So far from being Conservative it is decidedly Radical. I do not know about its being Fenian, but it is Radical—it is Radical in its inception, Radical in its development, Radical in what it sets up, and Radical in what it pulls down, Radical when it attacks the rich, and Radical when it interferes with the poor. Generally I think it is not only radically bad, but radically wrong. For that reason I anticipate confidently your concurrence with this resolution.

Col. PRENDERGAST WALSH.—Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, although all of us here are well acquainted with the objections that are raised to the Bengal Tenancy Bill, I think that this is a question which is utterly unknown to the British public. Within the last few days in various clubs with which I am associated, I have spoken of the subject, and every man has said to me, "We know nothing at all about the subject." Well, without now going into the questions which have been discussed, I think it is the duty of every independent member of this committee, and of everyone who has the interests of India at heart to try to educate the people of England upon this great question. I think it will be the duty of all here to go forward and try to explain to your friends at your clubs, in the villages, and in towns, and in any institutions to which you belong, that this is a revolutionary measure closely following on the lines of the Irish legislation which has so disturbed that country. I cannot conceive anything worse for India than that she should now be disturbed for a second time by even the very measures which we may take to prevent this Bill passing into law. There is no doubt that Lord Ripon's Government will force this measure on, and there is not the slightest doubt that this Bill will pass, though you may have some success in taking the thorn out of it—some such success as was lately accorded to that opposition which Mr. Roper Lethbridge took so distinguished a part in, and which has taken the harm out of Mr. Ilbert's Bill, as regards the trial of Europeans by native magistrates. But I think we should do something to show the people the great danger that will arise in India if we attempt to disturb the zemindars of Bengal, who stood true to us in those terrible days when England actually trembled for the sake of her Indian Empire. That empire might have been lost if it had not been for the hands of faithful natives who, scattered at certain intervals over that great continent, assisted the Government in a moment of dire extremity. It would be a poor return for England to stand still and allow these men to be swept away and made mere annuitants upon the land which has been assured to them for so long a period. The British public are already disgusted with what has happened in Ireland. Many good and noble men in both Houses of Parliament voted for the Irish Land Act, merely in order to restore peace; but what has been the result? There is no peace; there has not been even a perfect payment of rent. I myself am an Irish landlord, and I have five years rent unpaid up to the present time. Outrages are still going on there, and they are only this session commencing a new campaign to destroy the rights of property. I think we may say to the British public, "all those concessions that you gave to Ireland, even sacrificing principle in many instances, have only brought back upon you the tide of blood and misery that you tried to stem." I think we may say to the British public, "Stand forward and let India have peace; do not disturb her with these questions that need not be brought forward," and the result will be that the Government will refrain from carrying forward measures which were, perhaps, only invented for the purpose of gaining popularity. I am not well acquainted with Bengal myself, though I have many dear friends holding high positions in Bengal; I am a Bombay officer, but having read the history of India, and having served for thirty years, of course I have feelings of the greatest interest for any measures connected with the country. Therefore, I have ventured to rise now, and ask you all here, when we separate from this room, to go forward, and ask the gentlemen of the Press here—the English Press, which has always assisted any of her Majesty's subjects, and especially Indians—to assist us in this matter, and to make the history of this question known, so that we may have the voice of England to back us up when this question comes to be debated in the Senate.

Colonel GONWIN AUSTEN, in supporting the resolution, said that during the course of many years' survey work in many districts of India, particularly on the borders of Bengal and Assam, he had had facilities for seeing the ryot in his own village, and also of meeting the principal zemindars. A great deal had been said about the condition of the ryot in Bengal, but from his own experience he could say that very few complaints had ever been made to him about the treatment of the zemindars. He first went to India in 1864, after leaving Cashmere; if he had found in India a similar state of things to that existing in Cashmere, he should not now be an opponent of the Tenancy Bill, because the tenants in the latter place had every cause of complaint; but in Bengal the people were certainly very well off, and during the whole course of his service there were very few complaints made to him.

The resolution was put to the meeting and carried unanimously.

The meeting terminated with the customary vote of thanks to the Chairman.

THE MADRAS BENGAL TENANCY BILL MEETING.

ONE of the largest meetings yet held to express dissatisfaction at the proposed legislation on the land question took place on Saturday, Dec. 29, at the Town Hall, Bengal. Over a thousand persons must have been present, including most of the principal native landowners in Bengal, and a small number of Europeans, and those who had been unable to come had sent telegrams, expressing their sympathy with the meeting.

MAHARAJAH NARENDRA KRISHNA proposed that the Maharajah of Durbhungah should take the chair, which was carried with applause.

The Honourable KISTO DAS PAL then said,—I have to inform you that I have received letters and telegrams from many zemindars in the Mofussil. I will not detain you with the perusal of these letters, but I will just mention some of the most important of them.

His Highness the Maharajah of Cooh Behar regrets very much that, for unavoidable reasons, he cannot attend this meeting.

The Maharajah of Burdwan is also prevented from attending this meeting, but his Highness expresses every sympathy with the object of it.

The Maharajah of Hutwa is unfortunately absent at Benares, but is represented by his agent.

The Maharani Shurnomoye regrets that, owing to the custom of the country, she cannot be with us to-day, but she has deputed her agent to represent her at this meeting.

I have received a telegram from the Rajah of Burilal, saying that he is prevented from attending the meeting, but that it has his hearty sympathy.

The Maharani of Putia also expresses her regret at her enforced absence from the meeting.

His Highness the CHAIRMAN, who was greeted with applause, then opened the meeting with the following address:—

His Highness the MAHARAJAH of DURBHUNGAH, who was almost inaudible, except to those next him, said that Sir Richard Temple, with all his experience, had proposed that the Rent Act should be changed, in order that further facilities might be given to the zemindars for the collection and enhancement of their rents. The present Rent Bill, however, instead of giving them these privileges, proposed to do away with their vested rights—rights which were guaranteed to them by the Permanent Settlement. The Permanent Settlement said the zemindars were the proprietors of the soil, but the present official members of the Viceregal Council said they were not proprietors, although Lord Cornwallis had said they were. They tried to make out that the word "proprietor" did not mean proprietorship, but meant merely rent receivers. (Hear, hear.) He did not think that the present Bill, if passed into law, would give them any facilities for collecting their rents. The Bill said that the law, as at present worked, was oppressive to the ryots, but he himself certainly did not think it was so. There was no doubt that in certain cases the law of distraint had been abused; but it was not the zemindars who were to blame, but the Government. They were, no doubt, well aware that a few years ago the zemindaries of Hutwa and Durbhungah were under Government, and though the Government distinctly disallowed the zemindars from adopting the legal system of distraint in these two properties, they themselves had recourse to that system. They did not stop at simply giving notice of distraint, but they sent sowars to take the crops of the ryots, not only for the rents that were due, but for the rents which would be due some months afterwards. No doubt, when the zemindars saw the Government having recourse to this system of distraint, they themselves would follow the example, and now they were blamed by members of Council for having recourse to this legal system. He might add that one of the members of Council himself allowed this system of distraint to go on in Hutwa and Durbhungah. He might now say he was altogether against distraint, but when he was Commissioner of Patna, he advocated the system. (Hear, hear.) The new Act proposed to do away with even the legal system of distraint, and the rent of the zemindars of Bengal would, in that case, certainly be reduced by one-fourth of its present amount. There were districts near the frontier of Nepal where, unless there was a system of distraint, the zemindars could not possibly collect their rents. There were certain classes of ryots who never had a settled habitation, but who went to villages and cultivated land for one season, or one year, and then left it. In these cases, the only way to collect the rent was to distraint the crops as soon as they were ripe. There was no other system that could be possibly introduced. Members of the Viceregal Council thought the zemindars should sue these ryots. Now, it was very easy to sue these ryots and to obtain a decree; but the difficulty began as soon as a decree had been obtained. The men had no property except movable property, and all they had to do was to move to another estate as soon as the zemindar had got a decree. Therefore, it seemed to him that the new Bill, instead of giving facilities for collecting rent, took away those which the zemindars at present possessed. (Applause.) Then the Government said that the ryots had at present to pay far too much to the zemindars, but they forgot the fact that they themselves took an oppressive duty from the ryots, by charging them for registration, and they did not propose to lower this duty. Then, he did not think the survey section was likely to benefit the zemindars, for he did not think the present Government was likely to appoint impartial men to survey the estate. Mr. Finucane, in his report, had said that the ryots of certain villages were rack-rented. He ought to have defined what he meant by rack-rented. He said the zemindars charged the ryots Rs. 5 per bigha. Now, the Rent Bill proposed that the rent should be one-fifth of the produce of the land. He himself did not think Rs. 5 was equal to one-fifth of the average produce of their land. Mr. Finucane had tried to make out that the average produce of the land was worth about Rs. 12 per bigha, but this was only for one crop, and he did not take into account the second crop, or the value of the straw. His own opinion (the Maharajah's) was that the average produce of land was worth, not Rs. 12, but Rs. 40 per bigha, and he did not think that he was one-sided in giving this opinion. They knew that a few years ago a pamphlet was published by Mr. O'Donnell, accusing the landlords of rack-renting. Mr. O'Donnell was an Irishman, and Irishmen were generally against landlords, yet Mr. O'Donnell put the produce of the land down as Rs. 40 per bigha. His report was certainly more reliable than Mr. Finucane's. He had now only to thank them for the honour they had done him in asking him to take the chair. A measure fraught with the most momentous consequences to the landlords was under discussion, and it was urgently necessary that those whose interests would suffer by this sweeping measure should take every constitutional means of making themselves heard in the proper quarter. (Applause.)

FIRST RESOLUTION.

The MAHARAJAH of DUMRAON then moved the first resolution, addressing the meeting in Urdu, and his remarks were subsequently translated into English as follows by the Hon. Hurbans Sahai:—

GENTLEMEN,—I have been asked to move the First Resolution. It is to the effect following—"That this meeting desires to record its opinion that the Government has entirely failed to show that any grounds exist for introducing into the Bengal Tenancy Bill revolutionary provisions which are a novel departure from the ancient custom, and the existing law relating to landlord and tenant, and which will most injuriously affect all classes of the community who are in any way interested in the land."

Gentlemen,—You are all aware of the revolutionary provisions embodied in the Bengal Tenancy Bill. Nothing has been so clearly made out during the discussions that have followed the publication of the Bill of the Rent Commission and the Bengal Tenancy Bill than that these revolutionary provisions are a novel departure from the ancient custom of the land under which the property in the land was vested in you, gentlemen, the zemindars. Under the worst of Moguls your proprietary rights were ever respected. He extorted; he at times took away the management of the zemindaries from your hands; but he never questioned or confiscated your proprietary rights therein. Gentlemen, it is said that you were then mere collectors of Government revenue. The histories of many of the families, whose representatives I see around me, give a flat contradiction to that position. The zemindaries, which have descended to me from a long line of ancestors, existed, as I learn from my family records from a time long anterior to the Mahomedan conquest of the country, and my ancestors possessed greater rights and privileges, than I have now come to enjoy under the Permanent Settlement. That settlement, gentlemen, fully recognised our rights, and these rights have never before this been questioned by Government or by Courts of Law. I have in my hands now a number of authoritative decisions, in which the highest judicial authorities of the land have fully recognised those rights, but though the matter is of vital importance to us all, I must have regard to the time at your disposal.

It is said again that the tenants under you had greater rights than they have come to enjoy under the existing law; and it is the duty of the Legislature, to rehabilitate them in their old rights. Now, sir, the opinions of men who have been advancing this position, have been ere long met by the counter opinions of two of our highest judicial authorities in the land; and even those who advance this position have now to admit that it is not possible to rehabilitate the old khudkast ryots in what they conceived to be their rights. That is, I suppose, a complete settler. Even the Advocates of the Bill cannot deny that the revolutionary provisions embodied in the Bengal Tenancy Bill are against the existing law relating to landlord and tenant, and that it will sweep away all your vested rights as guaranteed to you under the solemn pledge of a Permanent Settlement. All that they say is that under that Settlement, Government did not reserve to itself the power to enact laws for the protection and welfare of your dependant ryots, and the Legislature, under the circumstances that have arisen is now simply exercising the power thus reserved. Now, gentlemen, whether with or without reservation, there can be no denial that in certain contingencies, that is, when cases of great political necessity have arisen, the Government of a country, under certain conditions, would be justified in trenching on vested rights; but that is neither here nor there. The existence of such grave political necessity can never be put forward as a reason for confiscating your rights in the present instance, as no such grave contingencies exist in fact. What, then, does the reservation mean? Under ordinary circumstances, it could not be that Government took away a number of your rights as vested in you under the Permanent Settlement to give to A, B, and C under this reservation, for then the Permanent Settlement would mean nothing. What are the circumstances alleged in the present instance? It is said that you, gentlemen, zemindars in Bengal are weak, and your ryots strong, and we in Behar are strong, and our ryots low and depressed, and a new law is required to provide for this state of things. Now, gentlemen, you may well doubt the efficacy of the same nostrum that is intended to provide for these two opposite extremes. The same law which is intended to make ryots in Behar strong to resist the alleged encroachments of the zemindars can only end by making your ryots stronger. But what is the actual condition of things in that much-vaunted province, Behar? Are our ryots rack-rented, as is alleged, or is their condition low and depressed? Now, gentlemen, you will bear with me in patience when I try to answer this question. I would ask you, as I ask all our maligners, to drop for a moment all preconceived notions— notions which many have come to entertain, without giving us an opportunity of a hearing in our defence, and to examine the actual state of facts. Now, how does the fact stand? We find a great part of Behar comprised in a few Rajas. Two of them had until a recent time been under the charge of a Court of Wards, and not a pice has been added to their rent roll, since my worthy friends, the Maharajahs of Dhurbungah and Hutwa, have come to the direct possession of their estates. The Bettiah Raj has been for some years past under the management of a European gentleman who, for his worth, has been honoured with a seat in the Legislative Council. It is not for me to say how the Doomraon Raj is being managed, but Sir Ashley Eden, speaking at Doomraon in February, 1882, said that he knew of no district in India, in which he would sooner possess a large landed property than that in which he then was. Speaking of Behar in November, 1881 in reply to an address of the Behar Landholders Association, Sir Ashley said:—

"You have quoted from a speech made by me at Sonapore in 1877 certain remarks on the unsatisfactory condition of the ryots in Behar, and the evils of the ticcadari system at that time; and you have also quoted extracts from the Administration Report of this year, showing how very much the condition of the peasantry has improved since then. I can assure you that nothing has given me greater pleasure than to notice, as I have had ample opportunities of doing, the extraordinary improvement in the condition of the people. It has been made manifest in a hundred ways daily, even to the most casual observer. I hear the same story from people of all classes, official and non-official, and it is a matter for general congratulation.

"This improvement is due to various causes. First and foremost, to several succeeding harvests, plentiful almost beyond the recollection of the present generation, and these full harvests followed years of trial and famine. Next, there has, with growing prosperity and an increase in the value of land, been a general awakening of the cultivating classes, and an improved knowledge of their legal rights and privileges; and this has, I hope, been accompanied by a stricter administration of the law. Then, there has been a greater readiness on the part of the landlords to recognise and affirm the rights of the cultivators; and I hope that this may, to some extent, be due to the influence of your Association."

Now, sir, that is Sir Ashley's opinion in 1881, under which you find that our Province has been making rapid strides under the present condition of things. This opinion, I cannot doubt, was available to the Government of India, when it indicted its despatch to the Secretary of State for India on the Rent Bill, in March, 1882, and to the members of the Legislative Council, when they made furious denunciations of our zemindari systems from their seats in Council of March, 1883. But no, it did not suit their purposes, and Sir Ashley's opinion did not find a place in Council speeches.

Gentlemen, you have heard of a drowning man catching at a straw; but can you explain why our mighty legislators, in defence of the position they took up in Council, had, in support of themselves, to catch at such straws as the opinions of the Government Pleader of Gya, et hoc genus omne? They had nothing better to go by. We told them so late as 1879 that it is a mistake to suppose that the agricultural classes in Behar are worse off than their brethren elsewhere, and there is nothing in the land system of Behar, which was any way accountable for the low and depressed condition of the great mass of landless classes there. That the low and depressed condition of the great landless class is owing to over-population and other causes. Why was not an inquiry instituted before we were so ruthlessly denounced in Council? The Government despatch relies on certain figures gleaned from the road cess returns by the Hon. Mr. Reynolds. These figures take for granted that all the lands in a district are equally cultivated. This is apparently a mistake; but whatever the value of these figures, they do not show that higher rents prevail in the districts of Behar than elsewhere in Bengal. The despatch quotes the opinion of Messrs. Metcalfe, Geddes, and M'Donnel; but it forgets that these opinions which, as far as I know, never before were deemed worthy of facing the light, were followed by the Behar Rent Commission; and the recommendations of that body, composed of officials and non-officials, experienced in the affairs of Behar, never recommended all those violent and radical changes which have now been embodied in the Bengal Tenancy Bill. Gentlemen, since then two officials, Messrs. Tobin and Finucane, have been appointed to determine what was called equitable rent rates in the districts of Behar. Mr. Tobin was deputed to Shahabad, and examined certain selected tracts comprised in the Doomraon Raj. Mr. Finucane was deputed to a selected tract in the North Gangetic districts. Now, gentlemen, what was the result of this inquiry? Mr. Tobin found that the rent rates had not changed for the last forty years, that it was exceptionally low, and by the kind consideration of the zemindars the same rent rates were actually paid by non-occupancy ryots, as the gazuara ryots with fixed rent rates. Now, is that rack-renting? Does it show that the condition of the ryots were low and depressed? Gentlemen, when this result of Mr. Tobin's inquiries was made known to the superior authorities, straightway further inquiries in the South Gangetic district were dropped, as its result went a great way to militate against certain pronounced notions in certain quarters. Mr. Finucane's reports have been published, and have been extensively quoted in Council and outside Council. The rent-rates, which Mr. Finucane has found on inquiry as prevalent in the district of Mozufferpore are not, however, at all higher than the rent rates found prevalent in the tracts examined by a Deputy Collector in Bengal, if only allowance be made for the largeness of a Behar bigha and for the greater productiveness of the soil in the tract under Mr. Finucane's examination. These, gentlemen, are the sum and substance of all the evidence on which a whole class of zemindars in a province has been condemned, the Rajahs whose case I brought to your notice at the beginning not excluded. A great part of the area of the Province is under the occupation of Indigo Planters, and under the management of the Government as Khas Mehals or escheated estates. Well, if you were to compare the position and condition of our ryots with the position and condition of ryots in the Khas Mehals and escheated estates, you would easily find that the position and condition of our ryots is far better. Who are the ryots in Behar? They primarily come from the same classes as the zemindars, the Brahmins, Rajputs, Pathans, Kayasths, Gowals, Kurmis have all their ryots and zemindars; and Mahomedans of all degrees of respectability are also represented in both classes. Many of the ryots of a zemindar are his kith and kin, and woe to the zemindars who disregard the voice of the community, or try to play the role of a rapacious or tyrannical zemindar. All these are facts which a little inquiry would have brought out; but our accusers had no patience to institute this inquiry, and they have condemned us unheard, and now propose to confiscate all our rights by a revolutionary measure. That revolutionary measure has no justification in the actual condition of facts, and I ask you to record your emphatic opinion by a solemn resolution of this meeting—that the Government has entirely failed to show that any grounds exist for introducing into the Bengal Tenancy Bill revolutionary provisions, the effect of which will be to injuriously affect all classes of the community who are in any way interested in land. Gentrymen, the Bill bodes no good either to the zemindars or to the ryots. If you have read the despatch carefully, you will find that a great part of that despatch is taken up with recounting the high-handed doings of the Indigo Planters in the North Gangetic district of Behar. What truth there may be in these charges, I do not pretend to decide; but, granting that things of this kind exist, are not the provisions of the Tenancy Bill calculated to intensify the evils tenfold? I tell you, by giving transferable rights of occupancy to the ryots, they are only making it easier for the indigo planter to step in; by giving him the power to sublet they can only effect the same end. If the Bill benefits anybody, it can only benefit the capitalist mahajans who will step into a pukka zemindari, otherwise called a ryoti-holding, with no protection whatever to tenants under them. That is the effect of the Bill, as I clearly see; but I forgot that I have been long, and have to some extent trespassed on the substance of the resolutions that are to follow:

Gentlemen, a common danger has brought us together. From the most distant parts of the country, on this common platform, we have come to respectfully and loyally submit this our last appeal to Government in the metropolis of India. We have come to ask Government to have regard for its plighted faith, to protect the vested rights of an important portion of its subjects, to show that the revolutionary changes which it proposes by the Bengal Tenancy Bill have neither been asked for by the ryots, nor are calculated to do them good. The alarm and consternation that have come on the zemindars even in the distant Mofussil are beyond description. That alarm and consternation our mighty Government may well afford to disregard; but it should not forget that the foundation of British rule in India is laid on justice,—justice to all alike; and all cases of injustice, of faith broken, directly or indirectly, tend to sap at that foundation. It is the duty of all loyal subjects to speak out on occasions like this; and I would deem myself not worthy of that character for loyalty which has always distinguished the family to which I have the honour to belong, if I had not spoken out as I have done. I now move for your acceptance the first resolution.

Mr. J. J. J. KESWICK said—Maharajahs, Rajahs, and Gentlemen, in seconding the Resolution which has just been proposed, it is unnecessary for me to trouble you with a speech. I spoke on this subject on a former occasion, and my views against the Bill are well known, and I do not, therefore, think it necessary to take up your time. I would much rather listen to those gentlemen who have not before spoken, and whom we expect to hear presently. In conclusion, I would only say that I am glad to see this great meeting of influential zemindars, for it shows that there is a real earnestness in your protest against this uncalled-for and unnecessary measure. (Applause).

BABOO DWARKANATH CHUCKERBUTTY said:—

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,—I rise, sir, to support the Resolution which has been so ably moved and seconded. I do so with great diffidence, as I am not accustomed to address such large and distinguished assemblages. I wish, sir, I could even faintly express to you all but one hundredth part of the deep consternation, the earnest anxiety, and the widespread dissatisfaction, which this unfortunate Land Bill has created throughout the length and breadth of this vast province. You have only to look around you to be convinced of this, that vast sea of interminable faces which fills the hall from one end to the other, that is living logic more convincing by far than any amount of rhetoric or volumes of persuasive argument. You have before you gathered together in this hall men from all parts of the country, from the most northerly districts of Bengal and Behar, from the banks of the Brahmaputra, from the sea shores of Chittagong, and the Highlands of Bankoora and Beerbhoom. You have men of all creeds, of all races, and of all denominations. You have representatives of ancient houses which, within historical memory, wielded princely authority within their domains, and which, if a constitution were accorded to this country by our Gracious Sovereign, would furnish the hereditary peers of the realm, the natural and the national leaders of the people, those who, in the hour of trial during the darkest day of the Sepoy Mutiny, in seasons of famine and distress, have stood by Government, and are ready to do so over and over again. You have here, too, independent European gentlemen connected with land, men who are trained in all that marks true advance in political life and intellectual culture.

There can be no doubt, therefore, of the eminently representative character of the meeting, and if it was ever the object of the present Government of India to convulse the whole community of landholders, I must congratulate them on the conspicuous success they have attained. Sir, the Government of the late Viceroy was bitterly taunted for their aggressive policy. We were told of the immeasurable wickedness and surprising folly of the wars they carried on, the perpetual unrest into which they plunged the empire; but it seems to me the Government of the present Viceroy is actuated by a spirit of keen competition in this path of glory, only the scene is changed of its operation. During the time of the late Viceroy we had a war of nations abroad, during the present regime, we have a war of races at home. The Government of Lord Lytton fought with gunpowder and cannon, the Government of Lord Ripon delights to throw legislative explosives in our midst. There is no doubt of this gentlemen, that if this Bill ever becomes law it will cause a fearful upheaval of society.

What, then, are the grounds upon which Government seeks to justify their course of action? Why their train of reasoning seems to be something like this. The agricultural classes of the country are steeped in the direst misery, and the most abject pauperism. In seasons of scarcity and famine, they are unable to bear the strain put upon them, and the landlords of the country are responsible for the state of things; therefore, those laws must be changed, and changed radically and wholesale; therefore, there must be a redistribution of property between landlord and tenant, that is the logic which underlies the policy of this Bill. Do you accept it? Do you endorse its correctness? For my part, gentlemen, I venture emphatically to deny each of the above premises. I deny that the agricultural classes, generally speaking, are more miserable in their social condition than the majority of the forty-five millions of salaried and non-productive classes of the community. But it is not I who deny it for the first time; the Government records during the last semi-decade, the reports of the Commissioners of the several divisions have told the same tale, they all speak of the progressive prosperity, and the substantial comfort of the peasantry in all parts of Bengal, and this official testimony is every year sealed with the sanction, and the high authority of the head of the Local Government. I shall not tire out your patience by reading extracts from these reports; they are collected and printed in the appendix to the second petition of the British Indian Association addressed to the Government of India on the Tenancy Bill. It is admitted on all hands that the prosperity of the tenantry of the Eastern Bengal is established on the finest basis; as regard Central and Western Bengal, we have testimony to the same effect, though the standard attained is not so high as in Bakergunge, Noakhali, and Chittagong. In the Bhaugulpore Division we have the same opinion deliberately formulated, and even in the division of Patna, the history of recent years shows a fair promise of steady improvement. The only classes which are sinking day by day lower and lower in the scale are the salaried servants of the inferior grade, and the non-productive middle classes, as I said according to the last census, which, altogether, aggregate about forty-five millions out of a total population of sixty-nine, or nearly 75 per cent. The Government, therefore, stands convicted out of its own mouth in this part of the discussion; but supposing even that matters were otherwise, that the agricultural classes were plunged into the horrors of a miserable existence; what connection can there be? What connection has there been proved to be between this phenomenon and the land laws of the country? Undoubtedly there are the land laws and the tenants, miserable or prosperous, and because they coexist, is one the cause of the other? Why, then, official logic is all right, and we are all wrong? If that is the political diagnosis of the eminent statesmen who add lustre to the Viceroyal Council, it is certainly not of a character which we poor mortals believe can fully follow. You won't analyse critically any group of social facts. You won't eliminate irrelevant factors, but will jump at a conclusion. Why, sir, this inductive process will beat all political quackery. It is empiricism of a peculiar order. Once upon a time, so runs the fable, a celebrated native physician, accompanied by his apprentice, went to see his patient, and as he observed chips of lemon on the floor of the room where the patient lay, he solemnly shook his head as he felt his pulse. My dear sir, quoth he, you must have been surely taking lemon juice. Struck with his extraordinary skill, the patient and his friends began forthwith to adore the medico as a veritable god of medicine. Glowing with emulation, the disciple went to see the patient alone the next day, and saw overhung a pair of deer-skins in his room. Patient, said he, thou must have eaten of deer-skin. Thereupon, says the story, the men of the house soundly belaboured him with their sticks, and bade him depart. The logic of the advocates of the Bill seems to be of the medical apprentice's type. Seriously speaking, nothing could be a more egregious mistake than to suppose that the law of landlord and tenant exercised any appreciable influence upon the condition of the tenant. If that were so, how do the advocates of the Bill explain that with the same system of land laws in practice in Eastern Bengal and Northern Behar there is sustained prosperity in one tract of country, while the condition of the peasantry in the other is depressed. Evidently we must seek for an explanation elsewhere than in the laws themselves. Again, take the divisions of Bhaugulpore and Patna; the condition of the cultivators is officially described as good in the former, but it is said to be not so good in the latter. Now, the tenants in both the divisions are ethnologically the same, controlled by the same social conditions, governed by the same habits, modes of thought, with soil of the same quality, and precisely the same mode of farming, the same system of land law, and what is most important to note, subject to the same laws. Why, I ask, if these laws had anything to do with the social condition of the people, is there such a difference in their condition? These questions are of the utmost importance, and the Government is bound to initiate and elaborate an exhaustive inquiry into them before it can introduce drastic legislation like that embodied in the present Bill; but they don't seem to appreciate the importance of this inquiry in any way. The Press and the public associations have repeatedly interrogated the powers that be upon this point, but the oracles deign no answer. In the last letter of His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal to the Government of India, we read that still less does he think it necessary to follow those extreme partisans of the zemindary party, who question the propriety of the measure as a whole; and if there be really, any persons, His Honour adds, who, in the face of overwhelming accumulation of evidence, afforded by "the discussion of the last ten years, still question the necessity of the legislation on the broad lines of the Bill, then it is quite hopeless to expect that anything His Honour could say would convince them." That is the way, gentlemen, which the Government of Bengal disposes of the preliminary issue involved in legislation on the present Bill as necessary. His Honour seems to imply that it is the extreme partisans of the zemindary party who question this necessity; but amongst his own trusted subordinates, his responsible advisers, his own Commissioners, and his District Magistrates, there are many who emphatically denounce the present Bill as wholly uncalled for in the interests of public peace. I shall merely mention the names of Messrs. Beane and Westmacott.

Well, gentlemen, I have trespassed too long upon your patience, and the clock warns me to be brief; but there are a few observations which I cannot help making before I resume my seat. What are the classes which contribute most powerfully to the recipients of relief during the times of famine? It is the landless day labourers and the artisans. There might be distress amongst the small cultivators; but that is so, not because there is anything defective in the land law, but because the population in these parts of the country presses most unduly upon land, because fertile cultivation is carried beyond all bounds of prudence, beyond all legitimate support, because you have to deal with an infi-nately expansive population on a constant, fixed, unchangeable area of food procured, the density being 824 in Mozufferpore, 843 in Tirhoot, and 763 in Durbhungah. The real remedy for industrial development is to open to the people new careers of industry by technicalising our national education, relieve one strain upon the soil by placing at the disposal of the population other sources of employment, and then only, and not till then, will you be able to make the people able to support themselves during seasons of distress. But rulers turn a deaf ear to all suggestions for industrial development. Mr. Caird, in his letter to the Secretary of State, thus wrote on the 31st October, 1879: "I will venture to suggest a practicable improvement, the result of which will show the magnitude of the issues which depend on the right management of the industry of a country with such large resources; and the climate of India admits of the growth of many articles of commerce beyond corn and rice. One of the most important points for Indian Statesmen is to discover other industries than that of the production of food in order to give profitable employment to the varied capacities of the people; a large addition to the production and manufacture of tobacco, sugar, cotton, wool, silk, jute, would have this effect. It could be obtained without curtailing the supply of food by such a moderate increase of enterprise, skill, and labour as would add one-tenth to the yield of the food crops; this would enable one-tenth of the cultivated land to be employed in the production of crops for manufacture and export, thus setting free twenty million acres, which would add two hundred million sterling to the general wealth, at the rate of £10 per acre, when converted into a moderate value manufactured product by the well-employed industry of the people."

On this important recommendation the Government of Lord Lytton, of which His Honour the present Lieutenant Governor was an eminent member, made the following observations:—

"The opening of new industries, such as the production of tea, coal raising, jute weaving and spinning, cotton spinning and weaving, railway workshops, and rice cleaning has, no doubt, contributed to raise wages, and to improve the condition of the labouring classes at many centres of population in the tea districts and in the mining districts. On occasions we have spent public money in pioneering the way of such industries. But the effect of such undertakings is limited, and does not radiate into the rural tracts; the Government of India have already so many claims upon them, that we do not see our way to greatly extend those of other manufacturing industries by the help of public funds. We have placed machinery on the free list of our customs tariff. We give every facility for the acquisition of lands for mining, or tea-growing, or coffee-planting. We make roads, and railways, and canals to suit these industries, and to bring raw materials to factories as rapidly as the measure of the country permit. We propose to foster such industries by imposing protective duties on European manufactures, though we are aware that there are persons who advocate a short-sighted policy of this kind, and we can hardly hope that India would become a great manufacturing country until, at any rate, her people have made the fullest use of her bountiful soil and her climate ordinarily so propitious to agriculture."

There it is, gentlemen, the Government of India does not see its way to opening new paths of industrial career to the people. And the whole burden of the population is concentrated with the might of an avalanche upon land, and land alone, that is the applied political economy of the Indian Government, and very likely there is a consensus of opinion on this subject between all Governments of India, between liberals and conservatives, radicals and non-radicals. We are to remain tillers of the soil, nothing more than this the land of the country must be our only source of sustenance, and the miserable pittance that we all derive from land and from agriculture must be shuttle-cocked by a wise and benevolent Government between the different sections of the agricultural community—landowners and cultivators, backwards and forwards, and backward again. Gentlemen, you have enormous difficulties to encounter in the prosecution of our object. You may meet with defeat and disappointment in your effort to convince them of their error; if we are to be slaughtered at the altar of second hand communism, let us die like men, and not like dumb driven cattle, fighting with all the weapons that constitutional opposition can place in our hands. Let us fall united, banded together, and earnestly, strongly, and persistently and respectfully protesting against the justice and the equity of the course pursued for our destruction.

Baboo NUNDO LAL addressed the meeting in Hindustani.

The Resolution was then put to the meeting by the Chairman, and carried unanimously.

SECOND RESOLUTION.

The MAHARAJAH OF DINAGPORE said,—"I rise to move the second Resolution, which is as follows:—"That this meeting is of opinion that the Bill, if passed into law, will be detrimental to the peace and tranquillity of the country, by fostering disputes and litigation between all classes of the agricultural population, and thereby interfere with the general welfare of the community." It is with a feeling of diffidence that I address you, and I would not have ventured to open my mouth at this meeting, but for the sense of wrong which is sufficient to make the dumb eloquent. The miseries of litigation do not require the tongue of a Demosthenes to tell them. Every section of the Bill will be a matter for litigation, and many persons will be ruined by it, and both parties will suffer from it. I most utterly condemn the Bill, and I hope you will join with me in the condemnation for your own sakes, as well as for the sake of those who cannot speak for themselves, but who will suffer by this quarrel. (Applause.)

Mr. BELL, in seconding the Resolution, said,—"Maharajahs, Rajahs, and Gentlemen,—I have been asked to second this Resolution; but before I proceed to speak to the Resolution, I must congratulate the zemindars of Bengal and Behar on the large meeting that we have here to-day. You must remember that it is a matter of the utmost difficulty to collect together a number of landlords of this country; and many gentlemen who have attended here to-day have attended at great inconvenience to themselves. But they have come forward, because they feel that their rights and their privileges are in danger; and that unless they make a vigorous protest, they are in danger of losing those privileges which were conferred to them by Lord Cornwallis. And not only were those privileges conferred to them by Lord Cornwallis, but they were guaranteed to them by Her Majesty's most gracious proclamation. I have this moment had placed before me an extract from that proclamation, and I will read it to you: "We know and respect"—says Her Gracious Majesty—"the feelings of attachment with which the natives of India regard the land inherited by them from their ancestors, and we desire to protect them in all rights connected therewith, subject to the equitable demands of the State." (Hear, hear.) I believe that you are all animated with one desire, that the terms of that proclamation shall be kept inviolate by the Government of Lord Ripon. (Hear, hear.) I was much struck with what my friend behind me said when he contrasted the aggressive policy of Lord Ripon with the aggressive policy of Lord Lytton; but my friend omitted to state that Lord Lytton's arms were directed against the enemies of his country, whilst Lord Ripon is attacking those who have always been the support of the British Government. (Applause.) That is the remarkable difference between the policy of the two Viceroy. Gentlemen, I have been asked to speak to this Resolution, which condemns this Bill on the grounds that, instead of giving peace and security to rights, it will produce nothing but dissension and discord throughout the country. The principles upon which this legislation proceeds is, that the Government are more solicitous for the welfare of the ryots than you are yourselves. Now, I always deprecate the interference of Government in private matters. I deprecate it in all countries; because I believe that people know their own business better than Government knows it for them. (Hear, hear.) I deprecate it deeply in this country, because we know that any Government interference between landlord and tenant must be exercised by subordinate agency; and we also know that all subordinate agency in this country is corrupt. (Hear, hear.) We know that if one of the provisions of this Bill is carried out, and you, the zemindars, are, as the Bill proposes, placed under the supervision of a Revenue officer, this means extortion. (Hear, hear.) It is proposed in the Bill that no agreement between the landlord and his tenant shall be valid, unless it receives the sanction of a Revenue Officer. Now, gentlemen, it seems to me that a landlord and his tenant can agree about the rates of rent, considering that they know the land and the produce that it grows—far better than any Revenue Officer can do. It seems to me simply preposterous to press a proposition that no engagement shall be made between landlord and tenant except with the sanction of a Government Officer. (Applause.) The time, gentlemen, at our disposal is so short, and I know there are some twelve gentlemen who are anxious to follow me, and I feel that I should not be justified if I were to go through several other points in the Bill to which I could otherwise have liked to direct your attention. But there was a remark which felt from my friend, the Maharajah, which struck me; it was with reference to another most disastrous clause in the Bill with reference to the registration of rights. Now, this scheme has the sanction and the approval of the Lieutenant Governor—and I desire here in this large assembly to say that though I am opposed to the Lieutenant Governor on the Rent Bill, he is a gentleman for whom I entertain a most profound respect, and whose opinions even on this measure I would not oppose, were I not supported by the almost unanimous opinion of the officials and non-officials throughout the country. (Hear, hear.) When, therefore, I find that a man of the distinguished abilities of Mr. Rivers Thompson stands almost entirely alone in his opinion, I do not hesitate under those circumstances to give expression to my own. Now, if any attempt of this sort was carried out to obtain a record of all the rights of property in the country, you who have practical experience of the management of zemindary affairs know exactly what it means—you know that you would all be flooded with litigation, and that it would result in ruin to the ryot and zemindar alike. (Applause.) Now, gentlemen, I will only say one or two words in conclusion. I don't wish to go through the other points of the Bill, because the time is passing so rapidly; but I think that I ought to say one or two words to you concerning those who are responsible for the present measure. We have seen it stated in the papers, that Lord Ripon is not responsible for this measure. Undoubtedly, this measure was not framed by Lord Ripon; but Lord Ripon is undoubtedly responsible in this way, that he is the head of the Government that has put forward this measure. Gentlemen, I for one have no personal feelings whatever against Lord Ripon. I believe that he is sincerely anxious to do justice; but he is surrounded by advisers who have pledged themselves to the Bill, and whose vanity has been wounded by the opposition it has evoked. (Loud applause.) Gentlemen, I need not refer you to the history of the measure—to the manner in which this measure saw the light; but if you seek for the justification of what I say, that is the wounded vanity of some officials that is forcing the Government to pass this measure, I have only to refer you to certain remarks of Mr. McKenzie which are attached to the Land's Commission Report. Read the contumely which he heaps upon the zemindar members of the Commission; see the terms in which he speaks of such distinguished Judges as Sir Barnes Peacock, and the present Chief Justice of Bengal; witness the way in which he speaks of the members of his own service, as Mr. Dampier, the Senior Member of the Board, Mr. Munro, and Lord Ulick Brown, who brings to the discussion of this question both Indian and Irish experience; and all the other Revenue Commissioners of Bengal to a man opposed to the Bill. What I complain of, and what I deeply deplore, is the injudicious indifference with which this unanimous consensus of opinion has been received. But, at the same time, though the odds are against us, I do not despair, for I feel we are fighting a righteous cause. (Loud applause.) I feel that it is impossible for Lord Ripon, if he regards his reputation as a statesman, to turn a deaf ear to the almost unanimous voice—both official and non-official—of India. I myself have confidence that that settlement to which my friend, the Maharajah, alludes—of Lord Cornwallis, will not be permitted to be torn to shreds; and I am sure that you will all agree with me that the name of Cornwallis ought never to be mentioned without exciting in your breasts the profoundest feelings of gratitude. (Applause.) I read the other day the epitaph on his monument, and I think that the words upon it correctly describe our feelings—that “after the monument is crumbled into dust, millions will still attest the wisdom of his conduct, and the virtue of his life.” (Applause.) Gentlemen, I hope that Lord Ripon will condescend to emulate the example of his illustrious predecessor. (Applause.) I am sure that if he does, if he examines this question with care, the caution, the deliberation of Lord Cornwallis, he will arrive at a conclusion which will be satisfactory to you; he will withdraw this Bill, which is fraught with such danger to the peace and prosperity of the country. (Loud applause.)

BABOO TARA PROSONO MOOREJEE said,—The Bill to consolidate the law of landlord and tenant, which is at present before the Legislative Council of India, is undoubtedly a revolutionary measure, and as all revolutionary measures conflict with vested rights, they become a fruitful source of litigation. If I were to regard my private interests, or those of my profession, I would rejoice at the passing of this Bill, for if there is increase of litigation, it is sure to bring some money into my pocket; but, in view of the injuries which it will inflict on the middle classes of our country, and the rich and propertied classes, as well as the ryots, who will be tempted to enter into litigation, I deprecate the measure from the bottom of my heart. It aims at a redistribution of landed property. Its object is not the maintenance of existing rights by removing doubts, which might otherwise attach to them, clearly defining them by the erection of sign-posts and boundary pillars, so as to prevent confusion and encroachment on them, but the extinction of existing rights in favour of one section of the community, and creation of new ones in favour of another section. But it seems, gentlemen, the action of Government in taking away rights from the landlord and in conferring them on ryots, is equally unreasonable and misguided. It perpetrates an act of confiscation with the right hand in order to confirm a boon to the left. The conduct of Government is indefensible and unprecedented. The action of Government can be aptly compared to the mild course of a tropical torrent, which on one bank carries off extensive rice-fields, splendid mansions, and beautiful gardens, and deposits rich enlivening soil on another. The framers of the Bill were perfectly aware they were taking an unprecedented course, and it is for this reason they have tried in a most elaborate manner to justify their conduct. But, gentlemen, the arguments adduced in support of it are most flimsy and unconvincing. The Legislature seem to justify their conduct on two grounds—first, on an interpretation of the Permanent Settlement; and secondly, on economic and social considerations. It would, perhaps, have been wiser and more discreet if the Legislature had rested their case on the second ground instead of on the first. I do not mean to say that they could have thereby justified their proceedings; but at least they would have saved them from the entanglements of error and sophistry, from the absurdities of reasoning and fallacies. But if it were conceded that the zemindars had rights which were sought to be encroached upon by this law, the necessary logical consequence would have been, that they would be entitled to ample and full compensation for the injuries which were inflicted upon them. In order to avoid this dangerous alternative, the Legislature thought proper to rest their case on the first ground. We are accustomed to consider the Permanent Settlement as the bulwark of the zemindar's rights. All persons who have given their thought and attention to it have come to the conclusion that it confers great and valuable rights on the landlord. But we are now told that all this is a delusion and error. It is a vision and chimera, and the whole public were labouring under a delusion which the learned Law Member has dispelled. We have now to learn that the Permanent Settlement is good for nothing. The Law Member says that it affords a phantom-barrier which dissolves at the approach of his intelligence. It has been said Lord Cornwallis did not understand the meanings of terms; he did not know the meaning of the word property and the word proprietor; when he said the landlords were actual proprietors of the soil, which occurs in Regulation I. of 1790, and also Regulation VIII. of 1793. It is said the researches of modern philosophers have made us acquainted with the mode of the origin of property, and the historic development of the notions of property inland which were not known to Lord Cornwallis. The law member spoke of him in terms which were not at all respectful to his memory. It was suggested Lord Cornwallis was the manufacturer of riddles and puzzles, which were left to be solved by his successors. But the fact is, the Permanent Settlement was the wisest and most proper measure for the time and the circumstances in which it was made, and those that try to upset it have not got the patience, or the desire, or perhaps the ability, to understand it. To say that an Englishman, who was possessed of landed property himself, who had studied the constitutions of our country for a long time, who was assisted by able coadjutors—men like Sir John Shore, who had made the subject his life-long study—did not understand the meaning of the word property and proprietor, is to say something that is absolutely ludicrous. Looking to the state of things which prevailed at the time, the fact that the zemindars had been recognised as proprietors for centuries backwards, the power and prestige which they held, and the authority which they exercised, the Permanent Settlement, which recognised their title as proprietors, was a profound and proper piece of legislation. It has been consecrated by nearly the lapse of a century. Able Administrators and Judges like Lord Lyndhurst and Sir Barnes Peacock have held that the Permanent Settlement did recognise the title of the zemindars as proprietors, and on March 2, 1883, we were told all these men were wrong.

I will draw your attention to one point which has been ably discussed by the preceding speaker, Mr. Bell. This Bill intends to take away the power of entering into voluntary contracts between landlord and tenant. And why so? The ryot is not such a stupid, ignorant man, so docile and obedient, as to be cajoled or threatened into a surrender of his rights. The records of Law Courts show that he can fight well, and gain the victory over the landlord. When the zemindar sues the ryot for rent, in most cases the latter pleads no relationship of landlord and tenant existing between him and plaintiff, and the invariable result in most such cases is the zemindar is defeated. And why so? Because the Courts would not believe the account papers kept by the zemindars, though attested by a large number of witnesses. But if the truth be inquired into, it will be found, in the majority of such cases, the ryot wins unjustly on a false plea, and the zemindar loses a true case. The ryot is undoubtedly capable of standing his own and defending his rights. The ryot of to-day is not the same person as he was twenty years ago. He is quite competent to enter into contracts about the occupation of the land and the rent he has got to pay. Why keep millions of men in a condition of eternal tutelage? When two persons, after deliberation, enter into a contract, the presumption is, they had grounds for entering into it. You say you won't allow it to stand, unless it is sanctioned by a Revenue Officer. You take away the discretion of the men, who know their affairs best. You take away what is reasonable, proper, and just, and substitute what cannot but be unreasonable, improper, and unjust. The Revenue Officer, however deep might be his penetration and intelligence, can never realise the grounds on which the parties have themselves entered into the contract. The Legislature seems to think a lawsuit is a very trifling matter; it is like the buying of apparel at Burra Bazaar, and wearing it. They do not consider what it involves. A sanction of a Revenue Officer—what does it mean? It means a lawsuit, and a lawsuit means—1st, an outlay of money; 2nd, waste of time and energy; and 3rd, perhaps subornation of perjury. Why involve the parties in such difficulties? The remedy is worse than the disease. It is far better the ryots should pay a little in the shape of increased rent than be involved in a lawsuit which will ultimately ruin him; and the landlord, too, if he has got too many such suits, will be ruined. The consequences of litigation are disastrous, as is too well known, and the tendency of the Bill is to draw men into litigation almost for everything. I think, therefore, this resolution is a good one, and this meeting will agree to it.

BABOO SURENDRONATH PAL CHOWDHRY said,—Gentlemen, the Rent Bill has caused a great sensation throughout the country. The Bill is now entirely fruitless, but it must be admitted that in the Rent Bill there are many clauses which are beneficial both to the ryot and the zemindar. The Government has, by introducing the Bengal Tenancy Bill, proposed to devise measures for improving the status of the zemindar, and ameliorating the condition of the ryots—the laudable object of Government being to place landed interests in general on a satisfactory footing, and to benefit all classes therein concerned. But if any law passed by Government were to deprive any class of the people of its vested rights, then it would be perfectly justifiable for that class to oppose the enactment of the law. But I would propose to have a compromise. The time has come when all persons interested in the soil should consider their mutual interest, and cease to quarrel among themselves. Zemindars are long reputed, justly or unjustly, as unpatriotic, and as the persecutors of the ryots. We should not, therefore, hesitate to sacrifice some of our privileges for the good of the great mass of the ryots. Let us, however, fight for a change in the law which might facilitate the speedy and easy realisation of rent from defaulting cultivators, and suggest a system of enhancement, under which we may have more than we are now able practically to enjoy under the existing law. If the Government be induced to make the concession on behalf of the zemindar—1. No right-thinking landlord should grudge to make as much concession for the benefit of the ryots. 2. If the partisans of the ryot urge for the bestowal to Bengal ryots of the three gifts, and if the occupancy right be extended, it would, no doubt, curtail the right of landlord, and confer additional rights and privileges on the ryots. Under the circumstances, would it be unfair, on the part of the zemindars, to ask for a summary proceeding for the realisation of rents and cesses? Would it be too much for us to ask for measures calculated to do away with the difficulties of enhancement suits? His Honour the Lieutenant Governor has, in his reply to an address from the Lower Division, said that no Tenancy Bill can be satisfactory which fails to meet the difficulties affecting the regular realisation of rents. But the Bill, as it now stands, would defeat the object it has in view. The best course for the partisans of both parties, I mean the zemindars and ryots, would be to have a compromise, and to make an amicable settlement of the knotty questions raised in the Bill. This step would help the present noble-minded Viceroy to deal with the Bill to the satisfaction of all parties.

THIRD RESOLUTION.

RAJAH HERBULLUB NARAIN SING said :—

Maharajahs, Rajahs, and gentlemen,—Before moving the third Resolution, I beg to say a few words regarding the Tenancy Bill. I hope that Government will consider what has already been said regarding it. If this Bill is made the law of the land, thousands of zemindars will be ruined. In fact, the hostility between the zemindars and ryots would be so great, that the former would find great difficulty in effecting the settlement of their lands. Besides, the necessary and legitimate authority, which the zemindar ought to have in the Mofussil, will be nil; and consequently, it will be difficult to carry out the orders of Government, which will be issued to them on public and other occasions. Those zemindars who have been holding their lands continuously for more than 100 years will find themselves in a state of despair. For these reasons the value of the land is now declining at a greater ratio than usual. And, even if the sale of land is to be effected, it will be difficult to find purchasers. A friend of mine, whose name I need not mention, and whose zemindari lies in Zillahs Purneah, Dinagepore, and Bhaugulpore, wants to part with some of his estates, but he has failed to meet with purchasers on a fifteen years' purchase value, though there exists no dispute, or anything bad in the title to the estates. Besides, many similar instances are known to many of you, and I have myself brought it forward in my note. I gladly move the third Resolution—“That if the deprivation of the landlords of their just rights, inherited from generation to generation, confirmed by the Permanent Settlement, and consecrated by a century of British rule be deemed essential to the welfare of the tenantry, the Government be solicited to consider the justice of allowing the zemindars to surrender their estates on receiving such compensation in money as will, when invested in Government securities, produce a permanent return equal to their present income."

Mr. GREGOR GRANT said,—I have much pleasure in seconding this Resolution, as the request is a just and reasonable one, and the Government are, in my opinion, bound to compensate the zemindars fully for anything which they may deprive them of. And, considering that much friction would be caused between the landlords and their tenants by the passing of this Bill, it is much to be desired that Government should accept the terms of this Resolution, and take over the estates from the zemindars on the terms therein proposed, and manage them in such way as they may think proper. I have been a resident in the Bhagulpore District for over forty-two years, and have had a great deal in that time to do with zemindaries and zemindari work, and am, therefore, in a position to offer an opinion as to the mischievous tendency of constantly inter-meddling on the part of Government between landlord and tenant. What the Government profess to do in the interests of the tenant, somehow or other always turns out to his disadvantage. I have had, and my son now has, zemindaries in the Sonthal Pergunnahs, as well as in other parts of the district of Bhagulpore. About eight or nine years ago Sir George Campbell, "for the peace and good government of the Sonthal Pergunnahs," deprived the zemindars of the power to settle their own lands with the ryots, and appointed Government officials to grant leases to them instead. The effect of the Government interference has been this, that whereas suits for the recovery of rent were formerly almost unknown when the zemindar made his own settlement, they have since then, under the Government settlement, multiplied a hundredfold; and whereas formerly the ryots had no right of sale or transfer of their occupancy holdings without the consent of the zemindar, such transfer of their holdings to money-lenders and neighbouring zemindars have become most common, so that, instead of the law being a law "for the peace and good government" of the country, it has become a law of disorder, and the right of transfer, unless checked in time, will become a source of great political danger to the Government. In 1854 the Sonthals rose in rebellion against the Government, against the Mahajans, and against the Police, and got rid of their liabilities to the money-lenders by murdering them. It is well known that they are a very excitable people, and within the last few years, when Government ordered a census to be taken, a large number of troops had to be sent into the country to keep order. The Sonthals, as they did in 1854, will, when they part with their holdings to the money-lenders, and are beggared, turn round upon them again, and make short work of the people by whom they have been ruined, and this sort of evil will spread throughout the whole of the country if this Bill becomes law. In connection with this Resolution of compensation, and the fairness and justice of giving zemindars such compensation, I will simply mention one fact personal to myself on the strength of existing laws and usage. My whole life's earnings have been invested in the security of landed property. If the present Bill becomes law, the zemindar, to whom I have lent all my earnings on mortgage of his estates, will be unable to repay me the money I have given him, as his property will become greatly depreciated in value, and I will be unjustly deprived of the greater part of my life's earnings, on which I had relied as a provision for my old age.

The Honourable HARBANS SAHAI said :—

There can be no two opinions as to the justice of this demand. There is no revolution in this land; and even if, unfortunately, there was one, a settled Government would confiscate the rights of only the guilty; and if it were necessary to trench on the vested rights of the innocent, it would in honour and justice deem itself bound to offer compensation. That is not the case here; even the state of things at present existing in Ireland does not exist in India. Our Government has not now to confront a formidable land league and secret conspiracies, which make life so very uncomfortable in Ireland, which has paralysed Government to a certain extent, and made it powerless in that unhappy land. All these things are happily non-existent in India. There is not even a shadow of a pretence that any grave political necessity has arisen. There is not even a stirring, so to say, in the political world in India of this kind, indicated above. The Bogra disturbance of years back was such a small affair after all, that it did not wait pen and ink, much less powder and shot; for no sooner had Sir Richard Temple enacted his Agrarian Disturbance Bill, the disturbance was non-existent, and the Bengal Government had no occasion to put the law in force. Even your ryots have not complained against you, have not sought any relief against you, or your doings, and have not asked for enhanced rights. In the agitation that has been carried on for the last few years by people possessing a superabundance of philanthropy, in the lachrymose tears that have been hitherto shed over the ryots' woes and wrongs, the ryots have nowhere joined; and if they could be made to understand the true nature of the revolutionary provisions which their advocates and friends demand in their name, my firm conviction is that they would cry out in a body, "Save us from our friends." Well, gentlemen, you have heard from the preceding speakers what overwhelming testimony there is that the condition of our tenantry is improving from year to year under the existing state of facts. Well, if then, in the august wisdom of its Council, the Government deem it essential to the welfare of the tenantry to deprive the landlords of their just rights, inherited from generation to generation, confirmed by the Permanent Settlement, and consecrated by a century of British rule, it is nothing but just, fair, and reasonable, that you should solicit Government to consider the justice of allowing you to surrender your estates on receiving such compensation in money as will, when invested in Government securities, produce a permanent return equal to your present income. Well, sir, what will be your zemindaries that you will care to retain them after the passing of the Bill. Under the new Settlement, there is no guarantee that your present rent roll will not be considerably reduced in cases of purchases under the presumption clauses, while you will be forced to settle your lands with anyone that you first chance to find on getting up in the morning, for fear that a squatter may not oust it out of your hands, or that you may not be guilty of a criminal offence by retaining what you have paid for, as the Bengal Government asks to be done. You can only get rent, which is not to be higher than the value of the fifth of the produce. Then, in those places, where the ryots are already paying rent, more than a fifth of the value of the produce, they, with the view to benefit themselves at the expense of the zemindar, will form a combination to withhold payment of rent, and thus necessitate a rent suit on behalf of the zemindar against them, which will end in a decree, to realise which the zemindary will have to purchase himself the tenure which, as a matter of course, he will be compelled to settle again with those very refractory tenants at a reduced rate, which cannot, according to the proposed law, exceed a fifth value of the produce of the land.

Under Bhoolie tenure, where, in consideration of the annual investments, you have to make for earth-works, and so forth, your share hitherto had been 9 annas or 8 annas out of the 16 annas, now the same would at once be cut down to less than a half. In all such cases, and many more, your present income from your zemindaries will be considerably curtailed. Then, as to your prestige and influence as a zemindar, what will it be when, under the transferability clause, your resident bona fide cultivators who entertain respect for you, and for whom you have in return so much regard, will soon disappear, and in their places unwelcome tenants will be forced on you against your wishes. It may be sometimes an enemy, a hostile neighbour with whom you have been on the bitterest of terms, a capitalist, a mahajun far richer than yourself, who will naturally look down upon you. The power of contract will be denied to the ryot in relation to you, monstrous being as you are supposed to be, while the same ryot, thought to be incapable, while dealing with you, will have free scope to deal with all the world around. You will not go near a ryot's field for fear of a charge of criminal trespass being brought against you. Then your zemindari office will be transferred to the fiscal office, or registering office, or, as proposed by the Bill, the Civil Courts—with every step a lawsuit, a law proceeding, fines, harassments, survey of khamar lands, record of rights and settlement of jumma bundies, and so forth. Gentlemen, you know what lawsuits and law proceedings mean—they mean simple ruin to those who have unhappily to enter into them, bringing large profit to lawyers and Government in shape of court fees, and a number of etceteras to court underlinings. The visit of a common court peon to a mofussil village is dreaded by those on whom the visit is inflicted; but you will have under the Bengal Tenancy Bill too much of these dreaded visits. Who will, I ask you, after all this, care to retain his zemindari, to be a one-fifth annuitant of the produce of the land in what was hitherto known to be his zemindari estates! With all the harassments, lawsuits, and heavy expenditure that the maintenance of a zemindari entails, with all the responsibilities, liabilities, duties, and obligations that are imposed on zemindar, I hear you all cry, "not we." Well, that is a wise decision; your zemindaries will hereafter be no good to you. It will be wise to resolve if you do not care to retain it, and if you ask Government to permit you to surrender it in their hands. What do you ask in return? Only such compensation in money as will, when invested in Government securities, produce a permanent return equal to your present income. You do not ask for anything more than what you have, nor can Government reasonably refuse your request. If it is essential to deprive you of your rights for the sake of your tenantry, it is nothing but fair and just that you should get compensation for what you are thus going to be deprived of for the supposed common weal. Well, gentlemen, our benign Government did not hitherto take a single bigah of land, or deprive any one of his rights without affording adequate compensation. Under the Land Acquisition Act, the persons whose lands are taken away for public purposes get the proper value of their lands, and 15 per cent. for forcible ouster. Your case cannot be judged otherwise if you are deprived of your rights on account of a public purpose—i.e., for the welfare, or the supposed welfare, of your ryots. You are surely entitled to compensation just as others, whose lands are acquired for public purposes under the Land Acquisition Act. Well, your demand, however, is considerably less; you do not ask for the excess 15 per cent., for the Government will manage the whole zemindaries in Bengal and Behar for the future, and pay out of the proceeds thereof interest on your investments to an amount only equal to your present income. All increase will belong to Government. And it is a well-known fact—stern as facts are—that under the skilful management of the Government officials, the income of khas mehals, or any other branch of revenue, become capable of indefinite expansion. As an illustration of the skilful and successful management of the Government officials, I can point to you the fact of the enormous and the immense increase in the revenue from the country spirits under the outstill system.

There will be another direct gain; you zemindar masters will be effectually destroyed, and there then will remain nothing between the Government and the ryots to disturb the equanimity of our philanthropists and radicals. The Utopia will then be on hand; the peasant proprietors will be the owners of the soil, and the so-called zemindari oppressions will no longer be heard of, only there is a reverse side to this blessed millennium. The Government farmer or rent collector will be there; the ryot middlemen will be there, with lots of rack-rented Government tenants under him; the officials will be there, with the Settlement Act in their hands to enhance the rents according to their whims and idiosyncracies.

The Certificate Act will also be there, with power to seize and arrest, but the sympathy that binds the zemindars and the ryots will be sadly wanting there; and, between this and that, the ryots, by the kind office of their friends, will find themselves nowhere; or, if some of them be found here and there, they will be much in the same position as their Deccan brethren are at the present moment, with all their Relief Acts passed in their favour by a paternal Government. However, that is no concern of yours or mine; we do our duty when we point out the evil, and if we are denied a hearing, we like to retire with what is legitimately our own, or its equivalent; and by the course we indicate, not a single pice is added to the public expenditure, but rather there are fair prospects of the Government having an enormous increase in the revenue, as stated above.

With these observations I beg to support the third Resolution.

Baboo NIL COOMUL MITTER said he would like to propose an amendment to this Resolution, or, at least, he would like to say that there was a certain part of it with which he did not agree. His honourable friend who had just spoken had explained that by the passing of the present Bill the zemindaries would lose their present value, and, therefore, it was much better that the zemindars should give up their estates, receiving from Government money equal to so much if the investment was made in Government securities. He thought this a very poor estimate of the value of a zemindary estate. Government paper was nothing compared with landed property. There were many gentlemen in this town who were owners of Government securities, and whose income exceeded that of the Maharajah of Burdwan; but did that income give them greater prestige than the Maharajah? Certainly not. Landed property was one thing, and Government securities were another. Government paper during the Mutiny sold at Allahabad and Lucknow at the rate of hundreds for thousands. Anything might change the price of Government securities. Government action might deteriorate its value. Investments were made for orphans and widows, and sometimes for the worship of idols.

Mr. BELL said he thought his friend was under a misapprehension with regard to the Resolution before the meeting. The Resolution did not propose that a certain amount should be paid in Government paper, but that a sum of money should be paid which, if invested in Government paper, would yield a certain return.

Baboo NIL COOMUL MITTER said that he disagreed for this reason, that he thought an estate worth much more than 4 per cent. He thought the Government should pay double the present income. He thought that if Government wished to confiscate the estates of zemindars, they should prepare a list of all the Rajahs and Maharajahs in Bengal, and give them lands in London. Let the Government make them Lords and Dukes. Perhaps the Government would be a gainer by exchange. £10,000 would be tantamount to £8,000 in England, but the zemindars would overlook that.

Subsequently the speaker withdrew his amendment.

FOURTH RESOLUTION.

Rajah SHYAMA SUNKER RAI CHOWDURY said,—Nobles and gentlemen,—I have been requested to move the fourth Resolution; but before I proceed to do this, I intend to make a few remarks. The speakers who have preceded me have almost exhausted the subject. I therefore submit my views with considerable diffidence.

The question of compensation for loss of rights naturally raises the question, what are the rights which we are going to lose? Are the zemindars mere rent collectors, or actual proprietors of the soil? Do they date their origin from 1793 or earlier times, and what are the terms on which the Permanent Settlement of 1793 was made? The theory that the zemindars were mere rent collectors had supporters in bygone times as now. Mr. Grant, the Serishtadar of the Board of Revenue, maintained that the zemindars were mere collectors of rent, and that the Government had a good right to confiscate their properties; but his theory of pure selfishness was summarily rejected by the Court of Directors, and subsequently by Act of Parliament. At the present time the advocates of this theory had their opinions conclusively disproved by several writers, who had dispassionately investigated the subject, and the theorists have been obliged to take shelter under the saving clause, as they allege in Section VIII. of Regulation I. of 1793, by which the Governor General reserved his rights to enact such regulations as he may think necessary for the protection and welfare of the dependant talookdars, ryots, &c., but this does not include a right on the part of the Government to take away any of the vested or granted rights of the zemindars. That even at the early times of the British possession, the creation of the zemindary rights was not modern, has been acknowledged by high independent authorities as Sir John Shore and Mr. Harrington, and still at this time old zemindar families are in existence in Bengal and Behar, who are descendants of very ancient and noble ancestors. The testimony on this point is borne even by independent Europeans; Mr. Nolan, the great friend of ryots, in his speech on the occasion of the installation of the present Maharaja of Dumraon, who was kindly favoured with his presence, said—that the founder of that noble family flourished in Bhojpur, when Peter the Hermit preached a crusade to the chivalry of Europe. The old and ancient independent Chiefs of Cooch Behar and Hill Tipperah, who also own large zemindaries in Bengal, have been deprived of sovereign rights in them. I may mention many other houses in Bengal, such as Bishenpore Rajnugger in Birbhoom, of very old standing. The zemindar families of Soosoong, Bangadhar mahashoi of Moorsheadabad, Maharajans, Dinagepore, Puttee, Burdwan, Nuddea, Natore, Dubungah, Bettiah, Hutwa, have received proprietary grants of lands and titles of honour during the times of Baber, Akbar, and other Emperors of the great Mogul dynasty. Many of these families date their origin, therefore, from the times of Henry VIII. and Queen Elizabeth of England. The proprietary rights of these noblemen have never been questioned during the many changes of sovereigns in Bengal and Behar; even the convulsive revolution which took place in Bengal during the time of Shere Afghan could not obliterate some of these families. The rights which have been thus enjoyed by right of inheritance and absolute enjoyment of many centuries, surely cannot be confiscated on mere sentimental grounds; but why go we to these ancient times? We will search the period which is replete with records and the confirmation of the rights of zemindars by our own Government—that is, the times of the Permanent Settlement of 1793.

At the time when the East India Company obtained the Dewany of the Province in 1765, the Company was on the brink of bankruptcy. Wars which were then carried in Southern India had completely exhausted the treasury; the wages of the sepoys had fallen into arrears, and the Governor General was obliged to raise money by coercing the Begums of Lucknow and the Chief of Benares; the zemindars of Bengal and Behar did not escape this general spoliation, and his mode of putting to public auction the zemindaries of Bengal, those that survived, were greatly harassed and reduced. The Permanent Settlement of Bengal was effected in 1793. The zemindars, independent talookdars, &c., were declared absolute proprietors of the soil, and the amount of Government demand upon land was fixed for ever. But did this declaration of the rights of zemindars and independent talookdars follow on the mere recommendation of a Commission sitting at Calcutta, and arriving at conclusions affecting the rights of the sixty millions of Bengal and Behar, or sentimentalism and carefully-prepared digests of law? No; but from careful and actual investigation into the laws, usages, and customs of the country, the different rights of the zemindars, talookdars, and cultivators, and others interested in the soil, were carefully inquired into, and to each class was assigned the right which each enjoyed. The Permanent Settlement was, therefore, a confirmation of the rights which the zemindars as a class enjoyed, with this new addition only, that the jumma was fixed for ever; but did the Government concede this right without any equivalent return? The Government of the day was not in such a philanthropist mood; the jumma was assessed at ten-elevenths of the rent of the soil. The revenue was, fixed at such a high maximum in many cases, that the holders could not meet the Government demand in time. The result was that many estates were attached for arrears of revenue, and Government demand realised from the tenantry of the defaulting estates by the appointment of the Sagwals. This, to some extent, kept the old families in their places; but the sunset law, promulgated some years after 1793, fell like a thunderbolt on the old zemindars. Many estates were thus sold, and many families were deprived from their long-enjoyed and dearest lands, which change of monarchies and revolutions could not take from them. Even some of those houses, who were instrumental in effecting the English rule in Bengal, suffered more or less, or ruined from the rigorous and unfeeling application of this sunset law and high enhancement.

True it is the zemindaries, who were in many cases sold at nominal price, and many great estates were divided into lots and sold piecemeal in want of purchasers, notwithstanding the nominal price they paid for the properties, were not in many cases gainers for the whole. The new purchasers, the difficulties which they experienced in ousting the ancient zemindars, and the consequent law and other expenses which they incurred, was not small; but what at first appeared to be a cheap bargain was at the end a very heavy outlay of capital.

In later years, thousands of estates have been sold for arrears of revenue, and purchased by capitalists on the full understanding that the rights guaranteed by the Permanent Settlement will never be changed. The Government has also granted permanent leases, or have sold waste lands in Sunderbans, the hill tracts of Assam, Sylhet, Darjeeling, and Chittagong.

Now, from what has been said, it follows that, among the fifty thousand or more proprietors of land in Bengal and Behar, about a thousand may be taken to be those persons who were the proprietors at the time of the Permanent Settlement; the rest, forty-nine thousand, derived their title from purchase, either at revenue sale, or other public and private sales, or by leases from Government. Now, the thousand old proprietors have again employed a large amount of capital on their estates since 1793, and therefore the whole fifty thousand proprietors of Bengal and Behar have legitimately invested their capital in land in thorough good faith, perfect reliance upon the guarantees of rights, privileges given by the Permanent Settlement Regulations; surely, they can claim compensation for any rights which they are obliged to give up by the new law in favour of the ryots and money-lenders.

In the cases of pottah holders for waste lands and of purchasers of waste and other lands from Government, the leases cannot be trampled down without breaches of faith on the part of the Government itself. I think the holders of these rights never dreamt that the coolies of their plantations will claim the right of occupancy and free sale for lands upon which they were allowed to erect their sheds. At this late hour it is not expedient to enter into a discussion of the several sections of the Bill, and point out what rights the proprietors are going to lose by the passing of the Bill into law, and what suggestions can be made for the insertions of suitable clauses for the protection of those rights. But I may make one remark on this point. The ryots, in many parts of Eastern Bengal, have paid to their zemindars ten to fifteen times upon their yearly jummas, or rent as salaamee, or bonus for some of the rights, such as freedom from enhancement of rent, right of digging tanks, &c., erecting pucca dwelling houses, cutting down and selling valuable trees, and the power to transfer the rights.

The Bill, in a manner, gives to the occupancy ryots the whole of those privileges, if the ryots are willing to pay for rights which the Bill intends to confer on them; it is hard that the zemindars should part with them without any compensation at all.

I cannot conclude without expressing my sincere hope that our virtuous and noble Viceroy will not overlook our claims if properly represented to him.

The Resolution I am going to move is this “that as thousands of estates have been made of waste and other lands upon the faith of zemindars being entitled to their present rights, suitable clauses may be introduced into the Bill for providing compensation to the zemindars for the loss of their rights.”

Mr. J. G. APCAR, in seconding the Resolution, said,—Maharajahs, Rajahs, and gentlemen, I shall be only a few minutes in addressing you. Taking the hint that has been given to us by my honourable friend, Mr. Kristo Das Pal, I shall not attempt to go into any detailed argument on the Rent Bill; not that I have not much to say upon the measure, but because there are many more speakers yet to be heard this evening, and I do not desire you to give me much of your time. It is with very great pleasure that I have responded to the invitation of your Committee to assist at this meeting; and I have the more readily done so because it is with my native fellow-subjects that I now join hands. (Applause.) It is true that there are some others who are interested in this matter, but their numbers are comparatively small. Gentlemen, when any injustice is being perpetrated, or attempted to be perpetrated, to any class, it is an injury to the whole State; and certainly the Rent Bill is a measure that calls for the active sympathy with the zemindars of all those who are interested in the welfare of India. (Applause.) The landlords of India are not the least in importance of the three classes; a class on whom the stability of the Empire greatly rests (applause); and when we find a legislation that has offended the officials in this country, that has angered the Europeans, and then begins to alienate the zemindars,

I think it is time, indeed, for us to take alarm. Those who are most interested in the country are most interested in checking abuses and removing them. Reform will never, and cannot be resisted by those who have a stake in the country; it is when unnecessary changes are being wantonly made that opposition is excited. In what manner has this Rent Bill come before us? It has been brought forward, not merely on insufficient evidence, but on no evidence at all. It has been framed upon assumption; it is pressed forward by men who have been selected by Government for the purpose. If it was required that there should be proper legislation, I would ask, why is it, and how is it that those who possess ripe experience and mature judgment have been studiously kept away from dealing with it? Why is it, and how is it, that the assistance of Mr. Dampier and Mr. Munro, and of our learned Advocate-General, has not been called in? There is a most eminent lawyer in the Council who is in favour of the Bill; why does Government make room for a lawyer who does not agree with Lord Ripon on the question, to cope with him? Is this the way to legislate? Legislation should proceed for the good of all; and I certainly do deprecate any attempts being made here in India to legislate for the purposes of political parties in England. (Applause.) In opposing this measure, it is not a question of party politics at all. Liberals oppose it. I would instance my friend, Mr. Keswick, who is a strong Liberal, or at least was so, until the definition of that term came to be a person who is generous at other persons' expense. But this is not all; there have been reasonable representations made, and they have been treated with contempt; there have been opinions given—official opinions—and I take this opportunity to ask of Government how it is that that most able minute of our honoured Chief Justice has not had place given to it in the opinions published by Government? Is it for the sake of the ryot that this measure has been brought forward? The ryot is a poor and ignorant man; he requires to be safeguarded against himself. We shall find that this Bill, introduced, we are told for his benefit, will, if passed into law, reduce him to a state worse than that which he now occupies. You have had a long discussion on this matter, and therefore I do not wish to take up your time any further, but I would ask, why has this measure been proposed? For whose good? Government takes no heed that the value of property is being reduced 30 per cent.; it ignores the fact that people have been dealing with the property in the belief that it had been permanently settled, and on the faith of the British Government. Is it not paying too heavy a price for a policy by which Government forfeits the confidence of all who have everything to lose, and imperils the peace and prosperity of the country? (Applause.) I ask you, gentlemen, is not that too heavy a cost? And when you find that it was for no good cause, you have indeed good reason to reflect on the spirit with which it is being proceeded with—to satisfy the vanity of a few Radicals. (Loud applause.)

Baboo KALLY MOHUN DAS briefly supported the Resolution, but was scarcely audible to the reporters.

Baboo SORJU NARIAN SINGH, of Bhaugulpore, said,—Maharajah, Bahadoor, and gentlemen,—After the able speeches that have been delivered just now in moving and seconding the last resolution, hardly any more words are needed for making it acceptable to you.

The preceding speakers have dwelt on the revolutionary character of the Bengal Tenancy Bill, how it will unsettle existing relations between landlords and tenants, and lead to a long cycle of warfare between the two classes whose welfare requires peace and mutual good will. The noble Viceroy is anxious to plant the tree of Local Self-Government, and to introduce the system of decentralisation in Bengal and Behar, but if His Excellency would ponder well over the results of sowing the provisions of the Rent Bill, he would find that they are only calculated to centralise all power in the revenue authorities, and place the landlords and ryots completely in their hands. Already the power of the executive authorities is supreme in the Mofussil and this Bill would intensify it. The landholders would lose the little feeling of independence they now possess, and the ryots class would be afraid to run counter to the wishes of the magistrate-collector, who, in matters of vital importance to both, would be the arbiter of their fate. Imperialism could not be better secured than by the provisions of the Bill, which vests large power in the revenue authorities in approving contracts, defining Khamar lands, fixing tables of rates, setting rents, and in other important matters.

The Bill is said to be a measure having for its object the restoration of the ancient landlord of the country, and not the redistribution of the property inland. In order to prove this hypothesis, the word proprietor, and in the declaration regulation relating to the Permanent Settlement of Bengal and Behar, is construed not to include a right of property in the soil. The Permanent Settlement is described to have been a huge blunder, a creation of the infatuated brain of Lord Cornwallis. I am not called upon just now to defend that great act of State—that Magna Charta of the rights of the people. It is sufficient to say that the measure, instead of being a blunder, was one of far-seeing statesmanship. The landholders of Bengal and Behar not only exercised the rights of landlords as between themselves and their tenantry before the period of the Permanent Settlement, but they also held many Governmental functions. They had the power of dispensing justice, carrying taxes and other impositions on their tenantry, and imprisoning them for distrust in payment, and of other dues. Lord Cornwallis deprived them of their Governmental power, and allowed the pure relation of landlord and tenant to subsist between the landholders and their tenants, in order to compensate the landholders for the loss of their privileges and prestige, and for other State purposes; he fixed the revenue in perpetuity in time of its fluctuating character, and placed the rights of the landholders as between them and the Government on the one hand, and as between them and their subordinate holders, inclusive of ryots, on the other hand, on a secure basis. The law of the Permanent Settlement recognised that the property in the soil was vested in a certain class of the community other than ryots, and it offered the Settlement to them. The Bengal Tenancy Bill proceeds on the assumption that the property in the soil is vested in the ryots. All lands not proved to be Khamar shall be presumed to be ryoti, and all lands shall be presumed to be ryoti, until the contrary is proved. Is this the ancient land law of the country? I will refer here to a case, out of numerous cases, proving the contrary to be the ancient land law. Rajah Madhao Singh, one of the ancestors of the Maharajah who so worthily fills the chair on the present occasion, granted away several hundreds of acres of land free—of course, to certain pious and charitable uses. The grant was evidenced by a copper plate, and the land was wadgaur, or uncultivated waste at the time. The grant was made before the time of the Permanent Settlement, and the successor of the grant is still in possession of the land, which is attached to a religious math, or temple, after having eluded the iron grasp of the resumption officers. The title is as strong as any title in this country ever can be; but the British Government mark a century after the date of the Permanent Settlement, the foundation on which that Government rests being the rock of equal justice to all, tells the descendants of Rajah Madhao Singh that with the exception of the zerat lands which he may hold, the rest of the lands cultivated and uncultivated in his wide domains is not his own, and that he would in the eye of the law be a trespasser if he took actual possession of the uncultivated lands on his own account, or made any charitable pious disposition of them to others. If this is not the legitimate consequence of the presumption that all lands shall be presumed to be ryots until the contrary is proved, I ask what it is? Gentlemen, I have already said that the Permanent Settlement was not an infatuated Act. But suppose I were to capitulate to those who take a contrary view, still I should not lose my ground as to the resolution that is now before the meeting. Long after the Permanent Settlement, Government resolved to dispose of the waste lands in fee simple. There was no reservation of any rights of tenancy in them. Capitalists invested money on the faith of their holding rights which the existing law conferred. The reservation clause occurring in the articles relating to the Permanent Settlement, much misunderstood and misapplied, does not apply to them. Government has for a series of years past long after the Permanent Settlement, sold, and is daily selling, landed estates, and purchases have been and are made on the understanding that the holders of them would copy the rights which the law now gives, or between themselves and the tenants. I have come across numerous proceedings or rubakaris of Settlement in which the authorised officers of Government have stated in clear terms that in the estates mentioned in them, there are no Mouroosi or other tenant rights. Lord Cornwallis may have erred, but has every Government that succeeded him similarly, and including that of Lord Ripon, and that of the present Lieutenant Governor? Is it justice that these persons who have sunk their capital in making these purchases should lose the right now possessed in them in respect of their estates, without any compensation being provided for? The answer which any reasonable mind, not affected by the doctrine of spoliation, of those which have in order to give to those who have not, must be in the negative, and it therefore behoves the Government of Lord Ripon, should the Bill pass, to make adequate provision for compensation for such cases.

The Resolution was put to the meeting, and carried unanimously.

FIFTH RESOLUTION.

The fifth Resolution was moved by Nawab Velayat Ali, Khan Bahadoor, who spoke in Urdu, and was as follows:—

"That in view of the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Bill, which will deprive the landlords of their legitimate prestige and influence, and reduce them to a state of helplessness, this meeting is of opinion that the Government should be requested to relieve the zemindars of the duty of collecting the road and public works cesses, and of such other services and obligations as are now cast upon them by law or custom."

Baboo SALIGRAM SING said,—Maharajahs, Rajahs, Nawabs, and gentlemen, I need hardly tell you what position the zemindar occupies in the scale of society in this country, what influence he exercises in its internal affairs, what service he has rendered to the State on critical occasions, and to the people by contributing largely in aid of undertakings for their benefit. He has under the existing law to assist in the currency and demarcation of lands, to assist the police in the apprehension of offenders, and finding out of stolen property, to supply provisions to troops passing through his estate, and to furnish information to public officers in respect to various matters. The most onerous of his obligations is to collect the road and public works cesses. There is no landlord who has not to pay out of his own money a portion of the cesses payable by his ryots; the law makes no provision for bad debts, and he has to pay all the same, whether he recovers from his ryots or not.

Gentlemen, these duties he has been discharging at considerable loss and risk under the existing state of things. But imagine what would be his position when the proposed Bill is passed into law. It does not require the vision of a prophet to see that if the Bill be passed into law, he will be deprived of his prestige and influence, and his position will be that of a tahsildar, or farmer under Government.

What regard can one have for a landholder who cannot let his land on his own terms, who cannot eject his tenant for non-payment of rent, who cannot distraint his tenant's crops for recovery of arrears, and who has to go either to a moonsiff or a revenue officer for the performance of one and all the multifarious transactions between him and his ryot. Under such circumstances, no one can, for a moment, doubt that the landholder will be utterly helpless to render the Government, and to the community, the services he has hitherto been performing. I submit that in view of the loss of prestige and influence which the proposed law would cause to the landholders, they should be relieved of the services and obligations which have been cast upon them.

The Resolution was then carried unanimously.

SIXTH RESOLUTION.

The Maharajah of Guidore moved the sixth Resolution, which was as follows:—

"That His Excellency the Viceroy in Council be moved to publish for general information in English and in the Vernaculars the Bengal Tenancy Bill, as it may be amended by the Select Committee, and to grant sufficient time to the public for the consideration of the amended Bill."

Baboo PROSONNO CHUNDER ROY, zamindar of Nuddea, in seconding the Resolution, said he would not take up much of their time, but he would not be doing his duty if he did not say a few words as to how the Bill would affect the district from which he came. They had no doubt heard of the peculiar custom which existed there. The lands were not let out on lease after a definite application; but the ryots, of their own accord, and without any express permission, ploughed up the lands which they wished to cultivate, and sowed them. At the proper season when the crops were ripening, the zemindar sent a man to see what lands had been cultivated, and to recover the rents from those who had cultivated them. The High Court had decided that these men were tenants under the zemindars; and although they were trespassers, they would, under the Bill, be treated as ryots, holding the land by right. In this respect, the Bill would operate very hardly on the zemindars of Nuddea. Then there was another point. Many hundreds of Beegas on every large estate were held by poor men, brahmins and others, who were allowed to hold them. The Government claimed the right to legislate for the protection of the ryot; but what right had they to legislate for these men? With these few words, he would second the Resolution.

DR. TROYLUCKO NATH MITTER said,—I have great pleasure in supporting the Resolution that has just been moved and seconded. That Resolution contains two prayers—1st, a prayer to the Viceroy to publish the Bill in English and in the Vernaculars of the people who are to be affected by the same, the object being to inform the people of its contents, and to give the same a wide circulation. This, I understand, is one of the rules of business in the Council in the case of new Bills introduced; but, remembering the numerous and important changes that the Bill has undergone in Committee, it is not incorrect to style it a new Bill; and a republication, even if it be a departure from established practice, and unprecedented, would be justified by the necessity of the case; a wider public opinion would be evoked, and information would be brought home to the people to be affected by the Bill. When such is its object, a departure from the rule, which is intended to further, not to impede, the object and scope of legislation, would be justified. Here at least we might be permitted to say that the rule would be more honoured in the breach than in the observance. A wide and extensive publication of intended changes in the law is an axiom in all civilised countries, and the necessity is the greater in this country, where all legislation is carried on in a language which is unknown to the people.

The second prayer contained in this Resolution is more important, but it is none the less reasonable. The prayer is that the Bill should not be passed in haste, and that sufficient time should be given to the public for deliberate consideration of its several provisions. Now, the changes which the Bill has undergone in the Committee are so numerous, and some of them so important and novel in their character, that unless it is before the public for a considerably long time, it will be impossible for the parties interested in this controversy to express their opinions with authority or confidence on its several provisions. It may be said, on the other hand, that by their postponing the passing of this Bill, you do certain mischief. That proposition, gentlemen, is not true in the present circumstances of the country. To justify speedy legislation, necessity for the same must be made out. It must be shown that the circumstances in the country have attained to such a critical position; the relations between the several classes of the community have become so strained; the attitude of one towards the other has been so menacing, that, unless there is immediate legislative interference, a sanguinary conflict between the classes in eminent, and ruin and calamity is likely to overwhelm the people. How can we predicate this state of things of the present relations between the rent-paying and the rent-receiving classes? I think the answer to this question will be in the negative. Is it not a fact that two months before this Bill was introduced the relations between the classes were perfectly amicable? Did not peace and harmony prevail in their mutual intercourse? And I may say, without any fear of contradiction, that even the introduction of this Bill has not generally excited any bitterness of feeling between the two classes. When, therefore, no danger is imminent, why not listen to a proposal which is so reasonable? Why force on this legislative measure with undue speed? I speak in the interests of both classes when I say that a delay in passing the Bill will be conducive to the good of both. Either party will then get ample time and numerous opportunities to weigh all these provisions coolly and deliberately, and will be in a position to arrive at satisfactory results. To the Legislature, the benefit will be incalculable. The matters under discussion will be threshed out by the parties with care and composure, and Government will have the advantage of accepting the results of the final deliberations of the parties, which will tend to promote peace and harmony between the classes, and ultimately to secure the happiness of the people. The evils of hasty legislation are numerous; it perpetuates error, inflicts mischief, and creates bitterness of feeling which did not exist before.

Baboo SHEO PRATAB NARAI N, Delegate for the Maharajah of Mutwa, said:—

Gentlemen,—In rising to support the Resolution, I have to add a word of introduction. I have been commissioned to attend this meeting by the Maharajah of Mutwa, who is unavoidably absent to-day, on account of a heavy domestic affliction. Had it not been for this, the Maharajah would have taken an active part in the discussion of the meeting of this day. Yes, the last Resolution embodies a very reasonable plan. All of you know what transfers the Bills undergo at the hands of the Select Committee. Some times so much so, that the original movers of the Bill find it very difficult to recognise their bantling in the new Bill which comes out of the hands of the Select Committee. The antecedent history of the present Bill to a great extent shows what changes it has undergone from time to time, not always in the hands of Select Committees, but in the hands of gentlemen who have been entrusted ever and anon with the making of the Bill; so that in the present Bengal Tenancy Bill, with its many revolutionary and Radical changes, we find but very little of Sir Ashley Eden's original Bill for the speedy realisation of rent. Gentlemen, in this instance the dwarf has grown into the monster, which threatens to swallow up all your rights. Then, gentlemen, in the Select Committee the public has no access, and the few members appointed are made to do the things themselves according to their own idiosyncracies, without any light from outside. It is nothing but just and reasonable, then, that the various recommendations of the Select Committee should be published, and the public given the fullest opportunity of discussing them. Gentlemen, while those who are acquainted with the English language will thus be in a position to know and discuss the various changes which the Select Committee recommends, there is yet believed to be an infinitely more numerous number of people who, on account of their ignorance of that language, cannot form any idea of those changes which are going vitally to affect the right of the zemindars, and all the ryots come in this category. In the interest of this number, whose rights are going to be thus vitally affected by the passing of the Rent Law, we ask the Government not to proceed with the Bill till an accurate translation of the Bill embodying the recommendations of the Select Committee has been before the public for some time, and the public thus afforded the fullest opportunity of discussing its provisions. With these words, I beg to second the resolution for your favourable consideration.

Baboo KALIYAN SING then addressed the meeting in Urdu, and the Agent of Syed Looft Ali Khan Bahadour, C.I.E., gave a most vigorous exhortation in Hindustani.

The Resolution was put to the meeting, and carried unanimously.

SEVENTH RESOLUTION.

It was next proposed by Baboo CHUCKEN LALL SING, zemindar of Chukdiggee, seconded by Baboo Hurry Chunder Roy Chowdhury, zemindar of Mymensing, and carried:—"That a memorial be submitted to His Excellency the Viceroy in Council, embodying the Resolutions passed at this meeting, and that it be forwarded with the signature of the chairman.

In conclusion, a vote of thanks to His Highness the Chairman was proposed by Maharajah Jotendro Mohun Tagore, and seconded by Baboo Joy Kissen Mookerjee, and unanimously carried.

The meeting then separated.

THE CUSTOMS REVENUE OF BENGAL.

THE effects of the Indian Tariff Act on the revenue, so far as Bengal is concerned, are now put before us plainly in the resolution of the Lieutenant Governor on the administration of the Customs Department for the year 1882-83. The Act remitted all customs duties, except those on arms and ammunition, liquors, opium, and salt, the duty on the latter being also levied at a reduced rate. Concisely stated, the result is best shown in figures. In 1882-83 the net sum received as duty was Rs.2,06,50,647, against Rs.3,15,45,843. This shows a loss of revenue during the past year of Rs.1,08,75,196, or 34 per cent., a sum which the country could ill spare, considering the expenditure required for the further extension of railways, or, as it is the fashion to call it, the development of the resources of the country. Of the loss, 62½ lakhs was due to the reduction of the salt duty, and 46½ lakhs to the abolition of duty on other exports. The Lieutenant Governor considers that "the loss on salt being due to a reduction, and not a total abolition of duty, is not of a permanent nature, and will doubtless be gradually made up by the increasing prosperity of the country, and the consequent increase in consumption of this indispensable article of food. The loss on other imports, on the other hand, arises from the entire removal of duty, and could not be recovered by increased consumption of those imports, however large. Compensation for this sacrifice of revenue, which was intentionally made by the Supreme Government for the general relief of the people, can be looked for in the Customs Department only in the growth of the revenue on the few articles still subject to duty; but the gain from this source must, in the nature of the case, be small as compared with the revenue relinquished. In the past year the advance in the receipts from these articles was 13·7 per cent. on arms and ammunition, and 5·6 per cent. on liquors. In addition to the revenue from duty, Rs.2,48,595 were received by the Customs Department from other sources during the year, against Rs.256,430 in 1881-82, and the charges for the year having been Rs.5,81,484, against Rs.7,23,888 in 1881-82, the total net revenue amounted to Rs.2,03,17,758, against Rs.3,10,58,391 in the previous year. The charges have been considerably curtailed, and this was effected by the reduction and revision of establishments which was rendered possible in consequence of the removal of so many articles from the tariff.

The trade of the country, however, does not increase by those "leaps and bounds" which Lord Beaconsfield once boasted of as a characteristic of the trade of Great Britain, for we find that "exclusive of Government transactions, the total value of the imports into these provinces during the past year was Rs.28,34,61,937, as compared with Rs.27,25,94,629 in the preceding year. In the foreign trade the imports amounted to Rs.23,41,84,301, consisting of Rs.20,11,23,394 of free merchandise, Rs.1,00,78,024 of dutiable merchandise, and Rs.2,29,82,883 of treasure, against Rs.22,36,31,980, consisting of 8,88,20,199 of free merchandise, Rs.11,55,90,390 of dutiable merchandise, and Rs.192,21,291 of treasure, 1881-82. In the coasting trade the imports were valued at Rs.4,92,77,636, of which Rs.72,03,040 were of foreign merchandise, Rs.3,53,14,481 of Indian products, and Rs.67,60,115 of treasure, as compared with Rs.48,962,648 in 1881-82, of which Rs.80,01,641 were of foreign merchandise, Rs.3,05,54,360 of Indian products, and Rs.1,04,06,648 of treasure.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1884.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Jan. 18; Madras and Allahabad, Jan. 16; Calcutta, Jan. 15.

HYDERABAD is the centre of Indian interest for the present week; and the events that have been happening there are sufficiently startling.

In the first place, the party of the young son of the late lamented Sir Salar Jung seems to have had recourse to something very like a coup d'état—apparently with the goodwill of the youthful Nizam—to force Lord Ripon's hand, and obtain the nomination of this young gentleman of twenty to the enormously responsible post of Dewan, or Prime Minister. We are informed by the Times correspondent, that, just before the Installation Durbar, "the Nizam's servants changed the chairs of Salar Jung and the Peshkar." This meant—though no word was said—that the momentous appointment had actually been made by the Nizam! And then, so we learn, "the Government, (i.e., Lord Ripon), consented, because the expressed wishes of the Nizam are to be respected!"

SUCH pitiable feebleness is probably without a parallel in the history of our dealings with the Native States of India. We express no opinion whatever, for the present, as to the suitability of the youthful Mir Liak Ali, now Nawab Salar Jung, for the post of his great and lamented father: Two absurdly contradictory views are given in yesterday's Times, as to the character of the young nobleman; and the probability is, that it is still uncertain whether he will turn out to be the Hyperion of the one account, or the satyr of the other. It is not often that the character is strongly marked, either for good or evil, at twenty years of age.

BUT, however this may be, one thing seems clear, on a common-sense view of the tour de force successfully executed by the young Mir's party, and meekly acquiesced in by Lord Ripon—for the reason which seems usually to prevail with His Excellency, to save appearances—either the young Mir is the right man to invest with almost irresponsible power at Hyderabad, or he is not. If he is the right man in the judgment of Lord Ripon, it is simply monstrous that the appointment should have been left to slide, and to be ultimately decided in a sort of suppressed bear-fight in the very Installation Durbar itself. If he is not the right man, and Lord Ripon assents to the appointment merely because he is too vain to acknowledge that his hand was forced by the masterful changing of the chairs at the Durbar, and that he had not the moral courage to resist—the Government will have connived at one of the most infamous jobs ever known, in a matter of the most tremendous importance, and one that may involve the most disastrous issue.

THE real significance of the appointment of the young Salar Jung may or may not (the public is not yet in a position to judge) be illustrated by the astounding "disclosures" on Hyderabad politics which the Calcutta Statesman professes to give in its issues to hand, by the last, and by to-day's mail. As the so-called "disclosures" contain the most atrocious charges—made in the bluntest and most explicit way, and with almost aggressive freedom of epithet—against high official and other personages of hitherto unimpeached reputation, both English and Native, we do not care to reproduce them, or even to comment on them in detail, until more information is forthcoming. The charges must, we presume, result in legal proceedings in some form or other.

BUT the point of the whole business at present is this—that the Statesman's so-called "disclosures," point to, and demand, the nomination of the young Salar Jung as Dewan (which has now actually been brought about) as a preliminary to such trifling operations as "the clearing out of the Residency from top to bottom," and the immediate arrest of personages of high official and political importance! Now that the first part of the Statesman's programme has been carried out, people will be agape to know how much of the sequel is to follow. The situation is an interesting one, to say the least of it. And to-day the Times telegram speaks of a rumour of the resignation of the Resident.

THE Farming World of Feb. 2, has the following on the Bengal Tenancy Bill and the current land-legislation in India:—

"During the last few issues we have published in extenso the Central Provinces Tenancy Bill, inasmuch as the Act was but little known in England, although its passages marked a new era in our legislative enactments towards the landlords and Ryoti classes in our Eastern dependency. Nevertheless, we deem it wise, there being such excitement raised over the proposed Bengal Tenancy Bill—apparently not less severe than which has attended the famous Ilbert Bill—to publish the other side of the question, as being in direct opposition to the Council's proposals. The most formidable opponent to the measure, and one who assures the world that his action is from a sincere conviction that the Bill will be ruinous not only to the landlords, whose loyalty has ever been conspicuous, but also to the ryots (farmers), is Roper Lethbridge, Esq., C.I.E., (formerly Professor of Political Economy in the Presidency College, Calcutta, and editor of the Calcutta Quarterly Review). We have not space to-day, but next Saturday's issue will contain the first part of Mr. Lethbridge's paper."

It appears from the information about this wretched Egyptian mess that has been allowed to leak out, that Sir Evelyn Baring is largely, if not entirely, responsible for the deplorable delay in employing General Gordon, that may not improbably cost that heroic officer his life, and that has already cost us the lives of the gallant fellows with Baker Pasha. The "most over-rated man in India" was certain to be found out sooner or later, when placed in a position in which he no longer possessed the adventitious "aids to greatness," which were at his command in India to a degree perhaps hitherto unprecedented. But what can be thought of a Ministry that can attempt to save itself from disgrace, by sending out a single brave man among the fierce and rapacious Bedouins of the Soudan, with the rumour, probably destined never to be extinguished, that he carried 40,000 sovereigns in his pocket? This foolhardy enterprise, which has been imposed on the gallant Gordon, is something quite different in kind from the many deeds of similar personal heroism that adorn the annals of the Indian Army—such for instance as the mission of Cavagnari to Kabul. It is abundantly clear that, if General Gordon is to succeed, it can only be by the most amazing good luck; for the dangers of the enterprise far transcend the utmost that can be expected to be achieved, even by his matchless qualities.

THE Englishman says:—

"The accusations brought by a newspaper published in Calcutta and entitled the Statesman against certain officers in Haidarabâ are, we understand, not likely to be allowed to pass unchallenged. That journal will probably shortly have the satisfaction of a prolonged enjoyment of the crown of martyrdom which it seems of late to have so diligently sought. Everyone who knows anything of the true story of the affair which it has so recklessly, though we presume not entirely without motive, misrepresented, is aware that if the accusations are made the subject of a criminal prosecution, matters may possibly go hard with the journal in question."

AT the Exhibition Banquet in Calcutta, given in honour of M. Joubert, the entrepreneur, the toast of "the Viceroy," was received with "a tempest of hisses and groans." The intense personal dislike with which Lord Ripon seems to have inspired all his fellow-countrymen in India, to a most deplorable degree, would be a serious political calamity if the Viceroyalty were not now approaching its "happy release." A comic turn was imparted to the hisses and groans at the Exhibition Banquet, by the band forthwith striking up the air that had been attached to the Vice-regal toast as most appropriate—"Mynheer Vandunck!"

We have great pleasure in calling attention to the enterprise of the "East India Tramways Company (Limited)," which is about to provide Karachi with its much-needed tramways. The testimony of Mr. John Norman, formerly of Calcutta, and now Secretary of the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railway, will carry much and deserved weight with Calcutta investors—especially as the projected tramways (the first of a promised series) are virtually the completion of the railway of which Mr. Norman is the able Secretary. And we observe that Sir Bartle Frere, and indeed, all the best authorities on Scinde matters, are unanimous in approving of this undertaking.

THE Times of Tuesday publishes the following letter from Mr. Roper Lethbridge on Mr. Cross's disingenuous speech at Bolton:—

"Sir,—The Under Secretary of State for India, speaking at Bolton last night, has thought fit to exhumate a mischievous controversy that every true friend of India must wish finally buried. The measure known as the Ilbert Bill has been definitely abandoned by Lord Ripon and the Government of India; and in its place a Bill has been passed which, while it slightly extends the jurisdiction of an infinitesimal fraction of the native judiciary, very largely extends the so-called 'anomalous' privileges of the Englishman in India. Surely this has been done by Lord Ripon and the Government on good and solid grounds, and not merely to calm, as Mr. Cross says, 'the unworthy fears of some of their excitable fellow-countrymen in India?' As a representative in this country of the European and Anglo-Indian Defence Association of India, I beg to protest most emphatically against this grossly unfair misrepresentation of the nature of the compromise which has been arrived at in India between Lord Ripon, Mr. Ilbert, and one or two of their friends, on the one side, and the whole of the rest of the Anglo-Indian community, official as well as non-official, on the other. That compromise has been frankly accepted by the Anglo-Indian community—though founded on no wish or suggestion of theirs—as a fair, honourable, and permanent settlement of the question at issue. But what can be thought of the stability of the arrangement, or of the bona fides of the Government in making it, when the Under Secretary for India speaks of it publicly as a concession to 'unworthy' fears, and makes a long speech which is simply nothing else than a defence of the original Bill?

Further, Mr. Cross says:—"In pursuance of the promise of this Liberal policy, native gentlemen have come over here and entered upon a course of study such as they were told would fit them for higher judicial posts in India. They have been received at our Universities on even terms with the gilded youth of England. They passed through their education course, and again, on equal terms with the gentlemen of England, they took their seats at our halls and schools of learning. In process of time they were called to the English Bar. They went to India, too, and entered the covenanted service of the nation. They rose to high positions through hard and diligent work, and became magistrates in the great cities. They became eligible for the position of district magistrate or sessions judge; and then the law told them, notwithstanding the declaration of 1833, notwithstanding the Proclamation of the Queen, that they shall not be allowed to fulfil the functions attaching to their office. And why? Because, and only because, of their difference of colour."

The whole of this long and elaborate description of the career of an Indian native magistrate—so well calculated to arouse the sympathies of Mr. Cross's hearers—is simply a suggestio falsi; for it clearly conveys the false impression that the native magistrates, to whom criminal jurisdiction over Europeans was to be given by the Ilbert Bill, must belong to the class whose career is here described. In August last Mr. Bright made the same mistake in his speech at Willis's Rooms. But Mr. Cross must surely have learnt by this time that the class of native magistrates so eloquently described by him is an absolutely insignificant one at the present time in point of numbers—there are exactly nine such gentlemen in all India—and is a dwindling one, being unlikely to receive any new recruits. The native magistrates who would have been affected by the Ilbert Bill—and who will receive an extended jurisdiction under Act III. of 1884 so long as they are district magistrates or sessions judges, under certain conditions—will be, before long, almost exclusively the 'statutory civilians'—that is, native gentlemen appointed in India under a system of patronage, without examination. As the first appointment of this kind was only made in 1878, no one can say as yet how the system is likely to work; but Mr. Cross knows full well that the 'statutory civilians' have been described by the Judicial Commissioner of Oude, as often 'saturated with caste and religious prejudices, and ignorant of European modes of thought and feeling, and not to be trusted to hold the scales fairly.' This, at any rate, is not the sort of native magistrate depicted by Mr. Cross last night at Bolton.—Yours obediently,

"ROPER LETHBRIDGE.

THE following obituary of the week is taken from the Times of India:—

Captain J. Peyton, Pension Establishment, Hyderabad Contingent.

THE following is the Calcutta Freight Market report corrected up to 2 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 15:—

"A very meagre amount of business has been transacted since our last issue. The principal feature in the market has been that of three regular steamship liners, engaging rapeseed for March, April, and May, loading at prices considerably in advance of present rates, but still at what would have been considered very low in previous years, showing that these lines do not have much faith in any great improvement in our market. Spot transactions have been almost nil. Only two steamers have berthed during the week, two sailing vessels fixed for London, two berthed for New York, and three accepted country employment at very low figures. Our unfixed tonnage has decreased to 37,000 tons."

WITH respect to the Indigo Market, Messrs. William Moran & Co., report as follows:—

"Four public sales have been held during the past week, at which 3,435 chests were disposed of. Prices have remained steady for all qualities, and there is little change to report in the value of any descriptions, but the market closes rather weaker for middling consuming lots. The total quantity now disposed of is about 134,000 maunds, and the season will probably terminate by the end of next week."

THE following is Messrs. Thomas Watson & Co.'s Tea Report:—

"At the Public Sales held on Jan. 10, out of 9,699 packages offered, 9,574 packages were sold. There was a good demand, and prices were firmer."

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

THE following is the official summary of the reports of the Agricultural Department on the state of the weather and prospects of the crops throughout India, for the week ending Jan. 8:—

"There has been slight rain in four districts of the Madras Presidency and at Bangalore, Rawalpindi, Kyoukphyoo, and in three of the Eastern districts of Bengal; none has fallen elsewhere. Harvesting continues in the Madras Presidency and Mysore, and standing crops are in good condition. Rabi prospects are generally favourable in the Bombay Presidency, but the river continues low in Sind, and the area under kharif in Kurrachee has been smaller than usual, owing to scarcity of water. In the Berars, cotton-picking and the kharif harvest are approaching completion. Excessive cold has slightly damaged the crops in parts of Hyderabad. In Central India and Rajputana prospects remain favourable; but rain is needed in parts for the rabi. In the Punjab, North Western Provinces, and Oudh, and Central Provinces, prospects are good, but the crops are generally in need of rain. In Bengal the rice harvest is nearly completed, and except in Eastern Bengal, Orissa, and a few other places has yielded a very short outturn. Rain is much required for the rabi crops in Behar and Chota Nagpore; elsewhere, they are in fair condition. In Assam and British Burma reaping is still in progress, and prospects are satisfactory. The public health remains unchanged, fever and small-pox being prevalent; but the former is abating, and the latter severe only in one district of the North Western Provinces. Prices continue high in Bengal, and are rising slightly in some parts of the North Western Provinces."

TELEGRAPHIC INTELLIGENCE.

THE following is the usual weekly telegram from the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, dated Hyderabad, Feb. 3:—

"Sir Donald Stewart arrived here yesterday morning, and the Viceroy in the afternoon at half-past four o'clock. He was received by the Nizam and his principal officers and nobles. There was a guard of honour of the Nizam's regular troops. The road, which was decorated for four miles, was held by troops from the station to the Bolarum Residency, a distance of twelve miles. The people turned out in thousands.

"Mr. Grant Duff arrived to-day. This evening there is a party at the Residency, the Viceroy, Lady Ripon, the Staff, Generals Stewart and Roberts, Baron Hubner, and Mr. Grant Duff being present.

"To-morrow the Viceroy and the Nizam will exchange visits.

"This is a city of anxieties. The people look forward to a change in the hope of something better; the nobles are divided by faction, and careless of the public good. Hyderabad is the Deccan in a stronger sense than Paris is France. The city is rich because all the officials live here. The country is poorer than the poorest parts of Madras and Bombay, because left to underlings. What is required is a concentration of authority, and a firm and consistent support of the Resident and of one native official by the Government. The parties are two, that of Salar Jung the younger, and of the Peshkar and Khorshed Jah; the former represents the foreign element brought in by the late Minister, the latter the Deccani employés.

"Their antagonism, which is violent and reckless, is illustrated by an article in the Calcutta Statesman, which reached here last evening, and which has caused an enormous sensation. The article states that Mr. Gorst can apply to Major Gough, Sir Salar's secretary, who can convince him of an intrigue with members of the Queen's Household. It is also illustrated by a rumour that Khorshed Jah had raised a question of the Nizam's legitimacy. It is reported that it has been discovered that Sir Salar's Budgets of late years were fictitious. The deficit is reported to be four crores of rupees. The chief items are—railway debt, one crore thirty lakhs; due to collectors of revenue, one crore and a quarter; excess of expenditure in 1882, sixty lakhs, in a total revenue of three-and-a-quarter crores. Reductions are not possible without causing inefficiency.

"Fears are expressed about a Prince so young having a Minister under twenty-one. Great anxiety is everywhere expressed as to the action of the Government. If Khorshed Jah be appointed he will be too powerful, and it is feared that he may gratify private feuds. No other noble is possible, because he would submit to no other. The feeling is very strong against any stranger. The Peshkar, as the oldest and best-known official, is popular with the people."

"CALCUTTA, FEB. 3.—The Ilbert Bill controversy is now rapidly dying out, and in a few days people will have ceased to speak or think about a subject which has occupied so much of their attention for exactly twelve months. The following extracts from the Indian Press may be taken as fairly representing the view of the different classes of the community on the modified measure.

"The Pioneer, one of the more moderate organs of the Anglo-Indian opposition, says:—

"And now finis coronat opus. The many months of controversy, the bitter class feuds, the disgraceful and lamentable estrangement of the Viceroy from the European community, the unenviable notoriety of the most conspicuous faction that English administration in India has ever witnessed—these constitute the price paid for an unsubstantial reform which everybody knows to be a sham, and which every class in whose interests it was devised denounces with direct condemnation, or damns with faint praise. If the Viceroy can really delude himself into the belief that the principle of the original measure has been saved, we must assure him that he is the solitary victim of a ludicrous hallucination. Everyone knows that it is not so, and by no amount of sophistry can the patent unreality of such a contention be concealed. Let us hope the painful lesson of the last ten months may not remain unlearned by Lord Ripon and his colleagues."

"The Hindoo Patriot, one of the few native papers which supported the Bill without vituperation or scurrility, writes:—

"We have written so much on the subject that to say more would be to slay thrice slain. We stick to the opinion which we have over and over again expressed, that the game has not been worth the candle. If the Government was not strong enough to carry out its programme, it should not have raised the question at all. The course of affairs was running smoothly enough; the feeling between Europeans and natives was one of friendliness and cordiality, and the cause of good government has by no means gained by disturbing it. We do not blame Lord Ripon for this untoward result; he was new to the country, and could not be expected to gauge the feelings of his countrymen in India on the subject. We are convinced that if the Government had acted with due discretion and tact, there would have been no rupture or disturbance of feeling among Anglo-Indians. It was the manner of launching the Bill which provoked the European community, and once the ball was set rolling it could not be stopped. But for this we do not hold Lord Ripon personally responsible; the blame rests with his advisers."

"The Indian Mirror, one of the organs of the class of anti-English agitators, dismisses the measure in these words:—

"The new Act is neither fish, nor flesh, nor even good red herring. As a compromise it is neither satisfactory to, nor approved by, either of the two great parties interested in the affirmation or rejection of the principle, or of the policy. It is a simple piece of legislative patchwork calculated to hinder and confound one in the administration of criminal justice, or rather to revive that immunity from punishment which the crimes and offences of the dominant race practically enjoyed before 1872."

"An official note on the subject of Rupee loans, written by Mr. Westland, Comptroller General, has been published in the Calcutta Statesman. The practical effect of the document is to show that by attempting to borrow in the Calcutta market instead of in London, the Government has thrown away a sum of 7,000,000 sterling out of 26,000,000, borrowed in the last ten years. Mr. Westland proves by figures that there is very little absorbing power in India; that the small margin in India is used only to tide over the time that intervenes between the issue of a loan in India and its gradual passage to England, and that India has been really depending upon the power of England to absorb her Rupee loans, a power which, unfortunately, is beginning to fail. A more powerful or more telling indictment has seldom been brought against recent Indian financial administration.

"A meeting to honour the memory of Keshub Chunder Sen was held here on Wednesday. Dr. Hunter presided, and leading representatives of all classes attended. It was resolved to raise subscriptions for a memorial. The form of the memorial will be decided hereafter.

"The Government has published the reports of preliminary surveys of some new and important railway lines. The first of these, intended to connect Assam with the sea, will run from Chittagong through Cachar to Dibrughur, with a branch to Gowhatti. The total length, 736 miles, is estimated to cost 6,46,73,000 rupees. A line is also projected from Mogul Serai, near Benares, through Chota Nagpore and Orissa to Pooree, with a branch to Gya. The length will be about 652 miles and the cost about 6,82,00,000 rupees. The latter line will pass through extensive coalfields, and will afford a short route for pilgrim traffic between the North West and Pooree.

"The quarrel between Nepal and Thibet is still unsettled. The Nepaulese were preparing energetically for war, but in deference to a representation from the Indian Government, they have agreed to suspend operations pending reference to China, which Power, it is hoped, will compel its feudatory, Thibet, to grant the demand of Nepal. The prohibition against the emigration of labourers from Nepal has been removed for the present, to the great relief of the Darjeeling tea planters, who depend largely on that country for the supply of labour."

The following additional telegram, giving a graphic account of the installation of the Nizam, is from the same source, dated Hyderabad, Feb. 5:—

"Yesterday the Nizam and the Viceroy exchanged visits. At Lord Ripon's visit a Durbar was held in the palace. Busheer Ood Dowlah, in the course of the Durbar, usurped the seat of Khorshed Jah as Premier Noble, but the Nizam prevented a scandal by ordering a fresh chair to be placed at the head of the line of nobles.

"To-day Busheer did not attend, the installation ceremony, which was most effective. Order was everywhere well maintained, the road being kept by the Nizam's Lancers, and the streets lined by the Nizam's regulars and irregulars. The latter's uniforms and shakoes, except in colour, reminded one of pictures of Bussy's Sepoys. The Durbar was held in a fine, open hall, the roof being supported on Moorish arches, and at the back was a dais covered with yellow cloth with rich brocade. On each side, at the back, which was of orange cloth, with a Persian couplet in gold, were two gilded chairs under a brocade canopy, supported by four silver pillars, with gold scrolls in high relief. When the Governor of Madras and Generals Stewart and Roberts had taken their seats, the procession entered, the Viceroy and the Nizam being seated in front of the dais. The Viceroy addressed the Nizam to the following effect:—It gave him, he said, great gratification to be present to declare, on behalf of the Queen-Empress, the Nizam invested with full powers of governing his State. His Highness's wish that the Viceroy should visit Hyderabad was proof of his attachment to the British Government, and he (Lord Ripon) was the first Viceroy to visit the Deccan. His presence there marked the intimate ties which united the ruler of this great State to the Government of the Queen, and Her Majesty's deep interest in the welfare of the Nizam. His Excellency made a graceful allusion to the late Minister, during which the present Salar Jung affected to wipe his eyes, and then went on to offer practical advice. He said:—

"Look to your finances, for careless and extravagant finance means first, heavy taxation, and then ruin and poverty to the people, with increasing interest, and final bankruptcy; while reasonable economy and just and equal taxation mean ever-increasing prosperity and expanding wealth. A good revenue system is the foundation of good government in India, and I trust that your Highness will keep strict watch over the honest and equal administration of justice. Pure justice is the brightest jewel that can adorn a coronet; let it shine forth on yours."

"The Viceroy proceeded to say that His Highness's task was great and arduous, he ruling ten millions of men, whose welfare depended on his wisdom, industry, and self-denial, and entreated him not to look with vain satisfaction on the outward how of power, or upon wealth and splendour, or upon submission and flattery, nor to feel a pride in the extent of his territory, resources, and population; and to avoid the temptations to which youth was specially exposed. He should have nobler aims, if he would make a name among the Princes of India, which he could only win by the justice of his rule and the prosperity of his people. That people's loyalty could not be doubted, and it rested with His Highness to deepen it into the most precious possession of a ruler. 'The care of those subjects,' continued the Viceroy, 'has not been entrusted to you by God that you may make them the instruments of your pleasure or of your pride. He has given them into your care, that you may rule and guide them for His glory and their welfare. Let it be your ambition that when you, too, are gathered to your fathers, men should say, "He left his people the better for his rule."'

"The Viceroy went on to promise the Nizam the support of the Government, and to declare that the maintenance of the native States was a cardinal point of British policy, and their existence of the greatest advantage to British interests. The Queen would watch the Nizam's career with strong, unflinching interest; therefore, let him not disappoint her hopes. Lord Ripon then expressed his own earnest wishes for the Nizam's welfare, and led him to the dais, where each took his seat.

"After the Viceroy had declared the Nizam installed by command of the Queen-Empress, Colonel Henderson proclaimed the Nizam's titles, and Mr. Durand read a Persian translation of the Viceroy's speech; the Nizam reading a brief reply. His Highness said that the advice his Excellency had given him he accepted with the greatest sincerity; and then proceeded to say that he would always consult the wishes of the Government, and asked the Viceroy to take an early opportunity of conveying to Her Majesty the sentiments of friendship and devotion he entertained towards the Imperial Throne.

"The Viceroy invested his Highness with a splendid jewelled sword, but by accident it was buckled on the wrong side. The natives were greatly concerned at this bad omen. Khilluts were given by Salar Jung, the Peshkar, and Khorshed Jah; the Governor of Madras and Generals Stewart and Roberts offered their congratulations; and after attar and pan, the ceremony concluded.

"Just before the Durbar began, the Nizam's servants changed the chairs of Salar Jung and the Peshkar. No open statement of the reason for this was made, but it afterwards became known that the Nizam had appointed Salar Jung Minister. The Government consented, because the expressed wishes of the Nizam are to be respected. This is regarded in the city as a victory for the strangers. A Council of six will be appointed. The arrangement is weak to a degree, for the Nizam is only seventeen and a-half years and the Dwan twenty years and four months, and wholly in the hands of a clever set of men from Northern India.

"The incident in yesterday's Durbar, leading to the absence of so great a noble as Busheer Ood Dowlah, proves what divisions will distract the Council. Salar Jung is proud, hasty, and overbearing, without experience (his father having died on Jan. 8, 1882), and has not the qualities to conciliate parties. There is, therefore, expectation of trouble. The general report of a debt of four crores is confirmed, but probably this will now be denied or covered up. After the Durbar, Salar Jung was told to wait on the Viceroy, with whom he was closeted for two hours.

"There is a banquet to-night in the Palace, and all the city is illuminated, as are also the cantonments and the Hossein Sagar Tank.

"A report has got abroad that the Resident would resign, but it is denied in the best quarters. The only possible policy for the Government of India is to select the strongest man available, and to support him to the uttermost. There is now no authority, for everywhere there are factions arriving for money, power, and place. If the State is to be saved, it must be saved by a powerful Resident."

THE following was received from the same correspondent in the course of the week :—

"Great preparations were made at Madras to receive the Viceroy. The opinion of the Europeans was adverse to the visit; for the native demonstrations cause in Madras a feeling like that which has been exhibited in Calcutta during the past year. The natives, led by Sir Tangore Madhava Rao, Dewan, presented several addresses, deputations attending from some half-dozen towns.

"One result of the agitation was that the English-speaking section of the Chamber of Commerce presented a plain-spoken address, expressing a desire for more frequent visits from the Viceroy. They further requested that Buckingham Canal should be an Imperial, not a provincial work. The repair of the harbour was declared to be a matter of urgent necessity; and the Chamber remarked that if this had been a private enterprise it would not have waited two years for the repairs. The Chamber further urged that a guarantee was indispensably necessary for the railways; that a reduction of the Rs. 200. licence tax in Madras to should be decreed; that the publication of the disposal of all local funds should be directed; and that the cash reserves should be applied to cheapen money.

"Hyderabad will be en fête to-morrow, when Lord Ripon will be received. All the stations on the Nizam's line, 121 miles long, are decorated; and the road from the station to the Residency is gay with arches, streamers, and flowers. A grand display of fireworks will be made at the Residency.

"The Viceroy has decided that Ameer-I-Kabeer shall be recognised as premier noble on all public occasions. A deputation, consisting of Nawab Salor Jung and another noble, on the part of the Government, and Major Trevor and Colonel Dobbs on the part of the Resident, have gone to Raichoor, on the border, 200 miles distant, to meet the Viceroy, who will arrive to-morrow, at four in the afternoon. Satisfaction is general at his Excellency's visit.

"Local feeling runs high on the question of the appointment of a new Minister, as to which nothing is yet known.

OUR TREASURES IN COAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—On Sept. 27, 1882, a letter in your paper called the attention of a sleeping Government to the enormous value of a coalfield, thirty-five miles East of the Kutni Railway Station. Government now acknowledges its value, which is estimated at five millions sterling (£5,000,000!), but wishes to saddle anybody, who may desire to excavate the excellent coal, with the task of making 350 miles of railroad!

Can anything be more preposterous? Thirty-five miles of rail are required to connect the coalfield with the East Indian Railway, but Government requires the construction of ten times this length. Foreigners will say that this must be for the purpose of preventing any competition. There are very few firms in the world who can undertake and construct in a limited time 350 miles of railroad.

If any of your readers should be inclined to challenge my statement, let them read page 29 of the Allahabad Pioneer Mail of the 9th ultimo. I would suggest that the editor's article be republished for the benefit of your readers.

India wants the coal, and wants it quickly. Let Government offer the field for five years for a royalty of say one shilling a ton; numbers of competitors will offer to excavate, carry to Kutni, and sell on these terms. Five millions of tons will be thrown on the market, and will speedily bring down the price of coal, and consequently, the price of firewood, which is required for cooking the food of all classes. Cowdung can then be used for manure. The knowledge that the contract will cease in five years will stimulate the energies of the coal-diggers.—Your obedient servant,

MR. MACFARLANE, M.P., ON DR. HUNTER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ENGLISHMAN."

SIR,—May I say a few words in the way of warning an expostulation before leaving this country for England this evening? Seeing that it was practically impossible to carry the original Ilbert Bill, the Government has modified and remodified it until it has become unrecognisable. The Government has attained the position desired by the American politician, who wished to be understood to take up such an attitude as "left him fronting south by north." We all know what was the avowed object of the Bill. It was to remove an anomaly, which was objected to by half dozen, or a score, or a hundred, it does not much matter which number; and how does it stand now? The Government has conceded the point that Englishmen shall be tried, in all cases involving more than nominal punishments, by a jury of which a majority shall be Europeans. I assume that the Government would not have conceded this, unless it had been satisfied that justice, or policy, or both, required it. In order that a few natives may sentence Europeans, for they are not to try them, all European judges and magistrates, except the lower grades, are deprived of the power they have hitherto enjoyed (?) And this is done to avoid an administrative inconvenience, the existence of which is denied by those who ought to know best. But I do not want to argue, for it is obvious enough to all that the last state of this Bill is worse, in many respects, than the first. Out of the frying pan into the fire is far too feeble an illustration. Out of a tea cup into the Atlantic, is no exaggeration. Mr. Ameer Ali has given notice that he will claim the same rights for natives, and what will the Government say? Will it refuse, and on what ground? Will it say to the natives "You do not need this protection, but Europeans do?" Do they admit that Europeans do need it? If they do, they yield all that has been contended for. Or will they say "We do not admit it, but we have given it because of their importunity." That was what the unjust judge did. Do they believe that it will work, or do they concede it because they know that it will not? Is it done in order that, by and bye, having carried the point that a native shall sit on the bench, while Englishmen are trying a European, they will be able to show much real administrative inconvenience that the jury will be abstracted and the other thing will remain? The natives fear, or say they fear, that an English jury will not convict a European. If you give the native the same kind of jury, viz., a majority of his own countrymen, will not the European say the same? You do not intend to give the native the same mode of trial because he does not require it. It must be upon this ground that you refuse, for you could not refuse if you believed that he could not secure a fair trial without it. Do Europeans want to be tried by a jury of their own countrymen, and does the jury of their own countrymen want to try them? I do not think they do. They were content as it was, but Mr. Gupta was not. In order to satisfy his aspirations, which are now shared by a good many, who, since the controversy began, have rallied round him, you have created a far bigger race distinction than there was before. As I have said before, in order that a dozen, or a score, or a hundred natives may, in some far away future, sentence the Europeans, they are not, by your own act, to be allowed to be tried. You create a new difference, not between certain members of the Civil Service, but between Europeans and the whole native population of India. Both Europeans and natives would rather be put back into their original positions, and I ask at the head of this letter, if it is too late? I foresee nothing but discord, increasing discord, in the future, if this Bill, as it stood originally, or as it stands now, is passed. Cannot the Government see that this Bill is worse than no Bill? Natives are sick of it. Europeans are sick of it, the Government here must be sick of it, and the Government at home will not be grateful to the authors of a new and unnecessary source of trouble at the next election. The Government had much trouble in 1880 with a Bill called "The Compensation for Disturbance Bill," but in the Ilbert Bill there is no "compensation for disturbance" and I fear, for I am a Liberal, that it will do much harm. One word before I conclude upon the way in which the controversy upon this Bill has been contended. An official member of the Governor General's Council has debated it in the Times newspaper, from a partisan view. What sort of freedom remains to this member in case amendments are proposed, inconsistent with the view to which he has pledged himself in writing? And if it is open to one member of Council to do this, on one side, why should not others on the other side? Would that have been acceptable to Government? Or may members of Council only write upon one side whatever their convictions may be? Why should not his Honour the Lieutenant Governor have written against the Bill, and why should not the Viceroy have replied in the Times? A pretty spectacle would that have been. The public can only hope that the partisan writer will abstain from voting if a critical division should be taken, for they are entitled to disbelieve the judicial character of the vote under the circumstances.

MR. SEYMOUR KEAY IN CALCUTTA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ENGLISHMAN."

SIR,—Allow me to correct a misconception which from your reader of to-day you appear to entertain. On the occasion of the recent meeting held by me, in the Town Hall, no orders whatever were given "that any Europeans entering should be ejected by the police." As far as I know, every one of the few Europeans who came was admitted, while the Europeans generally very naturally stay away from a meeting declared by advertisement to be convened for "natives of India." Even this declaration in the advertisement was only inserted in deference to the opinion of high officials here, some of whom seemed to anticipate a collision with the natives, if Europeans were invited also. Personally I should have liked if all classes had attended, including the members of the Defence Association, who, I believe, are high-minded political controversialists, and not bullies, as you and some of the police would seem to imagine.

Calcutta, 5th January.

J. SEYMOUR KEAY.

P. S.—As to your remark about a "large amount of humanitarian business" being done "on commercial conditions," &c., I must, of course, assume that you have not seen the prospectus for India, which was duly sent you for publication upwards of a month ago, which distinctly declares that my services to the Indian Reform Association are entirely honorary in every respect, I myself paying all my own travelling expenses, and even those of public meetings. In short, I give to the Association, but receive nothing in any shape or form from it, an arrangement which you will admit is of a very uncommercial character indeed.

J. S. K.

[We have the authority of the Police for stating that they received instructions from Mr. Seymour Keay to prevent the entrance of Europeans into his meeting. In one case a European who was present was actually threatened with ejection—although it is but just to state that the threat was conveyed in the most courteous terms—and was permitted to remain only on account of the accident of his being a journalist.—As to the other point referred to by Mr. Seymour Keay, we have no recent information as to his commercial relations which the Indian Reform Association beyond that which is supplied in the letter which we now publish. No assertion, therefore, on the subject, has been made in the columns of this journal.—ED. Engl.]

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ENGLISHMAN."

SIR,—Many natives who went to hear Mr. Seymour Keay at the Town Hall on Thursday last, were greatly disappointed to hear him condemn the British administration of India. Every man who is acquainted with the internal condition of India before the beginning of the British administration must be heartily thankful to the English for their successful administration of this country. It is a pity that Mr. S. Keay made no mention of the invasions of the freebooting Maharattas in Bengal, when he made allusions to its present peace and prosperity. It is a common saying among old men and women in Bengal that the peoples of this country must be thankful to the sahibs for their Ram Rajatto (the period of Ram Rajatto being generally known as the golden age). Why was the Nawab of Lucknow dispossessed of his ancestral throne? Simply because the Nawab's subjects suffered so much that the humane British Government took compassion upon them and made them Company's subjects. Why was Bengal taken from the hands of the tyrant Nawab, the author of the Black Hole tragedy—our lasting shame? Because there was the reign of anarchy in Bengal, and every native ought to express deep and heartfelt thanks to the British for having freed them from the clutches of the tyrant Nawab and taken them under their protection. Space would fail me were I to mention instances of the above kind. Suffice to say that the tales of our grandmothers can, so some extent, illustrate the horrors of the pre-English days.

The meeting above alluded to was attended mostly by school boys and by some stray landholders, and a few educated natives. Mr. Keay should not have spoken in such a strain of the most useful class of public servants, the high paid English officials. India would not have prospered so well, had it been left only to the management of officials the majority of whom are natives.

Calcutta, Jan. 5.

HURRY DASS DUTT.

MR. ATKINS AND MR. J. K. CROSS, M.P.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Mr. J. K. Cross, M.P., when addressing his constituents at Bolton, last Thursday, on the Ilbert Bill, is reported to have said that the object of the Bill was intended to abolish a disqualification arising from that attaching to race, and to replace it by a qualification attaching to fitness, and that in pursuance of promises that had been made, natives from India had come to England, and after going through a course of education, and passing the necessary examinations, went to India and entered the covenanted service, in which they rose to high position, and became district magistrates and sessions judges; but then, the law told them that they were not to fulfil the functions attaching to their office, because of the difference of their colour. It was this disqualification the Bill removed, and conferred on native district magistrates and session judges, and on them only, the same powers their English colleagues enjoyed. He also said that the right to claim a jury in session courts, now existing in several provinces, would be extended to European British subjects throughout India. These safeguards, he hoped, would calm the unworthy fears of some of their excitable fellow-countrymen in India.

Mr. Cross is the first European—so far as I am aware—in India or England who has declared that natives of India are disabled by law from holding office on account of their colour, but I suppose the reason I have not heard it before is because it is not true. What Englishmen in India have said is—"Let the Government place the natives in any position, but as we do not enjoy the privileges of a jury the same as our countrymen in England, and as we do not consider that all the natives the Government will appoint will possess the necessary qualifications to fit them for the power it is intended to bestow upon them, we desire that a British-born subject shall be allowed the privilege—if he chooses to exercise it—of claiming the right of trial by one of his own countrymen." Mr. Cross desired his audience to believe that the extended jurisdiction would be conferred only on those natives who visited England and passed the necessary examinations, and on them only. He suppressed the fact that even by the present modifications natives who have never left India, and who have been given appointments in the covenanted service without passing any examination, will subsequently be allowed to exercise criminal jurisdiction over Europeans. He also declared that the jury system exists in several provinces in India, whereas juries only exist in a few of the principal towns, and the distance between some of these towns is about 800 miles. His allusion to the unworthy fears of his countrymen in India is a cowardly taunt such as he would hardly dare to use toward any body of working men in England who simply asked for such laws that would secure them protection without imposing disabilities on others.

It is much to be regretted that any official connected with the India Office should make statements that are incorrect and misleading; the only excuse for such conduct must be that the measure requiring support is so faulty that it necessitates a resort to methods not usually pursued by honourable gentlemen.

The Government of India every year sends out engine-drivers, stokers, and mechanics to India to work on the State railways in that country. If those men are married, and children are born to them in India, those children will not be allowed to compete with natives of the country on equal terms for appointments in the public service. The declared policy of the Indian Government is not to give any appointment to the sons of those they send to India—however well qualified they may be—so long as a native is available. The Government will assist natives to come to England to study at Cirencester College, and will support them handsomely until those studies are completed; but it will render no assistance to the son of the engine-driver or mechanic that is sent out from England on a salary of £8 or £10 per month. Neither the colour nor the nationality of the native is a disqualification for him, but it is for the son of the English working-man that is inveigled out to India.—Yours obediently,

Feb. 6, 1884.

THE BOMBAY NATIVE PRESS ON THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

ONE of the several propositions put at the meeting and carried out was that, "if the deprivation of the landlords of their just rights inherited from generation to generation, confirmed by the Permanent Settlement, and consecrated by a century of British rule, be deemed essential to the welfare of the tenantry, the Government be solicited to consider the justice of allowing the zemindars to surrender their estates on receiving such compensation in money as will, when invested in Government securities, produce a permanent return equal to their present income." The proposition has a bit of irony in it, but nevertheless, it sufficiently expresses the result to which the passage of the Tenancy Bill will inevitably lead. The wonder of it is that the action of the Government with regard to the zemindars as the landlords of Bengal, and with regard to itself as the State landlord in this Presidency, is very grossly inconsistent. The condition of the Deccan peasantry was reported to be sufficiently wretched to justify modifications of the land revenue and survey system. Yet, while the Legislature provides in the Land Improvement Act, which recently became law, that improvements effected on landed property by means of wells shall not be taken into consideration at the time of the survey, the benefit, secured to the cultivator by the provision, is taken away by a clause, embodied in the same Act, which provides that no assessment shall be varied, because the increased value of the land by means of wells was taken into consideration in fixing it. Why should the Government try to deprive the zemindars of the freedom of action, secured to them by the terms of the Permanent Settlement, when it is so jealous of its own freedom of action towards its own tenantry?—Indu Prakas.

SELECTED ARTICLES.

MR. SEYMOUR KEAY'S MEETING.

MR. SEYMOUR KEAY is an eminently astute commercial man. It is in this character that he has made for himself a reputation which, it is pleasant to believe, has materially benefited him in several parts of India. And it was quite in accordance with his well-earned reputation that, in addressing the meeting of English speaking natives who assembled at his summons in the Calcutta Town Hall, on Thursday afternoon, he should have delayed sending round the hat until he had quite finished the sermon. It was only after he had assured the Bengali zemindar that his conduct as a landlord was a model for imitation that the native raja was asked to testify his gratitude for the patronage so kindly bestowed upon him by Mr. Seymour Keay. It was a mere trifling detail—the suggestion that the gratitude should take the form of a payment made into the Delhi and London Bank. But it will be interesting to know the exact value—in rupees, or it may possibly be in pice—of Mr. Seymour Keay's appeals to the mingled cupidity and vanity of the native Bengal capitalist. The actual statement of figures—especially if their accuracy be vouched for by the cashier of the bank—will be looked for with interest. It will probably be found that Mr. Seymour Keay's Bombay experiences are not of so much service to him, in Bengal, as might, in his own interests, have been desired. He will probably find that the rich Bengali Babu, however enthusiastically appreciative he may be of Mr. Keay's sympathetic eloquence, is not so easily induced to invest in "futures" as is the Bombay Parsi. It is Mr. Seymour Keay's misfortune that the philanthropic commodity which he has to offer in return for the rupees of the distinguished native gentlemen by whom he was surrounded on Wednesday is not ready for delivery on payment of cash. And thus the commercial conditions on which he proposes to do a large amount of humanitarian business are not adapted to Bengal Society. It is quite possible that when Mr. Seymour Keay obtains the subscription list from the cashier of the Delhi and London Bank, he may find himself able to realise the position of the Yankee field-preacher who, having passed his hat round, after his most touching discourse, had it eventually returned to him with nothing in it—"I thank God," said he, "that I have got my hat back from this congregation."

Mr. Seymour Keay naturally felt a little laudable reluctance to permit those who have the misfortune to be his countrymen to witness an example of the peculiar processes by which he endeavours to persuade native gentlemen to invest their money by payments into the Delhi and London Bank. There are some sentences in the Town Hall lecture which Mr. Seymour Keay would probably have hesitated to utter had he been in the presence of a few of the members of the Defence Association. It was for that reason that Mr. Seymour Keay—whose careful forethought is one of the most beautiful traits in his character—took the precaution to order that any European entering the Calcutta Town Hall should be ejected by the police! The date of the meeting, January 3, 1884, ought to be carefully noted by all future historians of India. It marks the first occasion, since the British occupation of the country commenced, when an Englishman has been subjected to the insult of being liable to be ejected from a public meeting in the Calcutta Town Hall—a meeting, be it noted, called by a European—simply because he was not lucky enough to have Indian blood in his veins! Mr. Seymour Keay is rapidly making history. It remains to be seen whether the European population will consider it desirable to have the presence, in their drawing-rooms or their counting-houses, of a gentleman who is afraid to allow them to listen, in the Calcutta Town Hall, to his endeavours to stir up a native agitation against the British administration.

For no more mischievous agitator, were only the power of the Town Hall lecturer equal to his declared intentions, ever entered India than this same Mr. Seymour Keay. When he invites the natives of India to petition for the reduction of the cost of administration in this country, he asks them to do that which, if their prayer were granted, would be a curse and a scourge to themselves and their native land. If Mr. Seymour Keay is capable of understanding any figures other than those contained in the balance-sheet of a Haidarabad cotton-mill, he ought to know that the English in India are selling the commodity of good government, which is absolutely essential to the well-being of any people, at a cheaper rate than that at which it is sold in any other part of the world. The only misfortune is that India is not able—at the present market rates—to purchase a larger amount of the same commodity at the same ratio of cost. If we could spend twice as much money as is at present being expended on the public administration of Indian affairs, and so secure the performance of double the amount of work which is being done in the development of the country, by the generally hard-working and conscientious servants who are labouring in the several departments, India would benefit more than if a million of Seymour Keay's performed a series of vapouring pilgrimages for a century.

This, it ought to be added, is perfectly well known to many of the cultured and intelligent native gentlemen who took part in the meeting of Wednesday. It is much to be desired that, in the interests of good government, they should refrain from countenancing the agitation which Mr. Seymour Keay is endeavouring to create. Every well-informed raja and chief in India will be willing to admit that, in the vast majority of cases, the prosperity of a given district is almost in exact proportion to the number of trained Englishmen who are engaged under Government in developing its resources. The monthly pay of these men is a flea-bite in comparison with the amount of increased material prosperity which is created by their presence.

All this is perfectly well understood in Calcutta and the other Presidency towns. It is in remote mofussil principalities, such as that of which Haidarabad is the capital, where communication with the centres of political intelligence is infrequent, that the glib chatter of Mr. Seymour Keay is regarded as having some political importance. It is very probably believed, in the metropolis of the Nizam, that the gentleman who proposes to benefit India by rendering it impossible to induce men of brains and industry to enter the Government service, has some Parliamentary or social influence in England which would enable him, were he sufficiently backed up by payments into the Delhi and London Bank, to carry his theories into practice. It is desirable, therefore, that, even in Haidarabad such a delusion should be dispersed. Mr. Gorst's journey to Haidarabad, which commences this evening, will, it is to be hoped, aid in dissipating the notion that Mr. Seymour Keay is a person of any political importance whatever. There is no better judge of the nature of Parliamentary influence than the able legislator who, for long years, has been the trusted adviser of the leaders of the Conservative party in reference to certain important questions affecting the discipline and the conduct of the business of political organisation. Mr. Seymour Keay's power, in regard to the movement of political life in England, is not, it is true, altogether inconsiderable. It is very nearly equal to that of the grey-haired valet who, when Mr. Gladstone is in residence in Downing-street, brings the Premier his morning cup of tea.

THE BENGAL RENT BILL.

MARK TWAIN tells us of a physician in the United States who was called in to treat a child for measles. The medical man gave a drug which was intended to produce fits, and he gave as his reason for this novel treatment that, whilst he did not fancy himself much on measles, he was "death on fits." Now those extremely advanced thinkers who philosophize on the land question, are, as a rule, satisfied if they reduce the woes under which tenants are supposed to suffer to the one disease which has lately acquired for itself a special name, "landlordism." They are "death of landlordism," and they seemingly do not much mind through what disease or stages they bring their patients, so long as they cure him of landlordism and its attendant evils. We have seen that the Lieutenant Governor has rightly considered that there is some risk in the transition of the patient from measles to fits, and has, in the interest of the ryot, tried to cure the other diseases which are the natural consequences of the attempt made to cure all the evils under which the ryot groans by severing his connexion so far as possible from the landlord, especially where the connexion involves obligation on the side of the ryot, and the exercise of proprietary rights on the side of the landlord.

We have tried to show that the curing of those evils cannot be accomplished without bringing in its train a host of others which would tend to effect both landlord and tenant injuriously, the chief of which is the introduction of subinfeudation even to a nominal extent. The principle of free transfer occupancy rights and the powers of subletting without the consent of the landlord being once admitted, no remedy can be devised to prevent the cultivator from following the dictates of his nature, and eventually coming into the clutches of the money-lender. The Lieutenant Governor's definition of tenure holders and ryots can only do so by making the money tender a tenure holder, and raising his status as regards the landlord whilst depriving him of certain privileges as against his subtenants. The strongest condemnation of the vagueness with which the authors of the Rent Bill have treated these important classes comes, as might naturally be expected, from those who will have to administer the law—the judicial officers. One officer, however, has faced the difficulty, and has given a definition of ryot and tenure-holder. That is Mr. Beames, the Commissioner of Bardwan.

Mr. Beames writes:—"When so many high authorities have declared themselves unable to define a term, it may seem presumptuous in me to offer any definition. It is, therefore, with some diffidence that I put forward the suggestion that the practice, or so to speak, the tacit understanding, on the subject amongst people generally should be taken as the basis of a definition."—"It is the intent with which the land is granted and taken that shows where to draw the line, and the intent is clearly understood in all cases by the parties at the time the transaction occurs." These are the words of a man who has derived his knowledge of the customs and habits of the people from years of observation; and the difficulty of defining a ryot does not strike him as insurmountable. It is naturally difficult to define accurately a creation of mere theory. It is not very difficult to define what one sees every day, and a thing with which a man's whole official life has been connected. Mr. Beames defines the ryot "as a person who takes land from a proprietor, tenure-holder, or under tenure-holder with the intent of cultivating it himself, or by hired labour, or of subletting it, and against whom the proprietor, &c., has the remedy specified in Chapter XIII. of this Act (distrain)" and he further defines a tenure-holder as "a person who takes land on lease from a proprietor with the intent of collecting the rent from the ryots, and against whom the proprietor has the remedy mentioned in Section XV of this Act (sale)." Not to weary our readers with technical details, it is sufficient to say that Mr. Beames has given a clear and concise definition of what every zemindar, every official, and every cultivator knows and understands by the terms ryot and tenure holder. Before leaving this chapter of the Rent Bill, however, it may be as well to point out an instance in which the farmers of this Bill have utterly ignored the interests of a large section of the very community for whose benefit they are supposed to be legislating, and of whose cause they assert themselves to be the most prominent champions. Nearly every year some 30,000 to 40,000 houses of ryots are washed away by the overflowing of the large rivers, and by the changes in their course. Hitherto, when landlord and tenant were free agents, this made very little difference in an estate. Those who were washed out of their houses were provided with lands in other villages, and the ryots who made room for them were, as a rule, compensated for the loss they might have sustained by the influx of those people. All this will now be changed, and every year these ryots will either have to leave the country or to make such terms as they can with those occupancy ryots who may happen to have their dwelling situated in a place free from inundation, and who will undoubtedly try and screw as much out of them as they can. The landlord will naturally concern himself no longer for the well-being of these men; for under no circumstances can he get any of the rent which otherwise he would have got from them, when they had settled down on land which he had obtained for them. And the occupancy ryots will, unless the change in the character of the people is more sudden than can be hoped for, even after the passing of this Act, drive the hardest bargain they can. The person who will suffer will be the landlord, who will be deprived of his just dues, and the unhappy cultivator who, by no fault of his own, has been driven out of house and home.

Now the raison d'être of this Bill is to benefit the ryot, or the actual cultivator of the soil. If it can be shown that in its main provisions its effect will be quite the reverse of beneficial, good reason will be created for the withdrawal and recasting of the measure. Sir Edward Sullivan, in writing of the free trade fetish in England, and answer it by saying:—"that for thirty years a school of doctrinaires has swayed the economic councils of the Empire; that sophisms have been preferred to experience, theories to facts, paradoxes to common sense." The school of doctrinaires has but recently been established in our midst. The example of the consequences of its teaching in England should be considered by every thinking man, before he allows, without a protest, a measure like the Rent Bill to be passed into law.

It will be sufficient to examine those clauses only which embody the new Radical principles introduced by the measure, and it is not difficult to demonstrate that not only will they work injuriously to the landlord, but that they will tend to enslave and degrade the cultivator. This established, it will follow that the Bill should not pass into law. Has already been discussed the theoretical nature of the basis upon which the Bill is founded. The idea of a Bill, professedly introduced for the benefit of the ryot, starting with the assumption that it is impossible to define what a ryot is, would, one would suppose, cause the profane to smile, and to think that the story of woe which has been so piteously told must after all be slightly mythical. At any rate the authors of the Rent Bill leave it purposely obscure as to who the person is about whom so much bother is being made. Should the Bill pass into law, those who have to administer the various divisions and districts will acquire a very lively knowledge of who and what the ryot is before very many years have gone by. They will learn his nature when they will have had to put into practice the provisions of a Bill founded on pure theory, and upon an insurmountable disregard of the opinions of officers whose experience of the people and their requirements has been acquired by years of work amongst the people. The Bengali student who gave the celebrated definition of the Bhil might aptly be pardoned in this case, and when every relation between landlord and tenant has been rendered tense and unpleasant; when the courts are filled with litigants, and when the work of every district officer is increased almost beyond his endurance, the unhappy official may be told with truth: "By this you may know the Rent Bill."

THE NIZAM'S NEW MINISTER.

THE Nizam has appointed the late Sir Salar Jung's eldest son to be his Dewan, or Chief Minister. His own proper name is Nawab Mir Laik Ali, but he lately assumed the title of Salar Jung, to which it will be hoped that he may add fresh lustre by continuing the policy of his predecessor. He possesses some special advantages for the task, owing to the careful education he has received at the hands of different English tutors. He possesses a creditable knowledge of our history, institutions, and literature, and speaks English with a fluency and even refinement seldom attained by Orientals. This last acquirement ought to prove of inestimable value in conducting delicate personal relations existing between his Court and the British Residency. From a very early age he was largely taken into the confidence of his father, initiated into State intrigues, and otherwise prepared for the important position which he was destined to occupy by what has become, from the precedent of a century, almost a right of inheritance in his family. The chief lessons, however, impressed upon him by his wise Mentor were to cherish and promote friendship with this country, and to introduce as much administrative and social reform as possible into the Nizam's dominions. In fact, to employ the language of English politics, he has been brought up in the principles of Constitutionalism as opposed to those of despotism. His policy is simple, and clearly defined. He has only to follow in his father's footsteps. To prevent a return to the condition of unrest prevalent a generation ago will, I have no doubt, be the earnest wish and effort of the new Minister, incited as he will be both by the laudable desire not to see his father's work undone, his policy reversed, and the reins of power transferred to the hands of a rival house. To aid him in his difficult task he will probably, for some time to come—for he is barely twenty-one years of age, and thus, perhaps, the youngest Prime Minister on record—require the advice of older and more experienced men. Such counsellors he will always find among his father's former friends at the English Residency, throughout India, as well as in this country. Both father and son have been our visitors, and went back vividly impressed with the unlimited power and resources of the people which had replaced their own in the supremacy of India. But they also carried back with them what is of equal importance—feelings of friendship and esteem for the many distinguished personages with whom they came into hospitable contact during their stay in this country. The colossal proportions and pleasing manners of Salar Jung the younger attracted attention at Court, and in society generally, during the season of 1882, and it was difficult to believe from his appearance, conversation, and deportment, that he was then only, according to our ideas, a boy under nineteen years of age.

The manoeuvres at the Bangalore Camp of Exercise have been carried out with great success. Sir Donald Stewart and General Hardinge arrived in camp on the 14th ult., and were present at all the movements of troops since that day.

The Maharaja of Mysore, while witnessing the manoeuvres on the 11th ult. had a fall from his horse and was severely cut about the face. His Highness consequently returned to Bangalore, but he is now progressing favourably.

The Ameer of Afghanistan will, it is stated, shortly pay a visit to Jellalabad.

It is reported from Peshawar that disturbances prevail amongst some of the Khyber tribes. Abdulla Nur, the head of the Khaki Khelt tribe, together with several of his relatives, have been murdered. The Atridis have also been interfering with the salt traffic in the Kohat Pass.

The Nizam of Hyderabad has laid the foundation stone of a new cotton spinning and weaving mill at Goolbarga on Jan. 11.

The Nizam's return to his capital on the 11th ult. was made the occasion of a brilliant demonstration by his loyal subjects.

Intelligence was received in Calcutta on the 10th ult. of a terrible mutiny which occurred on board the Swedish schooner Natal on the 16th November. The crew attempted to overpower the officers, and a desperate struggle ensued, in the course of which the second mate was murdered, and several of the crew shot by the captain's party. Ultimately the mutineers were overpowered and the vessel proceeded on her voyage to Australia.

An address was presented to Mr. Wilfrid Blunt by the Mahomedans of Allahabad on Jan. 11. In reply, Mr. Blunt spoke highly of the social and moral virtues, and the intellectual ideas and religion of Mahomedans, and urged them to take advantage of the fortunate circumstances of liberty and encouragement which they enjoyed under English rule to educate themselves, and so to strengthen their position.

Brigadier General Hill attacked and carried the Aka position on the 8th ult. The loss on both sides was but slight.

Cholera has broken out at Balipara-hat near Tezpur, owing, it is said, to bad sanitary arrangements, in connection with the troops told off for the Aka expedition.

The troops at the Camp of Exercise at Mean Meer are dispersing. The manoeuvring has terminated.

The Hon. Mr. Reynolds presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Municipalities Act Amendment Bill to the Bengal Legislative Council on the 12th ult. The Bill will be taken up at the next meeting of the Council.

It is stated that the Maharajah of Cashmere intends undertaking the construction of the railway line from Sialkote to Jammu immediately.

Want of rain is being severely felt in some districts of the Punjab.

The Maharajah of Vizianagram will shortly pay a visit to Calcutta.

The Bombay Government have published the official papers relating to the death of the Maharajah of Kolhapore, who, it will be remembered, died from rupture of the spleen caused by a struggle with his keeper.

A complimentary dinner was given to M. Joubert by the exhibitors at the Calcutta Exhibition on the 10th ult.

A movement has been set on foot in Calcutta to perpetuate the memory of the late Babu Keshub Chunder Sen, the leader of the Brahmo Samaj movement.

A conference of railway officials is to assemble in Calcutta next month to consider the question of simplifying the goods tariff.

Mr. Stanley, the well-known billiard player, whilst riding on the course at Dacca, was thrown from his pony, dislocated his ankle, and broke his leg.

INDIAN MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

[From the Bombay Gazette, Jan. 18.]

Sir Donald Stewart left Calcutta by the mail train on Monday night for Bangalore, arrived at Madras on Sunday morning, and left again the same evening with General Hardinge for the Bangalore Camp of Exercise.

General Hardinge, Commander in Chief of the Bombay Army, arrived at Madras on Saturday morning, en route to Bangalore for the camp of exercise. A guard of honour from the 1st Battalion Essex Regiment, consisting of fifty rank and file, with regimental colours and band, under command of a captain, paraded at the railway station in review order, and a salute of fifteen guns was fired from the saluting battery, announcing His Excellency's arrival. His Excellency was received on the platform by Brigadier General R. C. Stewart, the Hon. Sir Charles Turner, C.I.E., Chief Justice, Colonel Kennedy Herbert, Acting Military Secretary to the Government, and a number of officers. His Excellency was the guest of the Chief Justice during his short stay in Madras. Sir Donald Stewart reached Madras on Sunday morning, and left again the same evening, accompanied General Hardinge, for the camp at Krishnarajapuram.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1884.

INDIA IN THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

MR. GLADSTONE'S Government has apparently been unable, strange to say, to make up its mind as to which of Lord Ripon's great and good deeds should be singled out for special eulogy in the Royal Speech composed by Her Majesty's Ministers for the opening of Parliament. Doubtless Mr. Chamberlain must have wished to descant on the beautiful effects of the Bengal Tenancy Bill, in diverting the "unearned increment" from those who toil not, nor spin, into the pockets of the Government. Or perhaps, the known penchant of the Right Honourable Gentleman for "stellar space" led him to dwell on the masterly way in which Sir Richard Garth's Minute has been omitted from the published official papers on the same Bill, or on the omission to obtain the views on the Bill of the Judges of the High Court. The recent "packing" of the Legislative Council, too—in which Mr. Reynolds, a supporter of the Bill, has been re-appointed, whilst two of Mr. Ilbert's opponents have been quietly allowed to retire—obviously demanded special mention. But then, the Prime Minister himself doubtless insisted on the value of the measures taken to "check the spirit of ascendancy" of the Anglo-Indian community; whilst Lord Kimberley, also thinking them "too aggressive," possibly wished to describe the success of his own negotiations with Mr. Atkins. Mr. Fawcett's influence outside the Cabinet was, of course, used to emphasise the cheerful payment by India of the Egyptian war-charges; whilst one or two Lancashire supporters of the Government promised heartily to cheer any reference to the abolition of the cotton duties, and the friends of the poor English silversmith were equally enthusiastic about the refusal of the Treasury to abolish the English import duties on Indian silver manufactures. The Vice-President of the Council on Education wished to hear something about the abolition of the "weaker" Government Colleges in India, and the impending education cess in Bengal, that are to result from Dr. Hunter's Commission, and check the multiplication of what Dr. Hunter's friends call "the first-class classical Babu." Mr. Cross, perhaps, desired that the "statutory civilians" should be honestly mentioned, to compensate them for having been ignored in his speeches on the Ilbert Bill. He would also naturally explain that the recent wholesale suspension of Railway enterprise was not at all due to the wish to apply the money to provide for such nice fat appointments as Public Works Members, and Agricultural Secretaries, and Auditors General, and Epigraphists, and Curators, and the like; but only because of the coming Parliamentary Select Committee, which ought to be a sufficient excuse for many years of delay. Then there were the crowning mercies of the famous "Reuter's" telegrams, and Major Baring's assurance that the first of these "Reuter's" was dirt-cheap to Government at Rs.3,000, seeing that the Viceroy himself furnished the report of his own speech. These, and other helpful and pious "incidents" of this Annus Mirabilis in India, must surely have struggled for eulogistic mention, alongside of the glorious "Treaty of Commerce and Friendship with Corea," and the veracious statement of "the resolution of the Khedive to withdraw from the interior of the Soudan."

But alas, the embarras de richesse has been too perplexing. Not one word is given to India in the Speech:

THE INDIAN TEA DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION, 1884:

WE desire to attract the earnest and immediate attention of our tea-planting friends, and of everyone, connected with the great Tea Industry of India, to the correspondence published by Mr. Langdale in another column. Experience teaches us that it is only necessary for Indian tea to be brought actually under the personal observation of an English community, for that community to appreciate its superiority over China and other teas at once. We have seen this, not only in England, but also in Australia and America. And now, in the International Health Exhibition of London, 1884—a "World's Fair" certain to rival in popularity the highly-successful Fisheries Exhibition of last year—the Indian tea interest has a magnificent opportunity of putting itself en rapport with the whole English-speaking race, as well as with a considerable contingent of tea-drinkers from the continent of Europe. The Council seems to have been fortunate in securing the co-operation of an able and experienced organiser, in the person of Mr. Langdale. But time is short; and all Mr. Langdale's ability and experience will not suffice to make this department the great success it ought to prove, unless cordial and vigorous assistance be rendered him by all concerned in the industry. We heartily commend the enterprise to the consideration of the Indian Tea Association, the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce, and all the kindred organisations.

THE ROYAL SCHOOL FOR DAUGHTERS OF OFFICERS OF THE ARMY, BATH.

It will interest a large number of our military readers to know that the nomination of a pupil in the admirable institution known as "The Royal School for Daughters of Officers of the Army," at Bath, is now at the disposal of the Secretary of State for India.

When, on the foundation of the Staff Corps, Cadets ceased to be sent to India, the Cadet mess at Fort William was broken up; and in 1869, the surplus funds were paid over to the Royal School, the privilege of nominating one pupil to the School during a period of thirty years being placed in the hands of the Secretary of State for India. A vacancy has now occurred, and the valuable and interesting little piece of patronage will shortly be disposed of by Lord Kimberley. We understand that the nomination will take effect from the 25th of April next. The pupil nominated must be the daughter of an officer of the Bengal Cavalry or Infantry, who entered the service before 1860. She must also, of course, fulfil the usual conditions under which officers' daughters are admitted to the Royal School.

Applications for the nomination should be sent to the Secretary of State for India, through the Secretary of the School.

THE GENERAL LIST, INDIAN ARMY.

We understand that the "case" of the local officers will this session be brought before Parliament. They labour under a great grievance, which is not understood in England. When these officers entered the service, they were gazetted to regiments on the same equality as others. Soon afterwards, they found their names removed, and recorded upon a separate list. The reason then given was, that the Commissioners sitting on Army Reorganisation, would deal with every class of officer borne on the rolls of the Indian Army. These officers paid to, and were members of, every military institution. They perform every duty, and run every risk of war or climate, as do officers of the Staff Corps; and yet when the time comes for them to retire, they will not be allowed to receive the higher pensions that Staff Corps officers will be entitled to draw. This is hard and absurd. The local cavalry officers, and those gentlemen who entered the Indian Artillery, and the favoured Engineer branch of the service have not been subjected to any invidious distinction. But those officers, the local infantry men, who did not join the Staff Corps when it was formed, committed the sin of waiting to see the meaning and working of the then novel régime, and when they did understand it they were willing to join, but were refused. In the year 1866 the Staff Corps was thrown open to the Indian Army. But the General List officers were excluded, simply because they did not join at first. 750 officers had committed the same sin, but they were admitted, and not only that, but the local cavalry officers were also admitted, and these officers too had refused a distinct offer made to them to join. The local officers, who were behind the curtain, and who knew what was coming, and who joined before September 1866, got the higher pensions, also the colonel's allowances after thirty-eight years' service. There is no possible reason why the other gentlemen should get a smaller pension than officers of even less service, seeing that at one time their promotion was stopped, and entrance to the Staff Corps was denied to them.

The Government deny that they gave these officers the option to elect, but we fail to see how they can maintain this proposition, seeing that several officers joined the Staff Corps, others the local service, and some the Staff Corps. Government pleads that the local officers have no guaranteed rights, no covenant. This is hardly the conduct of a great Government. In law these officers may have no case, but in equity they ought not be worse off than their brother officers. It is an unhealthy system of military finance, to have two scales of pension and two plans of promotion—for it creates heart-burnings and complaints. The officer who has responsibilities and duties co-equal with his more fortunate brother-officer, feels the galling fact that his reward will ultimately be less than that of an officer whose term of service is actually shorter, and whose duty is the same. Even if law is against the men who complain, it is the duty of Government to stop jealousies, and at a small cost to the State to remedy a decided political and military mistake.

The management of the case, and the interests of some of the officers concerned, has been confided to Colonel Prndergast Walsh, the new Parliamentary agent at Westminster. We hope his hands may be strengthened by numerous petitions.

THE CALCUTTA EXHIBITION.

LETTER II.—THE INDIAN COURT.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 15.

THE Indian Court, as I mentioned in my previous letter, is one of the buildings in the enclosure on the Maidan, or to speak more accurately, occupies half of one of those buildings, the other half being devoted to the Calcutta exhibits.

The entrance to it is immediately facing the visitor as he descends the stairs from the bridge, and is formed by a splendid stone arch from Gwalior, perhaps the most magnificent thing in the Exhibition. Unfortunately the space in front of it is so limited that it is impossible to get a good point of view, and therefore much of the effect is lost. It would be hard to speak too highly of the design and execution of this magnificent piece of stonework. The former has, we understand, been composed by Major J. Keith, from various ancient carvings in Gwalior and the surrounding country, while the work has been executed under his superintendence by native masons at Gwalior.

The arch is semicircular, and the ornament on its inner curve is almost Norman in character; it is supported by two slender pillars, perfectly plain. Around and above the arch is a mass of carving, consisting chiefly of delicate perforated work and elephants in slight relief. The stone is of a light red colour and close grain, which admits of a finish rarely seen in any kind of stonework. The effect of the whole is so wonderfully light, as to suggest ivory rather than stone carving. It is more pleasant to be able to add that this beautiful work is a gift from H. H. the Maharajah Scindia, to the South Kensington Museum, whither it will be transported and erected at the close of the exhibition, so that those who have not had the opportunity of seeing here will be able to study it at leisure in England.

Passing under the arch, we are in the centre of the building. A large case of embroidery and native musical instruments is the first object, the top of it being fittingly occupied with a collection of the ordinary brass utensils so common in India. On our right are Calcutta exhibits, on our left the Indian courts.

Turning down there, beginning on the right hand, we find exhibits from British Burma. These we shall leave for the present, preferring to notice them in a later letter with those from Tonquin, which somewhat resemble them. Then, in the Central India Court, we find more of the stonework, all of the same character, though much smaller than our arch. Indeed, this work goes down to such trifles as corner brackets and small panels. Here also are arms of curious patterns, the great object seeming to be to combine in one piece as many weapons as possible. There is also some excellent carving on copper, and a fair show of textile fabrics of various kinds.

The Bombay Court is gorgeous, with carved sandal wood and inlaid works in ivory, ebony, and silver. We especially noticed a model of a palanquin, work box, and a chess board. But while these smaller objects are wonderfully made, larger matters have not been neglected. There is a carved door and doorway remarkable for the boldness of its design, and a cabinet equally remarkable for the intricacy of the carving. Here we have also the Kutch silver work, tea sets, goblets, and salvers of exquisite workmanship. There are also specimens of various materials, and of embroidery in silk and gold. The silver work from Baroda is also worthy of attention.

The Madras Court is chiefly noticeable for its lace. This is of various kinds, but our attention was chiefly attracted to that of gold and silver, which rivalled in its fineness the more fragile material. Most of this we noticed bore the label "Sold." Travancore contributes a case of silver filagree work, and Mysore sandal wood and inlaid work like that from Bombay.

Hyderabad has a fair show of weapons, and some excellent carpets, also silver inlaying, and some leather of first rate quality.

The Punjab has a splendid show of arms of offence and defence, all inlaid with silver and gold. In this section too, we find the cashmere shawls which are so deservedly famous, and certainly the specimens exhibited appear to leave nothing to be desired in texture and warmth.

In the Central Provinces Delhi shines. There are some most unpleasantly realistic snakes in porcelain, which are really wonderfully executed. But what chiefly attracted our notice was the pottery, which would gladden the heart of Mr. Gilbert's "blue and white young man." The shapes are excellent, there is plenty of variety, the colours are good, being only white and either blue, or a good shade of green. And above all the cheapness of this ware is marvellous, and if it were known in England, we feel sure that it could not fail to be highly appreciated for decorative purposes.

It will require another letter to complete the notice of the Indian Court.

The Exhibition is in a far more finished state, but even now leaves much to be desired, and it is to be feared that it will pass the remainder of its existence without being really complete at all points.

INDIAN TEA DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERNATIONAL HEALTH EXHIBITION, LONDON, 1884.

At a meeting of the Executive Council, held on Jan. 25, it was decided to give effect to a proposal made by me, at the suggestion of Mr. C. Purdon Clarke, C.I.E., the Curator of the Indian Museum, that a large proportion of the space allotted to India should be devoted to the exhibition of Indian teas, and that steps should be taken to make this Exhibition popular and interesting.

The following resolution was adopted:—

"This being an urgent matter, on account of the shortness of time, the Executive Council, on the strong recommendation of Sir George Birdwood, accepted Mr. Langdale's proposal, and authorised him to write to his friends in India to the intent that they may accept him as their representative, and enter at once into the scheme with a view of sending home tea plants, tea, and whatever else may be necessary to make the Indian Tea Exhibition a success. The planters or planting companies bearing their share of the expenses."

(Signed)

"Jan. 25, 1884." "BUCKINGHAM AND CHANDOS,

Chairman, Executive Council.

The difficulty which at the outset met Mr. Clarke's suggestion, that there was no practical tea planter to carry out the scheme, was removed when the Executive Council accepted my services, and authorised me to set to work. My personal interest and practical experience will, I hope, be a guarantee to the tea industry generally that all will be done that is practicable for the common interests of planters, and also an inducement to them to do all in their power to assist a scheme so likely to advance their interests in the English market, and conducted in all practical detail by one of themselves. I would call your attention to the concluding paragraphs of the Council's resolution. This deals, perhaps somewhat indefinitely, with the expenses connected with the scheme. My name alone appears in connection with the arrangements made with the Council—there is no time to communicate on this matter with the secretaries of your associations—and, therefore, to secure immediate action, I became responsible for the necessary funds. I would, at the same time, wish you to understand that I shall look for and be glad of assistance from you, if you will take up the scheme with energy, as I hope you may. There will be a China Garden in competition with ours; and as, at the present, our Indian teas are superseding those of China in public favour, you will, I feel sure, agree with me that we should strain every nerve to stand well at the coming Exhibition, and so bring our teas home to the actual consumers, and that an outlay of some three or four hundred of rupees by your Association will be well repaid. It will probably be fully met by the profits on sales at the Exhibition. In the list of requirements below, I may not have been so explicit as you would wish, but the shortness of the time at my disposal must be my apology; and I must ask you, please, to exercise your own judgment, and to trust me to carry out the scheme, and to receive any suggestion you may be good enough to communicate. —I am, dear Sir, yours truly, EDWARD F. LANGDALE, late President of Kangra Valley Planters' Association, at Palampur, Punjab.

The following contributions are invited from each association:—

I. TEA PLANTS TO FORM A MODEL GARDEN IN THE EXHIBITION.—Requirements:—A sufficient number of seedlings of size and growth, to form, in combination, 200 bushes in model garden. Recommendations:—These should be packed as follows: A box long enough to take the seedlings in layers should be divided so as to provide a separate compartment for the roots, and another for the leaves, &c., the stems being passed through the division board. The roots should retain a portion of the soil, which should be moulded round them, and bound in matting or rags. The division in which the stems are should be freely perforated to admit light and air; that containing the roots should be closed as perfectly as possible to prevent the soil escaping. The size of the boxes is left to your discretion and convenience.

II. TEA SEED FOR EXHIBITION AND SALE.—Requirements:—A maund of seed in the husk. Recommendation:—Pack in coarse paper bags, with charcoal dust sufficient to fill the spaces perfectly, and exclude air. Send these bags in boxes.

III. MANUFACTURED TEA.—Requirements:—One pound of each description of tea manufactured by each plantation in the Association, which it is desired to expose for competition and awards. Also, four 10lb. boxes from each association of selected last year's tea for infusion in the Exhibition, and consumption by visitors. Recommendations:—The sample packets from each plantation should be packed in separate boxes, in which, also, should be enclosed a paper giving the name, trade-mark, locality, &c., of each company and garden, and the boxes forwarded in cases from each association. The sample so sent will be exhibited in separate compartments of the Exhibition cases, with descriptive labels, for the information of the juries and the public.

IV. IMPLEMENTS OF MANUFACTURE.—Requirements:—Specimens of all and every movable article used in making tea. The "chulaha," pans, &c., will be provided in England, especially baskets, trays, and other things made of bamboo, each association contributing what is peculiar to its own districts.

V. PHOTOGRAPHS.—Requirements:—Views of gardens, scenery, factories, natives, singly and in groups, and any pictures of implements, &c. The pictures shall be returned if required.

THE MEERUT CAMP. A correspondent writes:—"The camp of exercise of H. R. H. the General Commanding at Meerut is now in full activity. A fine parade was formed on the occasion of Her Majesty's Proclamation Day, the first of the new year. All the troops were in excellent order. The 13th Hussars and Artillery were in great strength, also the Native Cavalry. The Infantry regiments appeared weak in numbers. The tent-pegging was excellently executed, very little difference being noticeable in the success between the Europeans and the natives. Cricket and lawn tennis are the chief amusements, while balls and dinners are continuous. Receptions and entertainments by Their Royal Highnesses have been given to the garrison. Among the visitors of the camp are Colonel Keith Fraser, late of the Life Guards and General Sir Arthur and Miss Cunningham, who are making a winter tour through India. These latter have been the guests of Colonel Baker and Lady Russell. They have now proceeded to Lahore, with the intention of visiting the camp at Mian Mir, where Sir Arthur was in command for some years."—Englishman.

The Calcutta Naval Battery have received charge of two nine-pounder muzzle-loading field guns, which were used in the sham fight of the 4th instant, with good effect, but the work of hauling the guns over the Maidan is heavy.

THE VOICE OF INDIA. A NEW MAGAZINE INTENDED TO GIVE EXPRESSION TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect it is now desired to remedy, by publishing monthly in Bombay a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which will provide a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. It is hoped that the Voice of India will thus give forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine will advocate no views of its own. It will seek only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it is believed that the writings thus brought before the English public will be found to be characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally by practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances will from time to time be set forth; but it is a policy of prudence no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be welcomed by all Members of Parliament desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in clubs, reading-rooms, libraries, and institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY CAPTAIN FRED BURNABY,

Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a medicine man had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

This Company, which has been formed for the purpose of developing Tramway Enterprise in India, has, in the first instance, undertaken the construction and completion of a Steam Tramway in the Town of Kurachee (also called Karachi or Kurrachee), the chief Town of the Government of Scinde, Bombay Presidency.

The concession for the construction of the Tramway, the length of which, with sidings, will be about eight miles, has been granted on very favourable terms. The Act (No. 12 of 1883) received the assent of the Government of Bombay on Feb. 8, 1883, and of the Governor General of India on March 26, 1883.

Mr. J. N. NORMAN, the Secretary of the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railway, of which the Tramway will practically be an extension to the harbour, writes:—"Sir William Andrew and the directors of this Company will be heartily glad to hear that your admirable project of supplying Kurachee with Tramways is in a fair way for speedy operation."

Sir BARTLE FRERE, Bart., G.C.B., G.C.S.I. (late Governor of Bombay), writes:—"I know of few towns which offer a better field for such enterprises than Kurachee, and the proposed lines, as marked on the map, seem to me the best which could be selected for a commencement."

Mr. W. M. COGHLAN (late Commissioner of Scinde), writes:—"I take a great interest in all concerning Scinde, and from what I know of Karachi, think your Company likely to be a great success. The Bombay Tramway must have paid its way over and over again, and I should think that the Scindis are more likely to avail themselves quickly of Tram service than the Conservative Hindu of the Presidency City."

The population of Kurachee, which has increased 30 per cent. in ten years, is now over 85,000.

The enormous growth of the trade of Kurachee, which is the Harbour of India nearest Europe (being 200 miles nearer to Aden than Bombay), has secured for it greatly increased attention from the Government. Apart from its being on the Western Coast of India, second in importance only to Bombay, it is the natural seaport of the rich Provinces of Scinde and the Punjab, which have been opened up to Trade by the Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi, and the Indus Valley Railways.

The Report of the Chamber of Commerce to the end of 1882-1883 proves that the business of Kurachee is growing with immense rapidity; thus, its grain trade alone shows an increase from 15,969 tons in 1880-1881 to 176,380 tons in 1882-1883, or more than eleven-fold increase in three years.

The total trade of the port now amounts to nearly 700,000 tons per annum, the carriage of a considerable portion of which, it cannot be doubted, will be entrusted to this Company. Up to the present the conveyance of goods in Kurachee has been carried on in a most primitive manner, principally by means of bullock carts.

At a moderate computation, and taking as a basis a lower proportion of traffic than is carried by other similar undertakings, the income of the Company from the goods and passenger traffic is estimated at a minimum sum of 267,500 Rupees. Less 50 per cent. working expenses 133,750 Rupees.

Net Income 133,750 Rupees, at rs. 7½d.—£10,867 3s. 9d. which will be sufficient to pay a dividend of over 12½ per cent. per annum on the capital required for completing and equipping the Company's Line.

The only two Indian cities where tramway enterprise has been fairly tried are Bombay and Calcutta. The Bombay undertaking (which is a private one) has been exceedingly profitable to its owners, and the Calcutta Company, although it has been only recently established, has paid good dividends from the commencement. The important fact must be borne in mind that while the Bombay and the Calcutta Companies carry passengers only, this Company is an addition specially designed to carry goods.

The only contract is dated Jan. 30, 1884; and is made between the Company and the Contractor, Mr. E. D. Matthews.

Prospectuses, with Map, may be had of the Bankers and of the Secretary, at the Offices of the Company.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1884.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

OUR advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Jan. 25; Madras and Allahabad, Jan. 23; Calcutta, Jan. 22.

THE Viceroy has left Hyderabad; and the intrigue which has placed the youthful inheritor of a great name, the Nawab Salar Jung, at the head of affairs in the Deccan is for the moment a fait accompli. It is, we fear, one more evil result of Lord Ripon's weakness and folly, pregnant with mischief for the future. How any intelligent man—we say nothing, after the Ilbert Bill and the Bengal Tenancy Bill, of statesmanship—how any ordinarily intelligent human being could put a boy-Minister of twenty years and four months to guide a boy-Prince of eighteen, through circumstances of unprecedented difficulty, in a State that is acknowledged to be seething with turbulence and intrigue, passes comprehension.

THE Viceroy left Hyderabad at 2.30 p.m. on the 8th instant, and the correspondent of the Times, telegraphing from that city on the evening of the same day says:—"Already new intrigues are apparent." It would seem as if His Excellency's steps were doomed to be dogged by intrigue and unrest of all kinds.

WE are told of two gentlemen—neither of them natives of the Deccan—who are said to be the "coming men," whatever that may mean. But en attendant, "No Council has yet been named, nor has the form of government been decided upon, except that Salar Jung is to be Minister." And so things slide.

ALL just men should be delighted to learn from the Times telegram this week, that "There is no longer any prospect" of the Bengal Tenancy Bill being passed this session. We do not doubt that the further time allowed for its consideration will result in the elimination of the more flagrantly iniquitous provisions; but it behoves all friends of justice and right to watch progress of events very closely. As long as Lord Ripon and Mr. Ilbert retain their power over the destinies of India, so long will it be necessary for the defenders of the rights of property to be on their guard.

A PETITION to the House of Commons against the Bengal Tenancy Bill will be presented this afternoon by the Hon. Edward Stanhope, M.P., humbly praying—

"Your Honourable House for protection and redress . . . and that it may adopt such measures by legislation, resolution, or otherwise as in its wisdom it may deem just and proper to maintain the existing rights of your petitioners, and to express its disapproval of a policy which, while confiscating the property of your petitioners, will prove most detrimental to the true interests and prosperity of the country."

This petition is signed by His Highness the Maharajah of Darbhanga, His Highness the Maharajah of Hutwa, His Highness the Maharajah of Deo, His Highness the Maharajah Sheoprasad Singh of Gidhaur, the Dewan of the Doomraon Raj (on behalf of His Highness the Maharajah of Doomraon), and no less than 1,854 other Zemindars (landholders) of the Province of Behar, in the Lieutenant Governorship of Bengal.

THE Right Hon. Lord Stanley of Alderley has given notice of some questions on the subject of this mischievous Bill—the policy of which his Lordship described, at the meeting of the East India Association, as "Machiavellian"—in the House of Lords; and the Hon. Edward Stanhope, M.P., has given notice of other questions, founded on the petition of the Behar landowners, in the House of Commons. It is satisfactory to observe that both Conservative and Liberal statesmen are thus united in condemning Lord Ripon's singularly unwise and incendiary legislation.

WE have no doubt that the proposal of a small commission, to meet the zemindars and inquire honestly into the truth of their allegations as to the iniquitous character of the Bill—which proposal is suggested by Mr. Stanhope's question—is really the right thing. Only, the Commission must be an honest one, and fairly representative—not a packed body, merely requiring dexterous manipulation, like Dr. Hunter's Education Commission—and not like the Legislative Council as recently "arranged."

MR. STANHOPE's question is thus worded:—

"To ask the Under Secretary for India whether it is true that it is not now intended to press the Bengal Tenancy Bill during the present session of the Legislative Council in Calcutta; and, if so, whether the opportunity will be taken of inquiring by means of a small Commission, into the justice of the complaints made by the landowners in Bengal and Behar against the provisions of the Bill, alleging it to be confiscatory in its provisions and an undoubted breach of the permanent settlement."

IT is a sign of the times that great dissatisfaction is expressed in Calcutta at the fact that the Select Committee sits with closed doors. We entirely sympathise with the demand of our Native fellow-subjects that reporters should be admitted to these deliberations; and after all the "Reuterising," and other "hanky-panky" that has lately been going on, under the present régime, we can hardly wonder at the persistence with which this demand has been urged.

THE No-Rent Agitation appears to have been spreading in the Maimansingh District; and of course it will continue to spread, as it did in Ireland, so long as a sympathetic Radical Government is in power. And now we are told that Messrs. Ilbert and Co. positively have the audacity to cite the agitation as a reason "for pressing on the measure at once, so as to put an end to the existing state of uncertainty and expectation!" A more unscrupulous argument has probably never been used in India. "The existing state of uncertainty and expectation" will last just so long as the rule of politicians of the pattern now in fashion; and if the latter last much longer, the "existing state" will soon develop into one of universal anarchy and confusion.

THE title of Mr. Cust's paper, noticed in our leader to-day, and read before the Royal United Service Institution, was "The Russians on the Caspian and Black Seas."

WE are glad to see that Mr. Maclean, late of Bombay, and a candidate for the representation of Oldham in Parliament, will next Friday bring before the Society of Arts the subject of "State Monopoly of Railways in India." Mr. Maclean is an acute and vigorous thinker, and a graceful speaker; and he is thoroughly acquainted with the question of which he treats. We do not agree with all Mr. Maclean's views on the Railway policy of the Indian Government; but his opinions on all Indian questions command universal respect, and we have no doubt that his paper will be a most valuable and interesting one. Moreover, at the present time we are grateful for any discussion that may tend to arouse Lord Ripon's Government from that state of apathy in the matter of Railway extension, which Mr. Cross would have us believe is due to the coming Parliamentary Select Committee—but which many attribute to the impecuniosity consequent on the monstrous extravagance of Lord Ripon's civil administration.

THE Sirdar Diler Jung Bahadur, C.I.E., the Secretary to the Nizam's Government in the Railway Department, left England for India by last Friday's mail. The Sirdar has succeeded in achieving the great object with which he was deputed to England, the floating of the Hyderabad and Chanda Railway extension scheme.

A CRYSTAL glass throne, which Messrs. Osler have just completed for India, is now on view in their London show rooms, 100, Oxford-street, W.

WE are glad to observe that Mr. Stanhope has moved for a return of the memorandum, said to have been recorded by Major Baring before his departure for Egypt, on the circumstances under which the famous "Garbled Telegram No. 1," was despatched to the English Press, ostensibly by Reuter's Agency, but really at the expense and under the orders of the Government of India. It is, of course, only fair that Lord Ripon's Government should have an opportunity of fully explaining the reasons that induced it to follow this extraordinary procedure; and this opportunity is now chivalrously afforded by Mr. Stanhope's motion. But the real point of the whole matter lies in the question, "Was the telegram of March 9 a fair account of the debate in Council?" The reply is that it gave the Viceroy's own lengthy summary of his own speech; it altogether omitted some, and monstrosly cut down all the rest, of the speeches of the Opposition; and it represented some of the official supporters of the Government as "independent members."

THE Times of India has the following on the recent astonishing outburst of the Statesman :—

"The Statesman of 16th inst. contains an attack upon Mr. Cordery, the Resident of Hyderabad, which for virulence and indecency surpasses anything which has appeared in the columns of an Indian paper in recent times. The gravest charges are made against Mr. Cordery's private character, and no stone is apparently left unturned to blacken his character. The correspondent of a Madras paper, telegraphing from Calcutta on Wednesday, says:—'Some of the articles which appeared in the Statesman were originally sent in by interested parties to another newspaper, with an intimation that further information would be supplied. The newspaper in question rejected the sensational pabulum thus offered, and a little later on it appeared with but slight alteration in the columns of the Statesman. The Daily News suggests that measures should be taken by the Viceroy to discover the persons who have got hold of private papers and supplied them to the Statesman. I have just heard, on high authority, that although the Government will not prosecute the Statesman, it does not follow that some other steps will not be taken to show that the Government does not attach any credence to the charges brought against its officers. The sooner these steps are taken the better.'"

IN discussing the extraordinary attack on Mr. Cordery in the Statesman the Indian Daily News says :—

"We would remind the Statesman that to charge a high officer in the following terms :—'Mr. Cordery, unhappily for himself, is, we are assured by English gentlemen of high character as well as native, so intemperate in his habits that he cannot work even if he would'—is to come out into the open, and to narrow a libel to an extent where protection would be impossible and where justification would only be an aggravation. Further, it is just as well for our neighbour to bear in mind that it is the challenged who has the choice of weapons. But, although we cannot but denounce the attack upon Mr. Cordery and the raking up of his past, we still hold to the opinion that where a desire to be prosecuted is so plainly manifested, it should not be gratified."

AND again :—

"The Statesman of the 17th inst. declares that 'Lord Ripon has taken the first step to break up the Hyderabad "ring," and Major Trevor goes on leave for eighteen months.' The Englishman of the following day says :—'As public allusion has been made to the subject of the leave which has been lately granted to Major Trevor, First Assistant to the Resident at Hyderabad, it may be stated that Major Trevor expressed a desire to go on leave about six months ago. It has been understood for some time that on return from this leave, Major Trevor would not be appointed to the Hyderabad Residency, owing to the fact that he has been stationed at that post for a longer period than is usual in the appointment of officers to such office.'"

WE said last week that the "surprise" of the appointment of the young Mir Liak Ali to the post of supreme power at Hyderabad looked much like a surrender, on Lord Ripon's part, to the astonishing views of the Statesman. From the issue of the latter journal to hand by to-day's mail, it appears that the Statesman has been in the secret all through. This is what it says :—

"We believe that we may announce confidently that Lord Ripon, with the approval of H.M. Secretary of State, has determined to give expression to the young Nizam's own wish that Mir Liak Ali should be the Dewan, and the Viceroy has taken the wisest possible course in so determining. The difficulty remains of finding colleagues of experience, age, and high character to act with him. Happily, there are such men, we hear, to be found at Hyderabad, but it would be travelling beyond our province to suggest the names of any. We have not a doubt that Lord Ripon feels the full gravity of the situation, and will make a wise selection. The question of the Residency remains. As to Mr. Cordery remaining Resident, it is impossible. Mr. Cordery's appointment was a scandal, as every upright man in India knows, and that the Foreign Office dared suggest such an appointment indicates but too clearly the morale of that office. We are to understand, it seems, that neither the Indian Civil Service nor the Indian Army contained a man better qualified for the appointment than Mr. Cordery, concerning whom we have been reluctantly driven to say that he ought to have been compelled to retire from the service ten years ago. Whose fault is it that the Statesman is forced to say these painful things? Look at the condition of Hyderabad at this moment: the young Prince in the hands of mere 'panders,' and a convict at the head of the treasury, with a reign of terror set up by the Residency, and enforced by deporting all remonstrants against the state of matters. Does any one believe that Mr. Cordery, or the first assistant, Major Trevor, ever reported this man's appointment to the Government of India? It is certain that the appointment was concealed, and the reasons for the concealment of it are as clear as the noon-day sun. A man was wanted who would allow the treasury to be pillaged, and the man was found in this Hunmant Rao."

THE Calcutta Exhibition has largely affected the traffic of the East Indian Railway. The earnings during the first twelve days of the year amounted to Rs. 18,40,000, or more than two lakhs in excess of what was made during the corresponding days of 1883.

THE P. & O. Company's steam-ship Nizam, while on her voyage from London to Calcutta, experienced some rough weather. When off Galita she was struck by a heavy sea, which injured several of the officers and crew. The Commander, Captain R. Harvey, was struck by the awning-boom, which was washed overboard. He sustained such bad bruises on both legs that he was unable to walk. The chief officer, Mr. Curtis, received more serious injuries, having one of his arms and an ankle broken, which necessitated his being landed at Malta, and placed in hospital, together with four of the crew, who were much hurt. On the vessel's arrival at Suez seven natives who had received lesser injuries were landed, and sent on to Bombay. None of the passengers were hurt.

THE case, Seymour Keay v. Deccan Times, was called on for hearing at Hyderabad on Jan. 17. Mr. Battenburgh appeared for the plaintiff, and Messrs. Forbes and Leach for the defence. Mr. Battenburgh, after a long discussion, suggested seven issues. Mr. Forbes addressed the Court shortly and concisely. The following are the issues framed :—First—Are the facts set forth in the issues of Nov. 27 and Dec. 4 substantially true or not? Second—Are those allegations actionable? Third—Did plaintiff, of his own motion, publish the facts contained in the said issues of the Deccan Times? Fourth—What damages, if any, is plaintiff entitled to? Mr. Keay, in arguing against a long postponement, said that if Chimanrow was a witness for the defence he was sure he would not come. The case was adjourned until Feb. 8.

A MINUTE by Mr. Justice Field, who was absent in England when his brother judges in the High Court recorded their opinions on the Ilbert Bill, is published in the Calcutta papers. It is of great length and shows a most intimate acquaintance with all the legal points involved. It is almost needless to say that Mr. Field utterly condemns the Bill.

THE Times of India gives the following obituary for the week ending Jan. 25 :—

"Mr. H. E. Astley, exchange broker, Bombay; Lieutenant W. C. Loudan (Punjab) N.I.; Captain Charles Hugh Manners Smith, 3rd Sikh Infantry; Lieutenant-Colonel C. O'Donnell, Assistant Commissary General, Mean Meer; Mr. James Mill, head assistant of the firm of Messrs. David and Co., Chittagong; Zemindar Ramnath Roy Chowdhury; Major J. G. Hill, R.E., Executive Engineer, Cawnpore Division, Lower Ganges Canal."

THE Englishman has the following on the Calcutta Freight Market for the week ending Jan. 22 :—

"Business still drags along without any sign of improvement. The demand for tonnage is limited, and produce is very scarce."

Even the little demand for forward loading has died away, and things have arrived almost at a standstill. Steamer rates have slightly improved, but only owing to a temporary scarcity of space on the loading berth. Sailing ship rates have again experienced a slight decline. One vessel has taken the London, and one the Liverpool berth, whilst two have accepted New York charters. Our unfixed tonnage has been reduced to 33,000 tons."

With respect to the Indigo Market, Messrs. William Moran & Co., report as follows:—

"Since our last issue four public sales have been held, at which 3,830 chests were offered and 3,580 chests sold. By private contract about 150 chests of Ghads have been disposed of at various prices. We have no change to notice in prices, the market having continued steady for all descriptions. The total quantity out of the market is not about 147,500 maunds, and it appears probable that the total crop will weigh out about 155,000 maunds, the excess over the original estimate being entirely due to the large production in the North West. The season will close, as far as European marks are concerned, the end of this week."

The same firm gives the following with respect to the Tea Market:—

"The sales held on the 17th comprised about 5,000 packages. There was a brisk demand, and prices were about half an anna higher."

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

The following is the official summary of the reports of the Agricultural Department on the state of the weather and prospects of the crops throughout India, for the week ending Jan. 19:—

"During the past week slight rain fell in four districts of the Madras Presidency, at Bombay, at four stations in Central India and Rajputana, and in parts of the Punjab and North Western Provinces. The standing crops in Madras and Mysore are generally favourable, and harvesting is still in progress. In Bombay the rabi crops of six districts have been injured by heavy rain late in the season, blight, and other causes, but prospects are, on the whole, fair. Cotton-picking continues in Berar, and the rabi crops are doing well. In Hyderabad some damage has been caused by excessive cold. Prospects are generally favourable throughout Central India and Rajputana, though rain is much needed for the rabi in some places. The same remarks apply to the Punjab and North Western Provinces and Oudh, where a few showers would be beneficial to the unirrigated crops. No actual loss has, however, resulted yet from the absence of rain, and the prevalence of cloudy weather gives indications of an early fall. In the Central Provinces the prospects of the rabi crops continue favourable, except in parts of the Jabulpur division, where they are suffering from want of moisture. In Bengal the prospects remain unchanged. No rain fell during the week, and the rabi in Behar and Chota Nagpore is suffering from want of moisture. Elsewhere the crops are in fair condition. The rice harvest is nearly over. In Assam the winter crops promise well. The outturn of the paddy harvest in Cachar has been much below the average, owing to the floods of last year. In Burma the reaping of the rice crop is approaching completion, and agricultural prospects are, on the whole, favourable. The public health is generally good, though small-pox and fever exist in most provinces, and cholera is severe in the Tanjore district of the Madras Presidency. Prices continue high in Bengal in spite of the appearance of new rice in the markets."

TELEGRAPHIC INTELLIGENCE.

The following telegram from the Indian correspondent of the Times is dated Hyderabad, Feb. 8:—

"General Stewart left here yesterday. He will stay four days at Ellorah, in order to visit the Caves. Mr. Grant Duff went away at midnight, to be ready to receive the Viceroy. General Roberts will start to-morrow."

"The Viceroy left to-day at 2.30 from the Secunderabad Station. He came from Bolarum, escorted by a wing of the 14th Hussars. A contingent of Lancers and of the 17th Madras was on guard outside, and a party of the Middlesex Regiment inside the station. The Nizam and his nobles and officers also attended, and the whole party were photographed."

"The Viceroy intends to stay in Madras until Thursday next. He has a very full programme. Leaving on Thursday in the Clive, he should reach Calcutta on the 18th instant. He does not go to Madras."

"Yesterday his Excellency sent for General Glasford to discuss the Revenue system of this State. General Glasford, an able and independent man, and a first-class Revenue officer, was formerly Commissioner of Jubbulpore. They also discussed certain irrigation projects. The Viceroy also received the Nizam, Salar Jung, the Peshkar, and Khorshed Jah. He went fully into the position of the State. It is admitted that the finances have been disorganised for some years; but large reductions are possible in the expenditure, and economy was recommended at the conference."

"The present Government has decided to support the Chunda Railway line, in the first instance to go to Warangul and Bezvada. Telegrams were to be sent to London from the Nizam's Government to request that the issue of the shares might be delayed six months, to give the market time to recover confidence."

"The Nizam held a private Durbar on Tuesday last, after the Installation, and gave titles to fourteen officers and nobles. The Peshkar he made a Maharajah, and his son-in-law a Rajah. New titles were given to the two sons of Khorshed Jah. Busheer Ood Dowlah appealed for help to Salar Jung, but was told that the Nizam and his new Minister accepted the Viceroy's decision in his case. Busheer in consequence kept away from all the gatherings, and only attended the Viceroy's departure."

"Already new intrigues are apparent. The 'coming man' seems to be Syed Hossain Belgrami, once private secretary to the late Sir Salar Jung—an able man and a good English scholar. He visited England in 1876 with Sir Salar. His rival, Mehndi Ali, Secretary for the Revenue, is also a man of ability. Both men come from Northern India. No Council has yet been named, nor has the form of Government been decided upon, except that Salar Jung is to be Minister."

The following is the usual weekly telegram from the same correspondent, dated Calcutta, Feb. 10:—

"The Select Committee on the Bengal Tenantry Bill now meets three times weekly, but its task is one of such magnitude and difficulty that the progress made is necessarily but slow. There is no longer any prospect of the measure being passed during the current session. The committee will probably finish its labours and present a report in the course of next month. The Revised Bill will then be published and circulated for the opinions of the district officers. Possibly a roving commission of three or four officers may be appointed to inquire into the subject locally. The Bill will be again taken up when the Government returns to Calcutta next winter."

"The fact that the committee sits with closed doors has caused some dissatisfaction, and at a meeting of landholders held last week, it was resolved to petition for the admission of reporters and the publication of the proceedings. It is hardly likely that this prayer will be granted; as it is the practice for Select Committees of the Indian Legislature to sit in private, the reason alleged being that they are thus able to get through their work more rapidly."

"It is reported that a large number of ryots of the Mymensingh district have refused to pay their rents; and this fact has been made use of by the advocates of the Rent Bill as a reason for pressing on the measure at once, so as to put an end to the existing state of uncertainty and expectation. It does not appear, however, that the No-rent agitation has yet reached any serious pitch."

"The Bengal Legislative Council has been engaged during several sittings with the Municipalities Bill, the object of which is to give greater powers to municipal committees, and to extend the elective principle among them. The provisions of the Bill, giving to certain towns the right of electing their committees, and to the members of the committees the right of electing their chairman, meet with some opposition, and have given rise to some lively debates. The Opposition was, however, outvoted. The debate will be resumed next Saturday."

"At yesterday's meeting of the same Council, mention was made of the Local Self-Government Bill, introduced about a year ago. This measure has been delayed, owing to a correspondence with the Secretary of State regarding certain of its provisions. The proposed Central Board of Control, although one of its original features, has been disallowed; and the scheme will now take the form of providing district committees with magistrates as chairmen. The Bill cannot well be passed before next session."

"After an absence of about a month, the Lieutenant Governor presided at yesterday's meeting—a proof that he is now convalescent."

"The announcement of the new arrangement at Hyderabad has been received with some surprise; and it is very generally felt that it is a somewhat hazardous experiment to intrust the Government of such a State as Hyderabad to a Prince of eighteen and a Prime Minister of twenty-one. However, no very strong disapproval has been manifested by the press, while some newspapers cordially approve the appointment. The result will be watched with interest, and it is quite possible that it may justify the course which has been adopted."

"The presence in Calcutta of several Exhibition Commissioners from Australia has again brought to the front the question of an extension of the trade between India and the Australian colonies. The Chamber of Commerce of New South Wales has formulated a scheme for the establishment of a line of powerful steamers from Calcutta to Sydney, calling at Colombo and the chief Australian ports. A meeting of Calcutta merchants and the Australian Commissioners has been held to consider the subject. There was no difference of opinion as to the importance of establishing such a line, but the President of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce seemed to think that a Government subsidy would be necessary, at least in the initial stages of the undertaking.

"The Akha expeditionary force has returned to Tezpur, after having completely effected its object. The troops will be sent back to their respective stations.

"The Duke and Duchess of Connaught are now at Agra, where they are the guests of the Lieutenant Governor of the North West Provinces.

"Sir Robert Sandeman's visit to Panjgur was most successful. After ten days' patient inquiry, a settlement was made of long-pending disputes between the Khans of Khelat and Kharan and the Panjgur Sirdars, which is generally approved, especially by the Wazir of the Khan, who at last sees a prospect of peace and prosperity dawning upon that distant portion of the Khan's territory. This settlement may be said to bring to a successful close Lord Northbrook's policy, inaugurated just before he left India, for making the Khanate of Khelat a strong bulwark of our Empire from Dera Ghazi Khan, on the Punjab frontier, to the sea at Gwadar. Lord Lytton continued this policy, perhaps on a more advanced scale than was originally intended, but with similar results. The Khans of Khelat and Kharan, the Jam of Lusbeyla, and the Beloochee Sirdars of Sarawan, Jelawan, and Mekran, are our firm allies. The country from Dera Ghazi Khan to Gwadar, and the trade route leading to Persia, Seistan, Candahar, and the Helmund River, are now held by people who are in no degree fanatical, like their Afghan neighbours, but proud of our friendship and devoted to British interests, as was proved during the late Afghan war.

"The value of this alliance to British interests on the frontier cannot be overestimated, and a geographical knowledge of the country and the various routes is alone necessary to make this evident. Such knowledge will be furnished by the surveying party which Sir Robert Sandeman will leave behind him to complete the survey of the country. It is understood that Sir R. Sandeman holds the same views as were expressed by Sir Charles MacGregor in his recently-published book with regard to the value to India of the Kharan frontier."

THE following has been received through Reuter's Agency:—

"BOMBAY, Feb. 11.—An influential meeting, convened by the Bombay Chamber of Commerce, has been held here, at which it was resolved to send a memorial to the Indian authorities urging the prosecution of railway extension to the extent of from two thousand to three thousand miles annually during the next ten years. It was estimated that the expenditure for this purpose would reach £20,000,000 yearly, which it was proposed should be raised in sterling in London at a guaranteed interest of 3½ per cent. in perpetuity. The memorial was unanimously adopted, and it was likewise resolved to request the leading English Chambers of Commerce and shipowners to strongly urge the views expressed by the meeting upon the Secretary of State for India."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE ISTHMUS OF KRA.*

THIS is an account of a journey made in company with the French Survey Expedition by Captain Loftus, across the Isthmus of Kra. The journey was begun in January, 1883, and finished in April of the same year. The author is apparently in the service of the Siamese Government, and accompanied the expedition in his official capacity as Commissioner.

The object of the Expedition was to report on the practicability of making a canal across the Isthmus of Kra, to connect the Bay of Bengal with the Gulf of Siam, thus making a short cut to China by saving vessels from the necessity of going round the Malay Peninsula. The plan is one that has been often discussed during the last twenty years, but the survey of which this little book treats seems to have been more careful and complete than any previous one; and Captain Loftus has brought so much of his own personal observation to bear on the subject, that he is quite justified in giving forth the result to the world.

His opinion is very strongly against making the canal. The only practicable route, it appears, lies through the Kra Pass for two-thirds of the way, and through paddy fields for the remaining third. Cutting through the Kra Pass would necessitate the removal of "eighty-four millions of cubic yards of mountain land, 75 or 80 per cent. of which is hard stone;" and as Captain Loftus points out, this excavation would be but a small part of the affair, the great difficulty being to dispose of the debris when excavated, as the surrounding country consists of lofty mountains, while the Kra Pass itself is excessively narrow and confined. Another objection is that the Pakchan River, up which ships would have to go in order to reach the canal, is tortuous and difficult of navigation, with sunken rocks and shifting sandbanks at its mouth, and at present it is not navigable for large steamers above a certain point. It would have to be aligned and deepened, and afterwards constantly kept clear at great expense. A strong breakwater would also have to be constructed at its mouth. On the other side of the Peninsula, similar works would have to be undertaken to make and keep the Bay of Chumpon navigable.

The advantages to be gained by ships using the canal are overbalanced by the disadvantages, in Captain Loftus's opinion. The differences in distance between the present routes and the proposed Kra route would be respectively 256, 381, 383, and 471 miles. Ships would not be likely, he argues, for the sake of so small a saving in distance, to incur the heavy canal expenses and the "risky navigation" of the Pakchan River. It is obviously a very different case from that of the Suez Canal, where the alternative is a voyage of many thousands of miles instead of a few hundreds. As to a saving in time, he believes there would be none, "as from one to two days' detention would surely be incurred in the Canal before a steamer could pass from one sea to the other." Anyone who has had experience of the Suez Canal will agree with him here.

The style of Captain Loftus's notes is certainly not polished, but that is perhaps hardly to be expected, as they were made on the spot from the back of an elephant. He is inclined to make additions to the English language, but we doubt whether the world will be inclined to adopt them. His elephants are "the cause of the rumpuses"—surely rather an awkward plural to a not very elegant word; his rivers "snake about," or are "snakeified," and so forth; while his grammar leaves much to be desired, and often obscures the sense. He evidently does not share the prejudice against the word "gentleman," so common in the present day, as he hardly ever mentions his French companions without calling them gentlemen; and he even, when one of them falls ill, talks of sending a steam-launch for "the sick gentleman"—perhaps because he fancies that the "sick man" is a phrase now used to mean one sick man in particular. When he has occasion to mention Sir Stamford Raffles, he calls him a nobleman, but this is perhaps a misprint for noble man, to which epithet no one will dispute Sir Stamford Raffles's claim.

The anecdote of M. Bourgéry and the tiger excites our curiosity, on account of his "covering himself over with anything he found handiest," when he heard it roaring close to him. The phrase would seem to imply that in the Kra jungle there is a considerable choice of materials lying about handy for covering oneself—perhaps rugs, blankets, or sheets? Our own experience of tropical jungles is that the only material available for such a purpose would be the branches of trees or shrubs, the breaking off of which would certainly have attracted the tiger's attention to the spot.

We are interested in Captain Loftus's description of a French solar cooking apparatus, which, he says, cooked a fresh joint of beef to perfection in a few minutes. "This," he adds, "is a simple, effective, and most useful article, and should form part of the kit of every jungle traveller." It would have been a boon to many of his readers if he could have told the exact name of the article, and where it is to be obtained.

In conclusion, we think that Captain Loftus has demonstrated very forcibly what he wished to demonstrate—namely, the difficulty, amounting to impracticability of the canal scheme. The map which is annexed to his little book is also worthy of commendation.

CORRESPONDENCE.

RAILWAYS IN SOUTHERN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—It may interest some of your readers with reference to the progress of railways in Southern India, to hear the following extract, from a native gentleman in high official position at Vizianagram:—"The merchants here are in great hopes of success so soon as the railway in our district is completed. The engineers are now busy surveying the country between the hill region of Raipura beyond the Jeypore Territory, and Parvalapore, our frontier town, in the low country, and there is every prospect of prosperity to the district in general, and the hill tracts of Jeypore in particular, in so much as the necessary minerals and products which are buried in that country for want of proper communication with the plains and markets, will now find speedy sale, and remove a great want and insufficiency in failure of the crops in these parts in bad seasons."

Yours faithfully,

Lympington, Hants, Feb. 10.

THE LICENSE TAX.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In your paper of the 19th of December, 1881, the objectionable means resorted to of assessing and collecting the License Tax in India were sketched. The evils connected with this tax during the past two years have increased. Not only is the imposition very unequal in its incidence, but it is inelastic as a source of revenue.

How a Government calling itself Liberal can have continued to extort from its honest subjects while the dishonest laugh at and evade the tax, is difficult to explain. Members of the Opposition in Parliament will doubtless accuse it of refusing to make any exertion for the welfare of 250 millions of peaceable subjects. Slothfulness causes work to be scamped. But this is the same Government which courageously surrendered an enormous revenue from salt. The estimated loss of revenue was at the time calculated to be upwards of a million and a-half sterling. There is some excuse for delay when we urge on Government the propriety of abolishing the barbarous export tax on rice; that tax is so very lucrative. But what reason can there be for clinging to the unproductive License Tax with the sole result of injuring the reputation of the British Government? Government might levy ten times the amount in the shape of a war tax on cities and towns by lump assessments, such assessments being publicly made, and no favouritism allowed.

The Punjab is supposed by many to be a model province, and yet the manner in which the License Tax is assessed there does not redound to the credit of English officers. In the Simla district 45 per cent. of the assessment has had to be remitted. See page 30 of the Pioneer Mail of the 9th ultimo.

Men in the higher classes are eluding the tax in rapidly increasing numbers, and in proportion as the dishonest succeed in cheating the authorities, so is increased pressure put on those who have honestly paid up. The greatest facilities are afforded for corruption and oppression on the part of subordinate officials.—Your obedient servant, T.

CENTENARY OF THE ASIATIC SOCIETY OF BENGAL.

A SPECIAL meeting to celebrate the centenary of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, was held on Tuesday, the 15th January, at 7.30 p.m., at the rooms of the Society in Park-street; the Hon. H. J. Reynolds, president, in the chair.

The following six gentlemen, duly proposed by the council at the last ordinary meeting of the Society, for election as special honorary members, were balloted for, and declared to have been duly elected:—Dr. James Prescott Joule, F.R.S.; Professor Ernest Haeckel; Charles Meldrum, M.A., F.R.S., F.R.A.S.; Professor H. A. Sayce; E. Senart; and Professor Monier Williams.

The review of the Society's work during the century of its existence, drawn up by the secretaries and Dr. Rajendralala Mitra, was laid upon the table.

Addresses from the following societies, congratulating the Asiatic Society of Bengal upon the occasion of its celebrating the centenary of its existence were read:—The Kon. Preussische Academie der Wissenschaften, Berlin; Deutsche Morgenländische Gesellschaft, Halle; Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, London; Kon. Instituut voor Taal, Land-en Volkenkunde van Nederlandsch Indie, The Hague.

The dinner then took place; the Hon. H. J. Reynolds presiding; the following amongst other gentlemen sat down as guests:—His Excellency the Viceroy; H. W. Primrose, his Excellency's Private Secretary; Captain Clough Taylor, Prof M. Williams, Hon. C. P. Ilbert, Hon. Dr. W. W. Hunter, Gen. T. F. Wilson, Sir S. C. Bayley, Archbishop P. Goethals, Hon. H. J. Reynolds (president), Hon. J. Gibbs, Mr. H. B. Medlicott, Mr. A. W. Croft, Mr. J. Westland, Mr. A. B. Millers, Prince Mahomed Firukh Shah, Raja Satyanand Ghosal, Nawab Syad Ashgar Ali Dilar Jung Khan Bahadur, Prince Jehan Qadr Muhammed Wahid Ali, Nawab Abdul Latif Khan Bahadur, Syed Amir Hussain Khan Bahadur, &c.

After dinner the following toasts and speeches were given and responded to.

The President having proposed the health of the Queen-Empress, proposed the toast of the Viceroy.

His Excellency the Viceroy, who, on rising to respond, was received with cheers, said:—Mr. President and Gentlemen,—I thank you sincerely for the toast which we have just drunk. I thank you, Mr. President, for the terms in which you have proposed, and you, gentlemen, for the reception which you have accorded to it. I can assure you that it is a great pleasure to me to be present here this evening, and thus mark the strong interest which I feel in the prosperity of this Society. The occasion which has brought us together to-night is one which must command the sympathy of all who care for Oriental literature and learning; for we are assembled here to-day to celebrate the centenary of a Society which has for its special object the promotion of the study of Asiatic languages, literature, history, and science. England may be called the home of societies. They spring up there of every kind and for every conceivable purpose. Some of them are extremely ephemeral, and are born to-day and die to-morrow; and but few of them can count a hundred years of life. The fact, therefore, that the Asiatic Society of Bengal has now completed a full hundred years of existence is a proof of the importance of the objects for which it has been established, and of the earnestness and zeal with which its members have laboured to promote those ends. (Applause.) It seems to me that Englishmen may well be proud when they recollect that this Society was first established in the year 1784, and when they call to mind how soon it was after the real commencement of our political rule in this country that we began to take a deep interest in the language, literature, and history of India. Within less than thirty years of the battle of Plassey Englishmen were found looking forward with most prophetic eyes to the future which lay before them; and they set themselves to work to master the hidden treasures of Eastern learning, and thus to lay a solid foundation for our power, in all intelligent knowledge of the people of the country with whom in so marvellous a manner, they had just been brought into close and intimate relations. (Applause.) To me, as a public man, it is peculiarly interesting to see that the founders and the first members of this Society, most of them administrators, or judges, or men with official duties, approached the problem of Government from one of its most important sides, and sought to obtain a real and substantial comprehension of the feelings and genius of the people among whom their lot was to be cast. (Applause.) It is true that this was not their only object; it may not even have been consciously a foremost object with them at all; but it was embodied in their undertaking; by its promotion they conferred great benefits upon this country. (Applause.) From that time up to the present hour, this Society has steadily pursued its work—by library and museum, by the publication of original papers and of many most valuable works in Sanscrit, Arabic, Persian, and other languages; and by providing a centre of intercourse for Oriental scholars, and of information for Oriental students it has laboured to promote the end which its founders had in view. (Applause.) Time will not permit me to detain you by entering upon any biographical sketches of the many eminent men who have been connected with this institution, or I might recall to you the lives and the services to literature and science, both in England and in India, of Sir William Jones, of Sir John Shore, of Colebrooke, of Wilkins, of H. H. Wilson, of James Prinsep, and of the remarkable men who have adorned the Asiatic Society of Bengal. (Applause.) Men who were all distinguished in their respective ways, zealous members of this society, of varied learning and constant study; and who won for themselves the admiration, not only of their own countrymen, but of learned men in all parts of the world. (Applause.) Guided by these men, and by such as these, this society has maintained its position down to the present time, and ever now, in these days, that widened attention to Eastern learning which has of late been given by learned men of all countries, has received no check, and continues to preserve the respect of all who are acquainted with its labours. And now, gentlemen, I am about, I fear, to commit what may be considered an unpardonable sin in an after-dinner speaker, but I trust you to forgive me if I yield to the strong temptation which prompts me to read to you an extract from the words of one whose memory must be foremost in our recollections to-night. There is no name that could come before us on this occasion with the same force of reality as of Sir William Jones. (Applause.) I was much struck last year, in reading the interesting lectures of Professor Max Müller, which were published under the title of "India and what she has to teach us," by an account which I found there, given by Sir William Jones himself, of the feelings with which he first landed in this country. I read you the words, because they are far more eloquent and heart-stirring than any that I could myself command, and because it is well that we should to-night have brought before us the actual thoughts of him whose memory we are met to honour; for though we are primarily assembled here to celebrate the centenary of the Society which he has founded, we are here also to mark our veneration of his character and our gratitude for his services. (Applause.) This is what he said of himself when he approached the shores of India, when he first came out to this country:—"When I was at sea last (August) (that is August 1783) on my voyage to this country (India) I had long and ardently desired to visit, I found one evening, on inspecting the observations of the day, that India lay before us, Persia on our left, whilst a breeze from Arabia blew nearly on our stern. A situation so pleasing in itself, and to me so new, could not fail to awaken a train of reflections in a mind which had early been accustomed to contemplate with delight the eventful histories and agreeable fiction of this Eastern world. It gave me inexpressible pleasure to find myself in the midst of so noble an amphitheatre, almost encircled by the vast regions of Asia, which has ever been esteemed the nurse of sciences, the inventress of delightful and useful arts, the scene of glorious actions, fertile in the productions of human genius, and indefinitely diversified in the forms of religion and government, in the laws, manners, customs, and languages, as well in the features and complexions of men. I could not help remarking how important and extensive a field was yet unexplored, and how many solid advantages unimproved." It seems to me, gentlemen, that in these glowing words we have the germ of this Society. For within a few months after they had sprung up in the mind of your distinguished founder, they found their natural realisation in the establishment of this institution. During the whole time which has since elapsed, the Asiatic Society of Bengal has pursued its way instinct with the same feelings, and bent upon the same aims, as those which rose up before Sir William Jones as he approached the shores of India. It is in the earnest hope that for long years yet to come it will continue to labour earnestly and successfully for these most valuable ends, that I now ask you to join with me in drinking to its prosperity; and I couple with the toast the name of one so well qualified by his high character and varied attainments to fill the honourable office of president, as my friend Mr. Reynolds.

The toast was drunk with loud applause.

The President, in acknowledging the toast traced the progress of the Society from its inauguration in 1878 to the present time, referring to the many distinguished men who had at various times been connected with the Society and to the principal events which had marked its career. In the course of his speech he said:—The Society has now lived and laboured for 100 years, and I have sometimes heard it said that if it has not left its first love, it has in some measure ceased to do its first works. I have known critics point to the illustrious names which adorned its earlier annals, and ask where their successors are to be found at the present day. If there is any ground for this complaint—and when I look at the learning and genius displayed in the volumes of the Asiatic researches, I am sometimes tempted to doubt whether these critics have not reason on their side—I believe the causes are not very far to seek. It must be remembered in the first place that when our Society was founded, the treasures of Indian literature and science were almost unknown to European students. The early members of the Asiatic Society were sustained and stimulated by the excitement of discovery and by the interest which attaches to the exploration of new and untrodden fields of knowledge. In the second place, the pressure of business, both official and mercantile, is far heavier now than it was then. When Horace Hayman Wilson was leaving India, just half a century ago, the Society presented him with a valedictory address, in his reply to which he said that his labours on behalf of the Society had made many hours of leisure in this country glide happily away. The gliding away, whether happily or otherwise, of many hours of leisure is a sensation to which we in these days are entire strangers, and if Wilson had left India in 1883 instead of in 1833, he would hardly have found time to elaborate the learned contributions with which he enriched the records of the Society. But another reason remains, which is, perhaps, the strongest of all. In the early part of this century the author of a paper on any Oriental subject generally gave his thoughts to the world through the medium of the Asiatic Society of Bengal. The Society was not only the recognised channel of such communications but hardly any other channel existed. At present there are numerous societies, numerous magazines and periodicals, through which an audience can be addressed on Oriental questions. If the stream of knowledge may seem to be less deep, it is only because it is more widely diffused; if the treasure appears to be less splendid and massive, it is because it is distributed among a larger number. We take a pardonable pride in the recollection that our Society is the parent institution, from which other Asiatic societies, both in India and elsewhere, have sprung. The Royal Asiatic Society of London came into existence in 1823, and its first director was that very Henry Colebrooke, who had been president of our Society for nine years, from 1806 to 1815. The Bombay Society was established in 1827; that of Ceylon in 1845. The effect of our Society's labours has been felt far beyond the limits of the British Empire and of the English tongue. We were the pioneers in the field of research in which the scholars of France and Germany have since won such splendid triumphs; and across the Atlantic the stimulus of our investigations has quickened into sympathetic activity the intelligence and industry of the Oriental societies of the United States. . . . When the next anniversary of this kind comes round and the society completes its second century, there are members of the society now living, to whom the men of that age will refer with something of the veneration with which we now pronounce the names of Henry Colebrooke and Horace Hayman Wilson. I will not venture to look forward to a still more distant future. I will not presume to say when that artistic personage, the New Zealand traveller, after completing his sketch of the ruins of St. Paul's, takes his ticket, by balloon or submarine railway, for India, he will find the Asiatic Society of Bengal still flourishing in undiminished vigour and activity. But I believe that the Society has still before it a long career of usefulness, and that, even if it could be extinguished to-morrow, it would leave behind it much which the world would not willingly let die. It would leave behind something more precious than its collection of coins and manuscripts, or than even the records in which its history is enshrined—it would leave an example and a remembrance of patient research and self-denying labour, undertaken not from a motive of greed or a desire of glory, but with the single aim of advancing the interests of science, and extending the boundaries of human knowledge. (Applause.)

(The toast was drunk with loud cheers.)

The Hon. J. Gibbs next proposed the guests, coupling with the toast the name of Professor Monier Williams.

Professor Monier Williams, in responding to the toast, said:—I feel a great difficulty in replying to this toast in the capacity of a guest, because I am profoundly conscious that there are other more worthy representatives of the visitors here to-night; but if you will allow me to thank you in the capacity of a debtor, then no person can possibly be more indebted to this Society than I am. The role I have played in the free republic of oriental letters has indeed been a humble one, notwithstanding the kind expressions of my old friend the Hon. Mr. Gibbs, and notwithstanding the great honour you have done me in electing me a honorary member of your Society this evening. The student of Sanscrit—when I began its study—had to traverse, so to speak, a difficult country abounding in steep mountains, deep ravines, and dense jungle. All I can claim to have done is to have formed one of a band of Oriental Macadams, I have done something towards smoothing the roads and facilitating the progress of plodding students who might otherwise have turned back in despair. It is in my performance of this task that you have made me your insolvent debtor. And I am not the only person who is glad of an opportunity of acknowledging his obligations to you. At the recent Oriental Congress at Leiden, a strong opinion was expressed by Dr. Weber and others, that Oriental scholars generally should unite in a common effort to commemorate the centenary of your society by an international tribute of honour. I wish, indeed, that some representative of every branch of Eastern lore, from every university in Europe, were present here to-night, so that no time might be lost in taking action in this matter. Speaking as Boden Professor of Sanscrit at Oxford, and as a student of Sanscrit for more than forty years, I fearlessly maintain that no society has done so much for Sanscrit literature during that period as the Asiatic Society of Bengal. (Applause.) In the Vaisvadeva ceremony performed every day by Orthodox Hindus there is a prayer, "May I live for a hundred years!" This seems to indicate that a hundred years is the natural term of life in India; but your society, I am happy to see, shows no signs of decrepitude. Its vitality is more vigorous than ever. Bear with me a few minutes while I refer to the labours of four of your most illustrious members; of Sir William Jones, your founder; Sir Charles Wilkins, Henry Thomas Colebrooke, and Horace Hayman Wilson. In my address at the Berlin Oriental Congress, three years ago, I ventured to remind German Orientalists of their obligations to these four great men. I said, "Permit me, as an Englishman to speak with pride of those great pioneers of Sanscrit learning, Sir William Jones, Wilkins, Colebrooke and Wilson." "These are the men"—I added—"without whose labours you German scholar, would never have advanced with such rapid strides on the path of Sanscrit learning." (Applause.) Bear with me yet a little longer whilst I trouble you with a few of my personal reminiscences in connection with these four great men. Veteran as I am, I am not quite old enough to have had any personal dealings with your founder, Sir William Jones; but it may not be known to all here that he has two monuments at Oxford, one in the ante-chapel of University College, and the other at St. Mary's University Church. Your founder and I were, therefore, related as Sa-tir-thah, that is, as fellow collegians, and my Oriental ambition was early stimulated by reading his epitaph, feebly expressed though it was, on my way in and out of chapel. If Sir William Jones had done nothing else but translate the laws of Manu and invent a system of transliteration, which forms the basis of that now adopted by all scholars, including my friend Dr. Hunter himself, he would have immortalised his name; but he was what in Sanscrit we call nanasastra visdrada; and it may truly be said that of him nihil tetigit quod non ornavit. (Applause.) But now a word on Sir Charles Wilkins. I confess my early recollections of him were not quite so pleasant. (Laughter.) He was the Socrates of Sanscrit grammar who brought down that God-given grammar from the clouds to dwell among plain Englishmen. In my early days his grammar was the only one procurable. It cost three guineas, and like the work of all pioneers, was very roughly done and swarmed with mistakes. To him also belongs the honour of having written a Sanscrit inscription on the gold medal awarded to all who were highly distinguished in Sanscrit at Haileybury which few could translate—(laughter)—and to this day I am not quite certain how it ought to be translated. (Laughter and cheers.) It ran thus:—Atma-buddhi prósāda jam yat Sukham tat Sáttvikam. The happiness resulting from the cultivation (?) of one's own intellect is the only true happiness. Of the great Colebrooke I will only say that, in common with other scholars, I constantly do poor to him as to an incarnation of the spirit of accuracy. He is the only grammarian worthy of a niche in the same temple with the great Indian grammarian Panini, and the only scholar to whom Patanjali's description of Panini, Pramana Bhuta Acaryah, is justly applicable. Truly India is the land of contradictions and inconsistencies. (Laughter.) It has produced an immense series of accurate grammarians and accurate writers, and has fostered the mathematical precision of a Colebrooke, yet I feel sure that if Mr. Mathew Arnold were to take a walk through the Calcutta Exhibition he would blame Indians for their inaccuracies, as much as he blamed Englishmen the other day for their want of lucidity. (Laughter and applause.) Here is an amusing specimen of one of the notices in the Exhibition. The "refreshment-rooms for Mahomedans is on the east-west corner." (Laughter.) Other inaccuracies have a vein of satire—for instance, an image of Bali, the demon of the infernal regions is labelled by the Indian artists, King of the Netherlands. (Loud laughter.) All honour, then, to the apostles of accuracy—Panini, Katyayana, Patangali, Colebrooke, in this land of inaccuracies. (Laughter and applause.) And now, what shall I say of my illustrious predecessor in the Bodley chair, Horace Hayman Wilson? To him I owe most of all. I remember as a youngster, soon after I received my appointment in the Indian Civil Service, I was made to go and call on him, and that my first exclamation on leaving his presence was—"What a dry old stick!" (Laughter.) But I soon found out that beneath that dry exterior a warmer and truer heart never throbbed (applause), and that the stick possessed an intellect as pointed as the Kusha-grass, Kusagra-buddhi, and full of the force of genius like the Vedic Arani. His death was to me like the death of a father; and I have ever since been an ardent worshipper of his memory and a humble follower in his footsteps. (Applause.) Before I sit down, allow me to claim for the Oxford Indian Institute some kinship with your great Society. The first object of that institute will, of course, be the teaching of young men; but I feel sure that when some of you great scholars visit it, as I hope you will one day do, you will be conscious of a thrill of sympathy on reading the inscription carved over its entrance—"Isvara Kripaya nityam arya vidyā mahiyatām aryaavartanga bhūmyos-ca mithomaitri vivardhatam." By the favour of God may the learning and literature of India be ever held in honour, and may the mutual friendship of India and England constantly increase. (Loud applause.)

THE RATIFICATION OF THE CONCORDAT.

THE Concordat which represents the surrender of the Viceroy and Mr. Albert to the Defence Association, has now been ratified by the Select Committee to which the Bill was referred. It is impossible, therefore, for the authorities at Government House to go back upon themselves, since the body of gentlemen who have reported in favour of the Concordat were, practically, invested by the Viceroy and his advisers with full authority to give final deliverance on the questions at issue. It may, therefore, be taken that should the Bill become law, as it is expected it will, on the 25th instant, it will come into force on the 1st of May. With respect to the terms on which the compromise has been arranged, there is but little room for further discussion. The sensibilities of the native population have been fairly taken into account. It is in order to appease the racial prejudices which have been unfortunately raised by Mr. Ilbert's legislative proposition that additional powers have been given to all the district magistrates and sessions judges, even when they are not Europeans, and when it may become their duty to summon English defendants before their tribunals. But, on the other hand, the possibility of these additional powers being used to the disadvantage of the Englishman who may be accused of a criminal offence is destroyed by the optional jury clause. That clause, it should never be forgotten, constitutes the victory which has been won by the Defence Association. It cannot be too frequently repeated that, by the agitation which has been successfully carried out against the Ilbert Bill in its original form, the European resident in India has secured the right of having the question of his guilt or his innocence decided by a jury in which his own countrymen shall form a majority. This is a right which must never be surrendered by the men who have fought the battle so well and so successfully during the last few months. But it would be a mistake to suggest that the work of the Defence Association in respect to this matter is now altogether finished. Our own columns have, during the last few days, afforded a sufficient indication that the compromise which has been arrived at is not altogether satisfactory to some of the communities of planters in the mufasal. The difficulty which these gentlemen, to whom the executive of the Association in Calcutta owe a large debt of gratitude, find in accepting the compromise is more one of detail than one of principle. Their objections to the Concordat are now narrowed down to a mere question of working out the jury system. It has been shown by more than one intelligent correspondent—and the same point has been made at meetings in several important indigo and tea planting districts—that, in order to secure an absolute and impartial majority of Europeans, some alteration may have to be made in the Indian system, by which a bare majority of a jury is sufficient for the purposes of obtaining a conviction. It is for the able and well-informed gentlemen who have so thoroughly done the executive work of the Defence Association, to take counsel with their supporters in the mufasal, and seriously to inquire whether some further effort is not necessary in the direction of obtaining such an alteration in the Indian law as would, in some degree, approach the English rule, and in accordance with which a certain proportionate majority in a jury would be required before a conviction could be obtained. This is really the only change in the situation which is marked by the presentation of the Select Committee's report to the Legislative Council.

THE EAST INDIA ASSOCIATION AND THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL.

THE East India Association is doing good work at home in many ways; in no way more or better work than in calling public attention to, and denouncing the injustice of, the proposed new Rent Law—Ilbert Bill No. 2, as it has been aptly called. At a recent meeting of the Association, over which Lord Stanley of Alderley presided, and which was very numerously attended, Mr. Roper Lethbridge, our late Press Commissioner, read a very able paper, which had for the title, "The Mischief Threatened by the Bengal Tenancy Bill." In it Lord Ripon's Communist policy of confiscation was thoroughly exposed, the binding nature of the contract entered into between the Government and the zemindars at the time of the Perpetual Settlement emphatically insisted on, and the material injury sure to ensue to the bulk of the Bengal ryots themselves when strife is stirred up between them and the landowners clearly pointed out. In the discussion that followed the reading of his paper, Mr. Lethbridge's arguments met with support and confirmation from Mr. C. T. Buckland, late of the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, from Mr. Stewart Reid, late of the Board of Revenue, North West Provinces, Mr. Taylor, the famous Commissioner of Patna in the Mutiny time, Mr. Arathoon, Mr. Chapman, and Mr. DaCosta, the well-known Calcutta merchant and political economist. The latter gentleman remarked that the Bill was supposed to be the outcome of a liberal policy; but that, he said, could not be, because it violated the most cherished of Liberal principles. A Liberal policy upheld justice, but this Bill would involve grievous and undeserved wrong on a class whose unswerving loyalty and valuable services, especially at critical times, such as the Mutiny of 1857, and the more recent scarcity in Behar, had been repeatedly acknowledged by the Government of India. A Liberal policy professed to be based upon honesty, but this Bill proposed that the Government which had sold the land with its proprietary rights solemnly proclaimed, should dispossess the purchaser of such rights without refunding the price received for them. A Liberal policy was said to rest on truth and good faith. Were truth and good faith to be looked for in the statement now made, that the zemindars were not the proprietors of their estates when the British Government had for a whole century repeatedly and solemnly declared the contrary, and their declarations had throughout been sanctioned by the Legislature and upheld by the Law Courts? Was it to be believed that those solemn declarations and their confirmation by the highest authority in the land were all false?

It must be confessed, we think, even by upholders of the provisions of the proposed Bengal Tenancy Bill, that the gentlemen whose names are recorded above have had, in different ways, much experience in connection with the law of landlord and tenant and the collection of rents in India, that they are men whose opinion is honestly given, and the outcome of whose experience must carry weight with it to any unbiassed judgment.

The upholders of the Bill at the meeting were a Mr. Arthur Knatchbull Connell, a Mr. Krishna Lal Dutta, Mr. W. Martin Wood, and Mr. Donald Reid. Mr. Connell is a gentleman who has evidently never been in India, and who is ingeniously of opinion that "to a large extent, the famine in North Behar was due to the indigo planters." That is to say, we suppose that the indigo planters were able, by means of some occult magic influences at their command, to override the laws of nature, and withhold a due, average rainfall from North Behar. Mr. Connell would probably be surprised to hear that this failure of due rainfall which he imagines to have been of their contrivance, prevented planters for the most part from raising any crop of indigo on their lands during the famine year, and was the cause of a very serious money loss to them. Mr. Krishna Lal Dutta says he desires "justice for the toiling millions of his fellow-countrymen." He does not define what he means by justice. Perhaps communism; perhaps merely an inclination on his part to speechifying and gas. Or perhaps, having left India, and got into land league latitudes, he has managed to forget his actual experiences in this country, and with the politeness peculiar to his nation, assimilated the frothiest part of his present political surroundings, and elected to look out upon the world through land league spectacles. Mr. W. Martin Wood is a gentleman who may know something about the town of Bombay and the Parsees there; but who certainly knows nothing about the rest of India. From a statement made by a certain zemindar in the Gya district (name and date not given), Mr. Donald Reid quotes as follows:—"The law entitles the Behar ryot to a pottah (lease) and receipts, yet he seldom, if ever, gets any. The law declares the exaction of abwabs (illegal cesses) illegal; yet how numerous and heavy are the abwabs that we, zemindars, exact from him? His mouroosee (occupancy) tenures are altogether exempted by law from liability to enhancement; yet how at each change in, and transfer of, the zemindaree, and how easily when he sets up his head against us, we, without regard to law or justice, add something to it every year? The law protects him against ejection, yet how often, without any opposition from him or without resort to law and procedure, we turn him out of his and his father's land? It is illegal, and a criminal offence to extort rent from him by duress; yet our goomastahs and barahils (rent collectors) go and do it at the door of his house, preventing egress and ingress, and deprive him of the use of our village wells until he pays off our rents; and how frequently for the same purpose we bring him to our hutchery (office) and detain him there against his will until he satisfies our demand? The law has guaranteed to the ryot every right in property and every facility to enjoy the fruits of his labour unmolested; yet meekly and quietly he submits to all the indignities and ill-treatment to which the zemindar subjects him, and suffers his rights to be thus infringed; and he seldom if ever thinks of going to court for relief; the cause of this being the terrifying influence exercised over him by the bosta (bundle of cooked accounts) of the patwari and goomastah, &c." And Mr. Reid endorses this "statement!" As usual, he is trying to work honestly in what he believed to be a good cause but as we all know that good authority, the Editor of the Englishman, years ago called our worthy brother planter Utopian in his ideas. Since he has never been in Gya, however, we cannot attach much importance to his backing up of the Gya zemindar's remarks, and we deny in toto that the ryot of any part of Behar is in the least down-trodden by his zemindar. To use sporting parlance in our argument, wherever the zemindar tries to levy an illegal cess, the gentle ryot has invariably 7lbs. in hand. Truly, Mr. Roper Lethbridge, in a brief reply to all the feeble opposition of which we have been trying to give a sketch, had reason on his side when he observed that "the remarkable weakness of the case put forward by the few speakers who had supported the Bill, really left nothing to be replied to by those who opposed it." Mr. Lethbridge's address to the East India Association was exhaustive, and in the nature of such things, lengthy—far too lengthy for extract in these columns. We must content ourselves with mention of a few of his more salient arguments, over and above those referred to at the commencement of this article. He pointed out that, besides being a distinct breach of good faith, the proposed new Bill involves a direct interference with that right of contract between man and man which is held as a cardinal article of faith by all sound political economists. It will be likely to involve zemindars and ryots alike in a war of litigation to which they are already only too prone, and which must end in ruin to many of them. It will strengthen the hands and increase the power of the usurers, men who have already too much power for the well-being of the commonwealth. It is more arbitrary and "Irish" than the Irish Land Act even, and bids fair to prove as politically mischievous and anarchy engendering in its results. Finally, Mr. Lethbridge points out that if the new Rent Bill should become law, it will confer important rights upon a newly created class of middlemen, and not upon the actual cultivators of the soil. And against these newly created middlemen, cultivators of the soil will possess "no rights whatever, not even those rights which they now possess against the zemindars." "Save me from my friends," the ryots would cry, in short, sua si bona norint.—Indigo and Tea Planters Gazette.

SPRIT OF THE INDIAN PRESS.

LORD RIPON STRAINING THE ROYAL PREROGATIVE. THE Calcutta correspondent of the Pioneer says:—"As a fact showing the intensity of recent feeling here, and the strength of the opposition to the Government policy on the Ilbert Bill, it should be placed on record that Mr. Thomas is the hero of the hour among a large section of the community, while Mr. Evans, to whose effort is mainly due the removal of the tension between the Viceroy and his fellow-countrymen, is barely thanked for his strenuous and continued exertions to bring about the peaceful settlement. Even Mr. Keswick, whose determined refusal to accept the Bill as first amended, gave confidence to the Opposition as a body, is blamed by some extremists for having ratified the concordat. But day by day interest is decreasing in the whole business, and as excited feelings pass away, men will doubtless form more correct judgments upon actions which are as yet only partly understood. Attention is still directed to the controversy on the Queen's Proclamation, and it is urged that to claim any binding force in its relations to the Queen's subjects for a Proclamation that was issued only on the royal responsibility and without legislative sanction, is distinctly unconstitutional, and an attempt to extend the royal prerogative."

THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT AT MEERUT.

THE Meerut correspondent of the Lahore paper gives an agreeable picture of the manner in which the Duke and Duchess of Connaught comport themselves in their new sphere of life. He says:—

"That the Duke of Connaught is popular goes without saying. His frank, affable manner, his determination to understand everything that comes in his way, social or official, his genial interest in all that is going on, have given him a place in our estimation that must revive—if any want reviving—the dying embers of loyalty. His Royal Highness dines at the messes, looks on at the cricket, plays at lawn tennis, just like any ordinary mortal; and all the terrors of stiff formality and rigorous rules of etiquette have disappeared before the charms of His Royal Highness's manner. Naturally, the Duchess cannot mix so freely in Indian society as her husband, and the comparative insolation must be at times irksome, if not depressing; yet those who have been honoured with an invitation to dinner say that she is 'charming.' So far, her only appearance in a public 'function' has been at the distribution of the prizes to the children of St. John's School, an estimable institution for the children of the poorer Anglo-Indian and European classes. Those most concerned—the children themselves—were said to have been much impressed with the gracious manner in which the books, toys, knives, &c., which form the stock in trade of such ceremonies, were handed them by Her Royal Highness."

MAIL NEWS.

The Viceroy with the Marchioness of Ripon and party were to leave Calcutta early on Monday Jan. 21, in the Government steamer Clive, and would reach Madras on Thursday evening, where they would halt for twenty-four hours and then proceed to Hyderabad. His Excellency would remain there for about six days and spend two or three days more at Madras on his return journey.

Mr. Grant Duff was to accompany the Viceroy from Madras to the Deccan, and be present at the installation of the Nizam.

The Duke and Duchess of Connaught paid a visit to Delhi the week before the departure of the mail. Their Royal Highnesses returned to Meerut on Saturday evening, Jan. 26.

The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has made rapid progress towards recovery during the last few days, and is now almost convalescent. The operation appears to have succeeded beyond the hopes of the surgeons, and it seems possible that short leave and a sea voyage may completely establish His Honour's health.

Sir Maurice FitzGerald, Knight of Kerry, and Equerry to the Duke of Connaught, is indisposed.

The festivities in connection with the installation of the Nizam of Hyderabad will commence on Feb. 4.

The manoeuvres at the Bangalore Camp of Exercise have been continued throughout the week. The Governor of Madras arrived at the camp on Wednesday.

Sir Frederick Roberts, Commander in Chief of the Madras Army, with his staff, was to leave the camp of exercise on the 29th ult. for Bangalore, and thence proceed on the following day to Hyderabad to be present at the installation of H. B., the Nizam of Hyderabad.

A large and influential meeting of natives, presided over by Sir T. Madhava Rao, was held on Saturday, Jan. 19, at Madras, to concert measures to provide a suitable reception to the Viceroy on the occasion of his visit to that city.

The Aka chiefs have surrendered their captives to General Hill's force, and the object of the expedition having been accomplished, the troops will shortly be withdrawn.

The Viceroy has received a telegram from the Secretary of State, informing him that the Queen Empress has heard of the death of Baboo Keshub Chunder Sen, and has graciously desired His Excellency to convey to Baboo Karuna Chunder Sen, the eldest son of the deceased, an expression of the regret with which Her Majesty has received the news, and of her condolence with his family in the loss they have sustained.

The Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab has granted the unconditional release of the three Mohmund Waziri Malicks who have been detained in Lahore since 1881 as political prisoners. This is a reward for their general good behaviour and for the assistance lately afforded by the Waziris in carrying out the Tukht-i-Suliman expedition and Gomul Pass survey.

The Hindu community of Calcutta contemplate holding a great meeting in the Town Hall, with a view to raising a memorial to the late Keshub Chunder Sen, the distinguished Brahmo leader.

Lieut. Loudon, of the 26th Regiment, N.I., was drowned on Sunday, Jan. 20, in the Cabul river, whilst on a boating excursion with Lieutenant Ravenshaw of the same regiment.

Lieut. Churchill, the officiating adjutant of the 12th Royal Lancers, had a serious fall from his horse at the Bangalore Camp of Exercise a few days since. He was picked up insensible and has since been suffering from concussion of the brain.

At a meeting of the Viceregal Legislative Council on Friday Jan. 18, the select committee on the Ilbert Bill presented their report, which embodies the modifications proposed in the bill under the concordat.

Our Muscat correspondent states that the Mahdi has despatched emissaries to several towns in the Persian Gulf, with a view to obtaining proselytes in that quarter.

A petition from a number of respectable native gentlemen in the Burdwan division has been presented to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, protesting against natives being invested with the powers of an English magistrate.

The hall given by the Entertainment Committee in the Town Hall, Calcutta, on the 16th Jan., was largely attended.

Practical experiments are being carried out at Calcutta with some of the machinery at the Exhibition. On Thursday, Jan. 17, Messrs. Fowler's steam ploughs and cultivators, suitable for indigo and tea gardens, were at work on the Maidan. The Viceroy was among the persons present watching the experiments.

Abdul Rahman's sons have arrived at Jellalabad, accompanied by a regiment of cavalry and one regiment of infantry.

It is reported that the Sipahs and the Aka Kheyls, who have long been at variance, are fighting, and the Aka Kheyls have got the Pass Afridis and the Jowakies to promise assistance.

Anthrax has appeared amongst the military horses at Mooltan.

The Ven. Archdeacon Warlow, of Madras, is dangerously ill from typhoid fever.

Lord Mayo, son of the late Governor-General of India, is expected to arrive in India shortly on a visit.

Owing to the mortality from cholera in Bombay quarantine has been instituted at Aden against arrivals from Bombay.

A small comet has made its appearance in the Western heavens and is attracting much attention in India.

[From the Bombay Gazette, Jan. 25.]

Brigadier General Oldershaw, C.B., commanding in Sind, was to leave Kurrachee on the 12th inst. by mail train for Hyderabad and Jacobabad on inspection duty. Colonel Griffin, R. H. A., commands at Kurrachee during General Oldershaw's absence.

Lieut. Colonel Iredell, Bombay Staff Corps, has been transferred to the Staff Pay List.

The death is reported of Major J. G. Hall, R.E., Executive Engineer, Cawnpore Division, Lower Ganges Canal.

Major D. J. S. McLeod, Deputy Quartermaster General, Madras Army Headquarters, proceeds on furlough to Europe, a Madras paper states, after the camp of exercise, and will be temporarily succeeded by Colonel N. Swanston, Assistant Quartermaster General, Bangalore Division, whose place at Bangalore will be filled by Major Hutchins, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster General, Western District.

The following postings of R.A. officers have been ordered:—Colonel B. L. Gordon from Dalhousie to Bangoon, for duty with R.A. at that station; Captain C. H. Rickards from Fort William to Rawulpindi to join No. 2 Mountain Battery, 1st Brigade, Scottish Division; Captain M. Beresford from Ferozepore to England, to join No. 1 Battery, 1st Brigade, London Division, on exchange; and Lieutenant Colonel T. Robinson from Peshawar to Meerut, to join E Battery A Brigade.

Captain E. W. Chalmers, Squadron Officer, 7th Bengal Cavalry, will proceed on furlough to England shortly.

Captains St. G. M. Kirke and A. Heathcote, and Lieutenants W. M. Ellis and W. R. Morton, Royal Engineers, have been placed under orders for duty in the Bengal Presidency. Captain W. Peacocke, R.E., is also expected shortly for duty in Bengal.

Captain O'Brien, 2nd Devonshire Regiment, on sick leave in England, is to be placed on retired pay from the 2nd inst.

Captain Blissett, D Company, Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps, has been granted three months' leave from the 11th inst.

Lieutenant Faure Field, Military Account Department, Poona, has been deputed on duty to Dapolie, in connection with the Pension Pay Office there.

It has been decided that pensioned warrant officers, holding honorary commissions are entitled to gratuitous medical attendance both for themselves and their families, whether residing within or without cantonment limits.

Surgeon L. T. Young is on his way to join the Akha field force. This officer only returned from Egypt a few weeks ago.

Surgeon J. C. Lucas, I. M. D., in medical charge of the 23rd N. L. I., at Ahmedabad, has obtained two years' furlough to Europe.

The head-quarters and left wing of the 4th Bengal Native Infantry, from Alipore, Calcutta, proceeded to Sylhet on service on the 8th instant, and were expected to arrive at Fanchungunge on the 15th January.

The Government of India have sanctioned the grant of prize-money at the rate of Rs. 2 for every effective member of the Rajputana Volunteer Rifle Corps, thus recognising the corps as a railway one. But why the Railway Volunteers should be treated exceptionally in this particular is not clear.

A correspondent writes from Quetta, under date the 17th instant, to the Sind Gazette:—"On the morning of the 31st ultimo Sergeant Young, of 7-1 R.A., who had been a patient in the Station Hospital, was reported missing, and no trace of him being gained, search parties were sent out, but Young could not be found. Last evening, however, a watchmaker by trade, named Kootubshow, gave information to the authorities that he had seen the body of Young lying near the hills, about two miles out of the station. A party being despatched to the spot indicated by Kootubshow, the body being discovered was brought in. An inquest will be held to-day, and the funeral takes place this evening. It appears that Sergeant Young had been suffering from his head, and that for some time past he had shown signs of an unsound mind."

It has been decided by the Government of India that a military officer, under the furlough rules of 1875, who, while on general leave at any place east of the 40th degree of east longitude, obtains furlough out of India in continuation of such general leave, will be held to have commenced his furlough on the date of his departure from the place at which he may be spending his general leave.

The universal condemnation of khakee as a dress for soldiers on all occasions in the hot weather has had its effect, and a general order just issued says:—"In modification of the instructions contained in G. O. 62 of 1882, and in G. O. 20 of 1883, the Commander in Chief is pleased to direct that white clothing be resumed by staff officers and British troops, during the hot weather, as a parade dress. Khakee will continue to be worn at musketry, fatigues, &c., and for this purpose each man should be required to keep up two suits."

The news of the expected transfer of Lieutenant Hutchinson, Officiating Wing Officer, 23rd N.I., to the Punjab Frontier Force, appears to be premature.

With the mania for Volunteer Cavalry, Mounted Infantry, Marine Artillery, and what not, the Allahabad paper thinks the practical step might be taken of attaching one or two machine guns to every important volunteer corps, men being specially trained to work them, and their fellows in the ranks becoming familiar with their fire by seeing the effect produced in field firing.

There is no truth in the telegram to a contemporary that the East Indian Railway Volunteer Corps, the finest in India will go into abeyance for one year. It is true that some dissatisfaction has been expressed at Howrah, caused by the action of the Railway authorities in taking the drill shed away from the Volunteers, but the company at Howrah forms but a small portion of the corps.

The Civil and Military Gazette says:—"About four months ago the Commander in Chief called for reports from officers commanding corps and batteries, upon the subject of khaki clothing. The condemnation of it as the summer clothing for the British soldier, in time of peace, was all but unanimous; and it is upon these reports that the Commander in Chief has decided to re-introduce white clothing."

COURT-MARTIAL.—At a general court-martial, assembled at Dugshai on the 28th December, Private Michael McCormack, 1st Battalion the Leinster Regiment, was arraigned on the charge of having, at the military prison, Dugshai, on 12th December, struck on the head with his clenched fist his superior officer, in the execution of his office, Surgeon Charles Alfred Webb, in medical charge of the prison. The Court found the prisoner guilty of the charge, and sentenced him to suffer penal servitude for life. The minute of H.E. the Commander in Chief on the case states:—"I confirm the finding and sentence of the court, but mitigate the sentence to penal servitude for a term of twenty years."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1884.

"DACOITY IN EXCELSIS."

At one of the recent meetings of the landowners of Bengal that have been held in Calcutta to protest against the Bengal Tenancy Bill, Mr. Acharjya, a great zemindar of the Maimansingh District, deliberately charged Lord Ripon and the Government of India with a criminal tampering with the rights of property in their reckless desire to upset the Permanent Settlement. Mr. Acharjya characterised Lord Ripon's and Mr. Ilbert's determination to pass the Bengal Tenancy Bill as "dacoity in excelsis." It may be necessary to explain to our English readers that "dacoity (or "dakaiti") means "gang robbery." It is a serious, a most deplorable, thing that the Government of India should be publicly accused of being no better than a gang of robbers, and this too by one of the persons robbed. And it is a still more deplorable thing that it is impossible to acquit any member of the Indian Government, who may vote for this iniquitous Bill, of complicity in this great political crime. There is not, we make bold to say, a single member of Lord Ripon's Council who would not recoil from such conduct in his private capacity, as that to which the Viceroy and his doctrinaire Law-member are now driving their colleagues as a body.

It may be alleged, in extenuation of this "dacoity in excelsis," that Lord Ripon presents to the tenant that which he filches from the landlord: Sic vos non vobis lanificatis oves—if the landlord is fleeced, the fleece is transferred to the tenant. But this is not altogether the whole truth. It must be remembered that the Indian Government, when it transfers property from the pocket of the landlord to that of the tenant in Bengal, really creates a fund available for taxation. So long as the property remains in the hands of the zemindar, the remembrance of the Permanent Settlement causes the Government some little twinge of conscience at any proposal to annex it in the form of taxes—even Sir George Campbell, when he taxed the land of Bengal, felt himself bound to call the tax a "cess," and also promised some compensatory legislation, which never came off. But as soon as this property has been transferred to the ryot, less robust consciences than that of Sir George Campbell will find it easy to devise methods of raising a rich harvest of taxation. If the Bengal Tenancy Bill passes, Mr. Ilbert's next achievement may not improbably be a Bill to enforce a 50 per cent. ad valorem tax on all sales of tenures by ryots to money-lenders—a move that would for a time double the revenue of Bengal, and effectually carry out Lord Ripon's policy of "killing the goose that lays the golden eggs."

MR. CUST ON THE RUSSIAN ADVANCE TOWARDS INDIA.

COLONEL YULE was quite right, when he wrote to the Times to rebuke Mr. Bertram Currie's fulsome adulation of the Prime Minister, in declaring that Mr. Gladstone's peculiar ways have done much to alienate from the Liberal Party a vast number of those who in the old Palmerstonian days were proud to call themselves Liberals. This is especially true of Anglo-Indians; and most of all, perhaps, is it true of Bengal civilians. Mr. R. N. Cust is probably the sole surviving Punjab official of eminence who would still permit himself—doubtless on the strength of his attachment to Palmerstonian Liberalism—to be accounted a disciple of the degenerate Liberalism of the present day. A special interest, therefore, on this account attaches to Mr. Cust's views on that part of Indian politics on which were based Mr. Gladstone's most furious denunciations of Lord Beaconsfield's and Lord Lytton's Indian policy.

Fortunately, Mr. Cust brought a great many other qualifications—including some of even greater practical value than the saving grace of neo-Liberalism—to the discharge of the task he set himself the other day at the Royal United Service Institution. His natural ability, his long experience as a Punjab officer, and his recent visit to the Russian starting-point in the East, have evidently been too much for his Liberal orthodoxy. Of course, his paper was bound to begin with a declaration of orthodoxy; and here it is :—

"I disclaim all Russophobia, and the least particle of antipathy to Russia. I look upon that great Power as a fellow-worker with England in the civilisation of Asia; still, when great interests are at stake, it is well to know what our friends and our neighbours are about, however kindly intended and unselfish they may be, or pretend to be."

Very nearly all the drivel of the Radical party about "Russophobia" is written or spoken by those who are grossly ignorant of India altogether. Mr. Cust might well afford to disdain the suspicion of being a Russophobist in the Gladstonian, or impossible and grotesque, sense of the term. But if he means to say he is not a Russophobist in the sense in which those are so to whom Mr. Gladstone applied the epithet, we think he is mistaken. He himself says :—

"The problem of the invasion of India by some Power westward of the River Indus has been before me ever since I was sent forty years ago by the late Lord Ellenborough, Governor General of India, to the north-west frontier of India in the Political Department."

And again :—

"India could not look on unmoved, and when Kaufmann in 1878 collected an army at Tashkend to make a demonstration against British India at the very moment of the Berlin Congress, it was felt that the mask was dropped. If in a game of chess the player lays his finger on a piece, even if he does not move it, his policy is disclosed to his adversary. Thus Kaufmann's menace, though only a menace, showed clearly that British India was the quarter in which Russia intended hereafter to operate if brought into collision with England. The distance of Tashkend from Russia proper, and the all but impossibility of connecting it by a railway, was one factor in the problem which had to be considered."

"Suddenly, however, the basis of operations was shifted from the Sir Daria to the Caspian Sea, and the eyes of those who watched the game saw clearly that Russia had an easier way to operate upon India than by the River Oxus and the Hindu Kush, and each year has made this fact clearer, and this is the object of my present communication. The matter is not new to the inner circle of experts, and to those who have studied the subject, but it is not so well known to the general public as it should be. The last link of the chain was forged when at the end of 1882 the railway was opened from Tiflis to Bakú."

It is probably easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for an honest man effectively to study the history and the present conditions of the Russian advance, and still to wallow in the mire of Radical indifference to it. Of the Trans-Caspian Railway, Mr. Cust says that it—

"Now proudly takes its place in the railway books of the Russian Empire, though I have never met anyone who had travelled by it, nor did the railway inspector who accompanied me to Bakú venture across to look at it; there is no question but that it exists, but for strictly military and aggressive purposes."

And on the whole geographical question, Mr. Cust concludes:—

"Summing up the whole distance from Michaelovsk, the basis on the Caspian, to Herat, 'the Gate of India,' we have the following ascertained distances:—

| | English miles. |
|--------------------------------|-------------------------------|
| Michaelovsk to Kizil Arvat.... | 147 (railroad) |
| Kizil Arvat to Askabad..... | 135 (road, railroad proposed) |
| Askabad to Saraskh..... | 185 } surveyed |
| Saraskh to Herat..... | 202 } |
| | 669 |

"Of this distance nearly one-half lies within Russian territory, the remainder may be deemed de facto debatable land, until the neighbourhood is reached of Herat, but de jure Afghanistan is bounded by the Hari Rûd.

"There is little reason for doubt that the corps d'armée which I left at Michaelovsk could occupy Herat long before any force from British India could reach it. Herat is distant 599 miles from Sibi, the terminus of the Indian railway system, and 522 miles from Kizil Arvat, the terminus of the Russian system, but the two roads are not equally open to an invading army; the Indian army would have to fight its way."

He adds:—

"Let me not be mistaken; the occupation of Herat is not synonymous with the occupation of British India; nor has Herat been occupied yet, nor, except as a diversion in time of a European war, does its occupation come into the sphere of practical politics, and many a banner will be rent, and many a warrior will lick the dust, before a Russian crosses the River Indus. Still, the mere occupation of Herat by a Power from the West would be an incalculable misfortune, for the report would circulate in an exaggerated form in every bazaar throughout British India, and that feeling of quiet—the Pax Romana—which has so long existed, will have passed away for ever. Nor would the continuous existence of a great European Power, even if peaceably inclined, be other than a misfortune. At present India is isolated, shut in by the sea and mountain ranges, with no desire to penetrate, or have any relations beyond. The necessity of keeping up a great frontier army would be a burden beyond the resources of the State Revenue in a country where military conscription is impossible."

And, finally, of the certainty of the Russian armies reaching the Indian frontier:—

"By no conceivable policy can it much longer be avoided. It may be regarded as one of the coming events which throw a shadow on the next quarter of a century. If remonstrances were made at St. Petersburg against a further advance, it would be met by an assurance that no advance was intended; and yet it would be made; if threats were made, the advance would only be accelerated."

It has been decided that Clause 70 of the Government of India Army Circular of 1883, which authorises the discontinuance of the sabretache by infantry officers of the Indian Army, is also applicable to officers of infantry volunteers.

HOME NEWS.

OBITUARY.—Lieutenant-General Nathaniel Octavius Simpson Turner, C.B., died last week, aged 55. He entered the Army as second lieutenant in the Royal Artillery in 1847, became a first lieutenant in 1848, and was promoted to a captaincy in 1854. He served in the Crimean campaign, taking part in the siege of Sebastopol, for which service he obtained the medal with clasp, the brevet rank of major, the Fifth Class of the Medjidie, and the Turkish medal. In 1858 he went out to India, and was engaged at the siege and capture of Lucknow, and also took part in the affair of Tigree, the relief of Azimghur, the action near Azimutghur, the operations in the Jungle, and the capture of Jugdespore. He was also engaged as brigade-major to the Oude Field force, under Lord Clyde, in 1858-59, and was present at the capture of the Fort of Amatheh, and the action of Dundeikera. For these latter services he obtained the brevet rank of lieutenant colonel, the medal with clasp, and was nominated a Companion of the Order of the Bath. His subsequent promotions in the Army were—lieutenant colonel 1871, colonel and major general 1880, and lieutenant general recently.

THE NIZAM'S STATE RAILWAYS.—We have received the following communication with reference to His Highness the Nizam's Guaranteed State Railways Company:—"His Highness the Nizam's Guaranteed State Railways Company (Limited), 7, Great Winchester-street, London, E.C., Feb. 8.—Sir,—Referring to Reuter's telegram from Hyderabad, dated the 5th inst., to the effect that the Nizam is opposed to the railway scheme recently projected under the guarantee of his Government, and that a deputation charged to make representations against that scheme would wait upon the Viceroy during his stay at Hyderabad, I am authorised by Sirdar Diler Jung, the representative of that Government, to forward you, with a request that you will publish it, copy of a telegram just received by him from the newly-appointed Prime Minister.—I am Sir, yours obediently, G. H. M. BATTEN, Secretary.—(Copy).—Hyderabad, Deccan, Feb. 7. From Nawab Salar Jung. I have seen your message to Resident. Nizam's Government has no intention of repudiating engagements made on behalf of the State by the late provisional Government. I know nothing of the rumoured deputation."

INDIAN APPEAL CASES.—In the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on Tuesday judgment was given in the case of Ishri Singh v. Baldeo Singh. This was an appeal from a decree of the Judicial Commissioners of Oude of April 19, 1881, affirming a decision of the officiating District Judge of Lucknow. Mr. J. T. Woodroffe was counsel for the appellant; Mr. Cowie, Q.C., and Mr. J. G. W. Sykes appeared for the respondent. The suit was brought by the appellant to recover possession of an estate called Kahnman, by virtue of an alleged will of the original talukdar of March 8, 1860, as well as under the Act relating to intestate succession in Oude talukas, and to obtain other property according to family custom. The decision of both the Indian Courts rested on the validity and effect of a document, dated June 28, 1871, executed by Maharaj Singh, the last holder of the estate, which, as both courts held, passed the estate and the other property to the respondent, who is the younger brother of Maharaj Singh and of the appellant. The latter imputed that the deed had been executed by reason of undue influence. An incident in the case was that the appellant had been sentenced to five years' rigorous imprisonment for fraudulently using an alleged will, which had been in a previous suit declared to be a forgery. Their Lordships now gave judgment dismissing the appeal, with costs.

COUNCIL DRAFTS ON INDIA.—Tenders for Rs. 4,00,000 in bills on India and telegraphic transfers were received yesterday at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—in bills, on Calcutta Rs. 5,00,000, average rate is. 7'687d.; and on Bombay Rs. 5,00,000, average rate is. 7'687d. In telegraphic transfers, Calcutta, Rs. 27,00,000, average rate is. 7'718d.; Bombay, Rs. 6,00,000, average rate is. 7'714d.; and Madras, Rs. 2,00,000, average rate, is. 7'718d., making a total of Rs. 45,00,000. Tenders for bills at is. 7 11-16d. will receive in full, and for telegraphic transfers at is. 7 23-32d. and above in full. Subsequently transfers for Rs. 2,25,000 were sold on Madras at is. 7 3/4d., and bills for Rs. 60,000 on Calcutta at is. 7 23-32d. Between April 1 and Feb. 12 the total amount sold had realised £14,597,374.

THE SILVER MARKET AND THE EASTERN EXCHANGES.

THURSDAY.—There is no change to report in the Silver Market. Prices are quoted as before, and business remains at almost a complete standstill. Telegraphic transfer rates in India are firmer, at is. 7 3/4d. in both Bombay and Calcutta. As regards the China exchange rates, Hongkong is again quoted at 3s. 8 1/4d., but Shanghai is a shade easier at 5s. 1d. The very low prices to which Rupee Paper had recently fallen seem to have attracted the attention of buyers, the demand during the last day or two having been on a larger scale. To-night the market for this security is firm, at 78 1/4 to 78 3/4 for the Four, and 80 1/4 to 80 3/4 for the Four-and-a-Half per Cents. The Indian Council sold bills for Rs. 36,000 on Calcutta at is. 7 21-32d., telegraphic transfers for Rs. 2,00,000 on Madras at is. 7 23-32d., and transfers for Rs. 1,00,000 on Bombay at is. 7 23-32d.

FRIDAY.—Pending the receipt of fresh arrivals, the market continues very quiet at 51d. per ounce for bars. The only change in Eastern exchange rates is a further fall in Shanghai to 5s. 0 3/4d. per tael. Rupee Paper has been in good demand again, and has risen 1/4, to 80 1/4 to 81 1/4 for the Four-and-a-Half, and 78 1/4 to 79 for the Four per Cents., on the report that the new loan contemplated by the Indian Government will be raised in sterling. The India Council have disposed of two lakhs of bills on Bombay at is. 7 21-32d. per rupee.

SATURDAY.—The bar silver by the Chilean packet was sold to-day at 51 1-16d. per oz., which was 1-16 higher. Eastern exchanges were all unaltered. Rupee Paper again advanced a fraction, and the quotations are now 79 to 79 1/4 for the Four per Cents., and 81 to 81 1/4 for the Four-and-a-Half per Cents.

MONDAY.—There is still a good demand for bar silver. Indian and China rates of exchange are again unaltered, but Rupee Paper has advanced still further, to 81 1/4 to 81 1/2 for the Four-and-a-Half, and 79 1/4 to 79 3/4 for the Four per Cents., the market being supported by the increase in the number of investment purchases, and also by the rise in the price of silver.

TUESDAY.—A small amount of business has been done in bar silver at 51 1/4d. per ounce, and the market is steady. Indian rates for telegraphic transfers remain at is. 7 21-32d., but China exchange rates are unaltered. Rupee Paper keeps firm, at 81 1/2 to 81 3/4 for the Four-and-a-Half, and 79 1/4 to 79 3/4 for the Four per Cents.

WEDNESDAY.—There has been no demand for Mexican dollars for China, and the rather large remittance ex French steamer has been disposed of at 40 3/4d. per ounce, this being the parity of silver bars. The price of the latter continues steady at 51 1/4d., a further small amount of business having been done at that figure. Indian exchange rates are unaltered. Hong Kong remains at 3s. 8 1/4d., Shanghai being a shade higher at 5s. 0 3/4d. The demand for Rupee Paper is still good, and prices are 1/4 higher. The Four-and-a-Half and Four per Cents. closed at 81 3/4 to 82, and 79 3/4 to 79 3/2 respectively.

The increase which has taken place in the strength of the Volunteer forces in India during the past ten years is considerable and worthy of notice. In the year 1874-75 the number of Volunteers was 3,620, the estimated cost being Rs. 1,45,000 per annum. For the coming year the entire forces are estimated at 12,000 men, at a cost to the State of Rs. 6,15,000. This sum is exclusive of the value of arms and ammunition, which are supplied by the Government without payment.

Colonel Fellows, 8th N.I., passed through Ahmedabad on the 19th inst. on his way from England to rejoin his regiment at Nussurabad.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY. RAILWAY COMMUNICATION IN INDIA.

On the motion of Mr. Cross, a Select Committee was appointed to inquire into and report upon the necessity for more rapid extension of railway communication in India, and the means by which this object may be best accomplished, with special reference to the report of the Famine Commissioners, and with due regard to the financial condition of India.

DELAY OF INDIAN MAILS.

Mr. MACFARLANE asked the Postmaster-General why the Indian mail of Jan. 11, due in London on Tuesday the 29th, was not delivered until Friday, Feb. 1; whether the steamship Lombardy, with the mails on board, was detained at Suez for twenty-four hours, nine hours at Port Said, taking in cargo, and that the mails were delayed for some hours at Brindisi; and whether he would call upon the company holding the contract for the carrying of the mails to explain the delay.

Mr. FAVCETT: I must explain to the hon. member that although, according to the time-table he refers to, the mail was due in London on Jan. 29, that date was based on the anticipated resumption of the transit of the mails through Egypt by railway and by steamer from Alexandria to Brindisi, whereas, in fact the mails had to be brought through the Suez Canal and from Port Said to Brindisi. So that, in reality, they could not be expected in London before the 31st, and they would have been delivered on that date but for untoward delays arising from the Italian quarantine regulations and the heavy weather experienced at Brindisi, which prevented the mails being landed there for twenty-four hours after the packet's arrival. It is satisfactory to me to be able to state that the regular mail service is about to be resumed early in March.

Mr. MACFARLANE: I will put a further question to the right hon. gentleman on the subject of the Lombardy. I was a passenger on board of her. (Laughter).

COURTS-MARTIAL—At a general court martial-assembled at Rawal Pindi, on 11th December, Private Joseph Connor, of the 1st Battalion Royal Irish Fusiliers, was arraigned on the following charges:—(1) Disobeying an order of Lance Corporal John Hennessey, the orderly corporal of the company, to draw rations; (2) saying to Lance Corporal John Hennessey, of the same battalion—"If you do not go away quickly, I will give you a clout of my bayonet," or words to that effect; (3) discharging a rifle loaded with powder and a bullet at Lance Corporal John Hennessey, of the same battalion, his superior officer, who was in the execution of his office. The court found the prisoner guilty of all the charges, and sentenced him to suffer penal servitude for the term of ten years. The sentence has been confirmed by H. E. the Commander-in-Chief.—At a district court-martial held at Ferozepore, on Jan. 7, Private John Gumbling, 4th Battalion, King's Royal Rifles, was charged with sleeping on his post when on sentry, at Ferozepore Dec. 27, 1883. The Court found the prisoner guilty of the charge, and sentenced him to be imprisoned with hard labour for eighty-four days. The sentence was confirmed by Lieutenant General Hume, Commandant, Lahore Division; but the General, in consequence of the prisoner's good character and the absence of any previous convictions against him, remitted twenty-eight days of the imprisonment awarded.

During 1884 only eight officers, says a Calcutta paper, will succeed to their allowances, five belonging to the Staff Corps, two to the Infantry, and one to the Cavalry Locals. The first in the list is Colonel E. Dandridge, who for twenty-four years held command of the 40th N.I., and is at present Brigadier-General at Peshawur, who completes his thirty-eight years' service on the 14th inst. He has, however, still over three years to run of his present appointment. It is, however, believed that he contemplates retiring during the present or next year; on the 1st March next he will be fifty-five years of age. Colonel Dandridge first joined the old 73rd N.I., and in June, 1858 was appointed to the present 40th N.I., as commandant, which he held till May, 1882. General Dandridge's active service record only shows the Punjab campaign of 1848.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

BY CAPTAIN FRED BURNABY,

Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physic—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cockle's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five will never fade from my memory; and a friend of mine, who passed through the same district many months afterwards, informed me that my fame as a medicine man had not died out, but that the marvellous cure was even then a theme of conversation in the bazaar."

THE "VOICE OF INDIA."

A NEW MAGAZINE INTENDED TO GIVE EXPRESSION TO THE PUBLIC OPINION OF INDIA.

THERE are in England large classes willing and anxious to do justice to India, but they find it very difficult to know how to act. They complain that Indian questions are intricate; that the opinions of official experts are contradictory; and that the people of India are dumb, and do not give expression to their needs. This defect it is now desired to remedy, by publishing monthly in Bombay a magazine somewhat similar in nature to Public Opinion in England, which will provide a compendium of all that is most valuable in the native journals throughout India on the leading topics of the day. It is hoped that the Voice of India will thus give forth a clear sound, interpreting between the rulers and the ruled, and making known the true wishes and feelings of the Indian people.

The Magazine will advocate no views of its own. It will seek only to reflect with care and accuracy the views set forth in the native press. The Indian people are naturally docile and conservative; and it is believed that the writings thus brought before the English public will be found to be characterised by a knowledge of facts, and generally be practical good sense and moderation. No doubt grievances will from time to time be set forth; but it is a policy of prudence no less than of justice to give these grievances a fair constitutional hearing. Accordingly, it is hoped that this publication will be welcomed by all Members of Parliament desirous of dealing with Indian questions, and that the facts thus brought together in a convenient form will be of value to journalists and other public writers. It is specially desired to bring the Magazine before the public in its clubs, reading-rooms, libraries, and institutes throughout England, with a view to promote a sustained and intelligent interest in the welfare of our Indian Empire, comprising as it does 220 millions of our fellow-subjects.

THE DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS. W. THORNHILL & CO., Sole Agents.

The Reputation of the "DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS," originally introduced into England by W. THORNHILL and CO., is now permanently established. The success of their enterprise has surpassed their most sanguine expectations. "DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS" afford the only instance hitherto attained of the absolutely perfect representation of the real diamonds by artificial means. These remarkable stones, by their purity and brilliancy, support comparison with diamonds, of the first water, and are undistinguishable therefrom. They are infinitely superior in every respect to real diamonds of inferior quality. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS were exposed side by side with real diamonds of great value in the Paris Exhibition, 1878, and were awarded a Prize Medal and the highest recompense awarded to imitations. They attracted universal attention and admiration, and forthwith became much in vogue with the grande monde, and elite of society. They are now worn at the Court balls, and upon all occasions in London, Paris, and St. Petersburg. They are invaluable for intermixing with and replacing parures and other costly diamond ornaments. DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS can be worn at all times, even by daylight, with confidence and absolute security. They possess the penetrating brilliancy and lustre peculiar to real diamonds, and the concessionaires guarantee the surprise and pleasure of purchasers. The perfection thus attained is the result of investigations and experiments extending over two generations. The cost, nevertheless, of the DIAMANTE BRILLIANTS is about 1-300th that of real diamonds.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

COUGHS, COLD,
ASTHMA,
BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE—Dr. J. C.
BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff)
DISCOVERED A REMEDY to denote
which he coined the word CHLORO-
DYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE IN-
VENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr.
Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.
This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated
publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS
BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the
INVENTOR OF CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.
See The Times, July 13th, 1884.

THE GREAT
DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

GENERAL BOARD OF HEALTH,
LONDON, REPORT that it ACTS as a
CHLORODYNE, and is generally sufficient.
Dr. GIBSON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETE-LY CURED ME OF DIARRHŒA."
From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical
Chemists, Simla, Jan. 5, 1880.

DEAR Sir—We congratulate you upon
the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy
of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars,
and, judging from their sale, we fancy
their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy
of Dr. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa, and
Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia,
the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during
many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms
of Cholera itself, we have witnessed
its surprisingly controlling power.

J. T. DAVENPORT, 336 & 337, Russell St., W.C.

We have never used any other form
of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis
Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescribe and patient alike. We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of
the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE IS THE TRUE
PALLIATIVE IN NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER,
TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine, which assuages PAIN of
EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEAD-
ACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S
CHLORODYNE—rapidly cuts
short all attacks of
EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC,
PALPITATION, Hysteria.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRU-PULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1884.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

Our advices by the overland mail are, from Bombay, Feb. 1; Madras and Allahabad, Jan. 30; Calcutta, Jan. 29.

If Lord Ripon has been flattering himself with the hope that the agitation among the landholders of Bengal and Behar against his "dangerous and revolutionary legislation" would prove to be only an ephemeral one, he is probably undeceived by this time. The magnificent meeting in Calcutta, thoroughly representative of every district in the Lieutenant Governorship, has been followed or preceded by meetings of great local weight and importance in all parts of the province; and now, we learn from this week's Times telegram, the movement has developed a regularly-constituted Association, started under auspices that render secure its future usefulness as well as its permanence.

The new Association is well named, "The Indian Constitutional Association;" and its objects are declared to be "to maintain the integrity of the Permanent Settlement, and to oppose dangerous and revolutionary legislation." Amongst its leaders we find already the honoured names of the Maharajahs of Darbhanga, Dumraon, and Hutywa; and we doubt not that the great nobles and the gentlemen of Lower Bengal will not lag behind their brethren of Behar, showing their public spirit by coming forward to stem the tide of Radicalism and Socialism that now threatens to ruin their country.

We are glad also to observe from the telegram that the leading European landowners of the province are also coming forward in numbers to join the good cause. Nor are they doing so a moment too soon, if it be true that the serious attention of Lord Ripon and Mr. Ilbert has been turned to the possibility of resuming or modifying the grants under the Waste Lands Regulations. Such resumption or modification would be a logical sequel to the not dissimilar breach of faith contemplated in the Bengal Tenancy Bill; but it would involve a monstrous injustice to a large number of English planters, who have invested immense sums on the faith of these grants. In such a district as Chittagong, for instance, such a measure would be an act of shameless confiscation, more disgraceful than the Irish Land Act or the Bengal Tenancy Bill.

The Indian Constitutional Association will be warmly supported in England. A meeting of the executive of the London Committee formed to oppose the Bengal Tenancy Bill was held on Monday afternoon, at 19, Clanricarde-gardens, Bayswater; and a resolution was passed pledging the Committee under certain conditions to co-operate with the new Association.

At the same meeting, a sub-committee, consisting of the Chairman of the Committee (Mr. C. T. Buckland), Sir George Yule, Mr. Roper Lethbridge, Mr. Sanderson, and Mr. Dacosta, was empowered to draw up a petition against the Bengal Tenancy Bill for immediate presentation to Parliament. It is understood that further active measures were decided upon at the same time, and will be prosecuted with vigour.

We hope to present our readers next week with a full and detailed review of Mr. Holmes's admirable "History of the Mutiny," which has already waited too long for this recognition at our hands. Following in the steps of such able historians as Kaye and Malletson, it would have been no little credit to Mr. Holmes if he had only succeeded in making his work generally accepted as a faithful summary of the works of his predecessors. But he has done much more than this. On many episodes of the Great Mutiny—and notably on the distinguished share borne by Mr. Commissioner Tayler, of Patna, in saving the Province of Behar—Mr. Holmes's researches have thrown a flood of new light. We trust that one incidental result of the publication of this work will be the tardy acknowledgment on the part of the Government of the disgraceful ingratitude with which Mr. Tayler has been treated.

SINCE the last meeting of the London Committee to oppose the Bengal Tenancy Bill, a large number of influential Anglo-Indians have joined its ranks, which now contain most of those whose opinions of Bengal affairs carry weight in this country. Among the latest additions we may mention the names of Mr. C. F. Montresor, late Commissioner of Burdwan; Mr. F. Tucker, late Judge of Dinajpur; and Mr. F. Collis-Sandess, late Administrator General of Bengal.

MR. GLADSTONE out-heroded Herod in his shuffling reply to Mr. Onslow's question about the audacious annexation of Merv and the Afghan frontier by Russia. He promised that, if this thing happened, and if that thing happened, and so on, then papers on the subject should be laid before Parliament at the proper time.

We deal in our leading columns with the revolution in Central Asian politics produced by the annexation of Merv by the perfidious Government of the Czar. Every patriot, be he Liberal or be he Conservative, will surely follow Mr. Stanhope's motion on this subject with warm sympathy. We are fallen on evil times, when Russia can calculate so confidently on the poltroonery of an English Government, and the unpatriotic "loyalty" of a Caucus-ridden party, as to dare such an outrage on England as that which has now been rushed through under cover of our Egyptian pre-occupations and a Radical Ministry.

ON this subject the Vienna correspondent of the Standard says.—

"A Persian representative statesman of the highest eminence whose acquaintance I recently made while travelling in Italy, writes me as follows, in reply to some queries concerning the Russian occupation of Merv: 'The policy of England is incomprehensible to us. In 1857 she forced Persia to abandon Herat, which had been connected with us for three centuries—that is to say, that at that time she punished even the attempt to approach India, whereas now she permits Russia to occupy Merv, which constitutes the last step but one towards the attainment of that end for which she has been preparing for half a century, and which she could only attain by England's weakness. Persian merchants returning from Central Asia tell me that they can scarcely recognise Bokhara and Southern Turkestan, which they are accustomed to visit every five years, so great are the changes since their last visit, Russian villages and military posts having sprung up in all directions. The Russians are liked in Central Asia, not only because they bring with them money and good weapons, of which the Turcomans are passionately fond, but still more because they hold out the prospect of warlike enterprises in which glory and treasure are to be gained. More than one trustworthy traveller has told me that throughout the whole of Central Asia the rumour has spread that the Russians will soon lead the warlike tribes into the rich plains of India, where gold, and diamonds, and beautiful weapons are lying in streets, and that the future conquerors have only to wait until some European conflagration arises, or England is in a difficulty elsewhere. You ask me whether Russia will now or in the immediate future advance against Afghanistan? Certainly not. On the contrary, she will continue to pose as the dearest friend of Afghanistan, whose commerce she is most anxious to protect, and for whose benefit she constantly watches and defeats English intrigues. Everybody in Afghanistan knows what is coming, and when you hear that fresh differences have broken out between that country and India you may feel sure the Afghans are being used as an advance guard, and that all the available horsemen of Central Asia will follow at their heels to seize on the promised land, Russia, probably, not even then relinquishing her attitude of peace and good friendship; but all the while she may arrange the whole campaign and guide the attack from Merv, transformed into a place of arms. Thus, if England at any time endeavours to thwart Russian plans in Europe, an Afghan rising will remind her of her weak point."

THE British public, only excepting that small section of it that is personally acquainted with Chinese Gordon, is rubbing its eyes in stupefied amazement over the proclamation issued by the accredited agent of the Party of Righteousness, in which the slave trade is boldly guaranteed that immunity and encouragement which everyone knows it will practically receive from the measures adopted by Mr. Gladstone's Government. But everyone who knows Gordon—and especially every one who saw anything of him during the short period when he was chafing and fuming under the trappings and in the muzzle of a Private Secretary to Lord Ripon—will recognise this proclamation as splendidly characteristic of the man, splendide verax. It is the very irony of fate for such a man to be employed by such a Ministry as Mr. Gladstone's.

MR. J. M. MACLEAN has unmistakably arrested the attention of the British public by his vigorous and telling exposition of the mischief we are doing by our mistaken railway policy in India. There is hardly a paper in London or the provinces, from the Times downwards, that has not commented on Mr. Maclean's able speech; and we trust that much good will ensue from the stirring-up of a question that has been allowed to slumber too long. We hope that the labours of Mr. Cross's Select Committee will be directed to some really good purpose; and that it will not be allowed to degenerate into a mere sham, useful only as a cloak for Lord Ripon's extravagance.

WITH respect to the Indigo Market, the following is from the price current of Messrs. J. Thomas and Co.:

"Since the issue of our last report four public sales have been held, of which three consisted of rejections of marks sold privately, Native Oudes, Benares, and Rungpore, and rejections and odds and ends from previous sales, and about 700 chests of European marks; 3,114 chests were offered, out of which 2,743 chests found purchasers. We have no change to notice in prices of desirable qualities of European indigo, but undesirable mixed descriptions of Oudes and other native sorts, of which the auctions chiefly consisted, met with but little competition, and sold at a decline of Rs. 5 to Rs. 10 per maund. The total quantity out of the market is 155,000 maunds, the quantity remaining unsold is about 250 chests, chiefly odds and ends of native indigo. The total crop will be about 156,000 maunds, or 16,000 above the estimate, the increase being in the native production from Benares and the North-West, of which it was impossible to get reliable information when the estimates were made. There are no private sales to report except a few lots of Gad Oudes. The season has now closed."

MESSRS. WATSON AND CO. thus report on the Tea Market:—

"At the public sales held on Jan. 24, out of 9,565 packages offered, 9,433 packages were sold. There was rather less demand, and prices were slightly easier."

THE Times of India gives the following obituary for the week ending Feb. 1:—

"The Ven. Arohdeacon Warlow, of Madras; Dr. Hanbury, Surgeon of H.M.S. Malabar; Mr. Thomas A. Garratt, assistant to Messrs. Remington and Co., Bombay; Mr. D. Cargill, District Superintendent of Police, Mirzapore."

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.

THE following is the official summary of the reports of the Agricultural Department on the state of the weather and prospects of the crops throughout India, for the week ending Jan. 22:—

"Rain has fallen in small quantities throughout the Madras Presidency, the Central Provinces, Central India, Rajputana, and Assam. Slight showers have also occurred in some districts of the Bombay Presidency, Hyderabad, Punjab, and Bengal. In the Madras Presidency and Mysore, the reaping of paddy and dry grains continues, the outturn being up to the average. Standing crops are in good condition, except in parts of Bellary, where they are poor, owing to short rainfall and blight, and in Kurnool, where they have been injured by unseasonable rain. Rabi prospects are generally good in the Bombay Presidency, but the crops in three districts are suffering from blight, and late rains have been injurious to the crops in two others. Prospects continue favourable in Berar, and the crops in Hyderabad have been benefited by a recent fall of rain. In Central India and Rajputana the rabi crops are doing well and have been much improved by the general rain. In the Punjab and North-Western Provinces and Oudh rain is much needed for the crops on unirrigated lands. In the Central Provinces prospects are generally good, and are improving in the Jubbulpore Division. The rain which fell in Bengal was too scanty to affect the crops, and in Behar and Chota Nagpore the rabi continues much in need of rain. The rice harvest is still in progress in a few districts, and the outturn has been generally much below the average. Prospects are unchanged in Assam. In British Burmah the paddy crop has been nearly reaped, and prices are favourable. Cholera continues severe in parts of the Madras Presidency, and small-pox and fever are prevalent in many districts throughout the country, otherwise the public health is fair. Prices are still high in Bengal."

TELEGRAPHIC INTELLIGENCE.

THE following telegram from the Indian correspon lent of the Times is dated Calcutta, Feb. 17:—

"The question of railway extension seems likely to be strongly pressed upon the Government, and to occupy a large share of public attention during the current year. The Bombay Chamber of Commerce has submitted a memorial to the Viceroy, urging that railway extension be prosecuted at the rate of 2,000 or 3,000 miles annually for the next ten years, at a cost of £20,000,000 per annum. They recommend that this sum be raised by sterling loans in London, at a guaranteed interest of 3½ per cent. in perpetuity. The following are the works which, in the opinion of the Chamber, are most urgently required.

"First, an extension, on the broad gauge, of the Bhopal State Railway, through Lalitpore and Jhansi to Gwalior, with a branch from Jhansi to Cawnpore; second, the construction of a broad-gauge Jhansi-Manikpore line; third, of a broad-gauge line from Calcutta to Nagpore; and fourth, of a broad-gauge line from Godra to Rutlam. They suggest that in future agreements with guaranteed companies the Government should always reserve the right to fix rates and fares, and to receive a moiety of the excess of profits over the guaranteed interest. They also recommend that no concession be granted to any company which is not guaranteed unless an absolute right to fix the fares be vested in the Government. Finally, they pray that the whole subject may receive immediate attention. The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal has addressed a despatch to the Supreme Government urging the immediate undertaking of the construction of the Calcutta-Nagpore railway. He points out that all the surveys and estimates are completed, and that the line is one of the greatest importance, not only as forming the final link in the more direct route between Calcutta and Bombay, but also as a protective work against famine, inasmuch as it will bring the vast wheat-producing tracts of the Central Provinces into communication with Bengal and with Calcutta, their natural seaport. He dwells strongly on the fact that as the proposed line will connect the broad-gauge system of the East Indian and Great Indian Peninsula Companies, much of its advantage will be lost unless it be also constructed on the broad-gauge system. Last year the Central Provinces had an abundant harvest, while in many of the Bengal districts the crop failed, and scarcity and high prices now prevail. Were the proposed line now open, the abundance of one province could be brought to relieve the distress of the other—a course which is impossible in the present state of the communications.

"Last week witnessed the completion of one and the commencement of another important addition to the Indian railway system. The Central Bengal line, begun about three years ago, has now been opened from Calcutta to Khoolna, while at Poonah, on Wednesday, the Governor of Bombay performed the ceremony of blasting the first rock for the Western Deccan Railway line, which will be 250 miles in length, and form the third main section of the Southern Mahratta system. In his speech on the occasion Sir James Fergusson expressed his regret that the metre gauge had been adopted for that system.

"The Viceroy, on his return from Hyderabad, spent a few days in Madras, where his time seems to have been mainly occupied in receiving deputations and addresses. The most important of his speeches in reply to them was one in which he hinted at an unfavourable budget, owing to a falling-off in the opium revenue. Replying to a deputation of Eurasians, he expressed sympathy with the grievances of that community, and an intention of pressing them upon the attention of the Secretary of State. Lord Ripon left Madras on Wednesday by the troopship Clive for Trincomalee. The duration of his stay there will not exceed a few hours, and he is expected to arrive in Calcutta on Tuesday.

"A meeting of exhibitors and officials was held on Friday last, for the purpose of considering whether the Exhibition should be kept open after March 4, the date originally fixed for closing it. After some discussion it was resolved that the declaration of the awards and the closing ceremony, to be presided over by the Lieutenant Governor, should be accomplished

"A substantial grievance, pressing very severely upon civil suitors throughout India, but especially in Bengal, has been fully and clearly exposed by the Chief Justice. In a minute submitted to the Government, Sir Richard Garth argues, first, that as a matter of justice to suitors the tax on litigation should be considerably reduced; and secondly, that the form in which the tax is imposed—namely, by an ad valorem stamp-fee on the institution of the suit—is both unwise and inconvenient. He shows that while the cost of Civil Courts in Bengal is estimated at 33,96,066 rupees annually, the total revenue to the Government from the stamp-fees charged on civil suitors in that province is nearly double the sum expended. And by an examination of the figures for the whole country, he proves that the civil suitors in India are now made to bear the burden not only of the Civil Courts, but of all the Criminal Courts also; besides contributing a surplus of about £100,000 for the benefit of the general public. The injustice of this is self-evident, and in many instances the present system amounts to an absolute denial of justice to the poor. The whole subject clearly demands careful and early consideration.

"The action of the Government in the matter of the Bengal Tenancy Bill has called into being a new organisation, the prospectus of which has just appeared. The body, composed chiefly of European and native landholders, has assumed the somewhat ambitious name of the Indian Constitutional Association, and declares its purpose to be to maintain the integrity of the Permanent Settlement, and to oppose dangerous and revolutionary legislation. Among the names on the provisional committee are those of three great noblemen of Behar—namely, the Maharajahs of Durbungah, Dumraon, and Hutta. It is stated that a corresponding committee will be formed in England."

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

AT HOME AND IN INDIA.*

UNDER this title, Mr. J. W. Sherer, C.S.I., has published a selection from tales and essays contributed by him from time to time to various periodicals. Mr. Sherer's sustained works of fiction have been very favourably received by the critics; but it is in short papers such as those here brought together that he especially shines. His minute observation, his consideration and sympathy, his polished and original manner of writing, all combine to render these miniatures of his more attractive to cultivated readers than the sensational and impassioned pictures of artists who catch the suffrages of the many by working with a broader brush upon a more extended canvas. The papers before us are classified under three heads. These are, the "Idyllic," the "Indian," and the "Social," all equally worth attentive perusal. Among the idyls may be particularly noticed "Old Parsonages" and "Dolly Skellett." The former of these is a memory of childhood, and evidently realistic in the truest sense; that, namely, in which recollections of the actual are fused in the alembic of a graceful, yet original imagination. The other is an inexplicably touching representation of a homely, innocent, unattractive peasant, whose uneventful, inarticulate career is developed by a series of tender touches, from cradle, in a neglected cow-shed, to grave, "with name alone, free from date or detail," in a corner of the village churchyard. Among the "Indian" papers (it is astonishing to find how easily one can be interesting by the same skill and loving labour) especial attention should be called to "The Fatal Rajpootin," a strange delineation of the universal empire of Venus exercised in the unfamiliar region of a Hindu temple. The "Social" series contains somewhat lighter matter, except in the tale of Lord Amelius Luttrell, in which there is exquisite characterisation and a true tragic pathos. Readers who will try the case for themselves will find themselves obliged to agree in a verdict most favourable to Mr. Sherer's appeal; and will be glad to meet him again in an effort of more importance.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE SUEZ CANAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—With reference to the late Parliamentary discussions on the subject of the Suez Canal, allow me to state an incident occurring in February, 1881.

When passing through the Canal, en route to Suez and Upper Egypt, at Port Said, the late Admiral Pasha MacKillop, Capt. R.N., joined our P. & O. Steamer from an Egyptian frigate anchored near. He freely conversed with us from time to time on its then unsatisfactory state, inefficiency, and future prospects. He alluded also to certain complaints made to the Khedive, to his Highness having directed him to see and inquire into the feasibility of extending the present Canal, or the construction of a second, in connection with his other official duties at Suez and in the Red Sea, and I was clearly led to believe that the Pasha had no doubt whatever but that the legal right and responsibility remained with the Khedive to sanction the proposed work, considered even then so essential.

He was also in frequent communication with the captain of the steamer and others during the passage through the Canal. Whether Admiral MacKillop's visit was of a purely official or of a more private nature I cannot say, but he made no secret of the object he had in view, was attired in full Egyptian uniform, and was received with much ceremony and every mark of respect and distinction while on board and on landing at Suez.

He further informed me that at the time of the formation of the existing Canal he was selected by his Highness the late Khedive to survey and report on its practicability.

We had several short detentions, through grounding, passing other steamers, &c., in going through the Canal, and this, and other improvements thought necessary in the transit, were openly discussed amongst us.—Yours, &c., F. H. C.

Delawarr, Lymington, Aug. 16, 1883.

P.S.—We met again at Cairo subsequently, and had much conversation about Egypt generally. The Pasha died not long afterwards on return to Alexandria, greatly lamented by all. Feb., 1884.

SELECTED ARTICLES.

THE RUSSIAN ADVANCE.

[PIONEER.]

FROM time to time we learn of the Russian General commanding the Trans-Caspian Province sending out parties of 1,500 or 2,000 men from the outpost of Baba Durmez, the eastern limit of Russian territory north of Persia, to explore the Tejend valley and country between Merv and Sarrahkha. These parties penetrate to the Afghan frontier and serve to keep the Herat authorities in a constant state of alarm, while they also stir up excitement among the local Turcoman tribes. The consequence is that the belief is gaining ground alike in Afghanistan and Persia, that Russia considers herself free to control the Tejend valley and to post her troops at any moment within gunshot of the Afghan frontier. This belief acts, of course, prejudicially to English interests on the Perso-Afghan frontier, and it is becoming daily more apparent that steps should be taken to define the actual boundary of Russian territory in that part of Asia. This can only be done by the formation of a joint commission composed of English and Russian officers who should meet at some point, say Meshed or Sarrahkha, and actually go over the ground and mark the frontier line, beyond which not even a Sotnia of Cossacks should be allowed to pass. The appointment of such a commission could scarcely be objected to by the Russian Government, who are just now fluent in their protestations—on paper—of respect for English interests in Central Asia, and we should be glad to see the English Foreign Office move in the matter. A limit must sooner or later be set to Russian conquests in the direction of Afghanistan, and the longer the delay in defining such a limit, the greater will be the difficulties which will eventually have to be dealt with.

[SHEFFIELD DAILY TELEGRAPH.]

"RUSSIA's relations with England are based upon a mutual and just appreciation of their interests, which are perfectly reconcilable." The voice is the voice of Mr. Gladstone, but the "medium" is the semi-official Journal de St. Petersburg. The python first slimes over the victim it is preparing to swallow. Russia must have another sweet morsel in view—under her maw, so to speak—for she has no occasion to lubricate Merv, having already swallowed that. The Russian semi-official journal understands its business, and suavely felicitates Europe upon the "fact" that English public opinion has now abandoned its former prejudices. Just so. With Mr. Gladstone in office, and his hands (by Russian help at Cairo, Suakim, Khartoum, and elsewhere) so well filled with work, his Muscovite friends probably believe they may go on unperturbed to fresh annexations. And so it is suavely stated by the Russian paper that "the interest of both Powers require that they should come to an understanding in order to enable them to carry out their civilising mission." The infamous Borgias were wont to say that Italy was an artichoke which must be eaten leaf by leaf. The Muscovite says the same in regard to the space which intervenes between himself and India. He ate up a big leaf when he annexed Khiva in face of his expressed undertaking to do nothing of the kind. He has swallowed down another juicy blade by the annexation of Merv which Mr. Gladstone has so tamely tolerated. And now the "inspired" press of St. Petersburg insults Great Britain by coupling her name with that of the most heartless tyranny under the sun as joint prosecutor of a civilising mission. Not even the terrible massacres in Egypt which lie at the door of our Government can excuse Russia for insulting that England she has so deeply injured.

[BRISTOL TIMES AND MIRROR.]

RUSSIA long ago began the process of making political soup out of the stones of the Central Asian deserts. She has already got a number of the ingredients which go to make a complete mess of pottage, and she looks forward to the day when the cooking will be finished, and the dish served up ready for eating. The serious news is reported that the Merv Turcomans have, at last, become Russian subjects, and that their territory is merged into the Russian Empire. The thing was virtually accomplished some time ago, but the intelligence is opportunely announced, at a time when England has her hands full of troubles in Egypt. The Russian public are highly elated at this latest triumph of Muscovite craft, and Russian journals cannot help gloating over it to some extent, though they endeavour to sustain the fiction that the possession of Merv may be of more trouble than profit to Russia, and they are full of assurances that England need not be apprehensive in regard to the matter. Russia, they say, has merely annexed the territory in the interests of civilisation, and though the possession of Merv will put her in command of Sarrahks—a much more important position—she will not take advantage of this opportunity, as she would gain nothing by doing so.

A slight retrospect will show that, in the period covered by the life of a boy some fifteen years of age, the pledged Imperial word of Russia has been thrice broken. We do not refer to mere diplomatic assurances, but to solemn promises given on the personal word of honour of the Russian Emperor. The first instance was in the case of Khiva, the late Czar giving a distinct pledge not to meddle with that Khanate. Within a year or two Khiva became a Russian town, and its Khan a Russian pensioner. The next Imperial pledge given was that Afghanistan was "outside the scope of Russian politics"—a phrase quite Gladstonian in its hypocritical subtlety. Within a year or two Russia had an Embassy at Cabul arranging with Shere Ali for an attack on India. Lord Beaconsfield frustrated that little intrigue. It has been repeatedly declared, on the responsibility of Russian Imperial honour, that Russia had no design upon Merv. In this case the mask was dropped early. Perhaps Russian diplomacy was persuaded that no one would believe in Imperial falsehoods any more. Perhaps it thought English Radical policy not worth the trouble of circumvention. English Radicals did what they could to encourage this view of the case. The Duke of Argyll made what he considered to be a splendid joke about "Mervousness." The noble lord was ready to swallow any amount of Russian mendacity, and he was further convinced that, even if Russia broke her word as to Merv, she could do no harm to England. Lord E. Fitzmaurice, the present Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, whose chief qualification is excessive flippancy, endeavours to copy the demeanour of the Duke of Argyll. Questioned in Parliament on the subject of the news from Merv, he replies that "he cannot read Russian." This is pitiful trifling in any case, but it is deprived of any small point which it might possess by the circumstance that the news of the annexation of Merv was first published in an official journal published in French. It seems that our present rulers will never learn to regard as serious the responsibilities and obligations involved in the charge of a great empire. There is every reason to believe that the present of a new axe would have a more exciting effect on our eloquent and athletic Premier than the loss of a colony. The Russians, at any rate, take no trouble to conceal their appreciation of the importance, from a national point of view, of the latest annexation. They know that this acquisition creates a new military basis of extension for their country, and that the road for an advance against India is almost within the Russian grasp. Every Russian officer is aware of the certainty that, sooner or later, Russia will fight England for the possession of India. There is hardly a Russian Moujik, ignorant though he may be, who does not know or think that he knows, that Russia is destined to drive the English out of Hindoostan. Russia can now easily make a move on Herat, the key of India, with Merv for her base. She can afford to wait for the establishment of railway communication behind her, and in the meantime she can creep on, always under the familiar mask, until Persia shall become her vassal State, and the Shah her obedient servant. All this may be only matter for jesting, in the eyes of Radical politicians, but the Russian progress in Central Asia is a matter of grim earnest. It is not worth while to discuss whether England ought to have gone to war with Russia for the purpose of staying her progress, because the contingency ought never to have arisen, and would not have arisen in the face of the exercise of ordinary care for British interests. Instead of doing or saying anything to stay the Russian advance, our Radical rulers have looked on with a broad grin, and have been guilty of the almost incredible folly of abandoning ground on their side, as Russia has advanced on hers. Of course, we shall have to fight by and by, though no Englishman in his senses would care to trust the military defence of India to Mr. Gladstone. He would probably abandon it as an encumbrance. England has cause to thank God—we say it with all reverence—that Lord Beaconsfield, and not Mr. Gladstone, was in power when Russia, a few years ago, was at the gates of Constantinople. Now that Merv has fallen, Herat is of more importance to England than Constantinople.

RAILWAY EXTENSION IN ASSAM.

THE following resolution on the results of the recent railway surveys in Assam and Chittagong is published by the Government of India in the Public Works Department:—

CHITTAGONG TO ASSAM.

With a view to investigating the best route for railway communication with Assam, a survey party was sent during the cold season of 1881-82 to examine the route across the Garo Hills from Mymensing to the valley of the Brahmaputra near Gauhati. As the result of this reconnaissance was not favourable, it was arranged, on the suggestion of the Chief Commissioner of Assam, that a route from Comillah through Cachar across the North Cachar Hills to the upper portion of the Brahmaputra valley should be examined during the cold season of 1882-83; and at the same time a railway survey was ordered from the port of Chittagong via Comillah to Daudkandi on the Megna. Owing, however, to changes in the channels of the rivers, it was reported that Daudkandi would be difficult of approach for steamers, and the Government of Bengal recommended that Chandpore on the Megna should be selected instead of Daudkandi as the terminal station of the line, and the Chittagong survey has accordingly been directed on that point, necessitating an extension of the Comillah-Cachar line southwards to a place named Laksham on the Chittagong-Chandpore line.

2. The reports of these several surveys and reconnaissances have been received, and the results may be summarised as follows:—

CHITTAGONG TO CHANDPORE AND COMILLAH.

The report and estimate of the Chittagong Railway deals with the line to Chandpore, 111¼ miles, and the Laksham Comillah section of the Cachar line, 17¼ miles, making a total of 128½ miles. The total estimated cost, Rs.1,08,25,000, gives the average cost per mile of construction at Rs.84,240. This rather high rate for a metre gauge railway is necessitated by heavy banks and the provision of headway for boat traffic at bridges. The greater portion of the country traversed is flooded in the rainy season. The Fenny is the only large river crossed, and for this, twenty spans of 100 feet each on wrought iron cylinders have been provided, but the exact site of the bridge requires further investigation.

3. The gross traffic receipts have been put at Rs.18,45,000, or about Rs.275 per mile per week, which, allowing 50 per cent. for working expenses, would give a return on capital outlay of about 8½ [the Financial Department of the Government of Bengal estimate this at 10 per cent.] per cent., irrespective of any traffic derived from extensions to the north east.

COMILLAH TO SILCHAR.

4. The total length of this section is 175 miles, and estimated cost of construction amounts to Rs.1,40,58,000, or at the average rate of Rs.80,425 per mile. The largest river on this length is the Gumti, for which six spans of sixty feet each have been provided; but this and the other navigable streams which are crossed afford highways of trade at right-angles to the line, and thus would become important feeders.

5. There is little information available on which to base really reliable estimates of traffic, but the Engineer in Chief roughly calculates on a return of six per cent. on the capital outlay, on the supposition that the line terminates at Cachar, and would increase this to 7·85 per cent. if the extension northwards were carried out.

BADAPUR TO DIBRUGURH, WITH BRANCH TO GAUHATI.

6. A reconnaissance only has been made of this portion, but it would appear that the best alignment obtainable will, on leaving the Cachar district, cross the Barak river either at Badapur, eighteen miles by road from Silchar, or at the Telya Tila, near Balighat, within four miles of Silchar. The line would then pass up the Jatinga valley on the left bank of the river to a point near Dulaigam, where it would cross to the right bank. On leaving the Jatinga the line would run via the Mahur river down the Towi branch into the Mupa valley; it would thence pass round the flank of the Sandreng hill and enter at the head of the Djakho valley by a tunnel, and on via the Langladisa valley to Lumding. The cost of this hill section is estimated at Rs.1,30,000 per mile, or Rs.1,33,90,000 in all.

7. At Lumding the proposed line bifurcates—one branch running down the Dimepur valley into Upper Assam to Dibrugurh, a distance of 197 miles, the cost of which is estimated at Rs.80,000 per mile, or a total of Rs.1,57,60,000; and the other going into the valley of the Brahmaputra to Gauhati, via Roha, a distance of 122 miles, estimated to cost Rs.97,60,000, at the same rate. If, however, the branch were taken to Nowgong, a distance of fifty-nine miles, it would similarly cost Rs.47,20,000.

8. The distances and estimated cost of the metre gauge of the various lines making up one project for the opening up of Sylhet, Cachar, and Assam, and their connection with the Megha at Chandpore and the sea at Chittagong, are, therefore as follows:—

| | Miles. | Rs. |
|--|--------|-------------|
| (1) Chittagong to Chandpore ... | 111½ | 94,66,000 |
| (2) Laksham-Comilla-Silchar ... | 192 | 1,54,17,000 |
| (3) Badapur, on the Silchar line, to Lumding ... | 114 | 1,42,70,000 |
| (4) Lumding to Dibrugurh ... | 197 | 1,57,60,000 |
| Total length Chittagong and Chandpore to Dibrugurh ... | 614½ | 5,49,13,000 |
| Adding— | | |
| (5) Branch from Lumding to Gauhati ... | 122 | 97,60,000 |
| Total ... | 736½ | 6,46,73,000 |

The particulars of five different schemes which have been put together by Mr. Buyers, with the object of facilitating a discussion of the whole question, will be found among the papers. With regard to these, it appears sufficient for the present to observe that, in view of the existing facilities for trade afforded by the Brahmaputra, a question of a railway between Gauhati and a point on the left bank of the river, opposite Dhubri, may well lie over for the present, and that if railway communication with Nowgong, or a point beyond it on the river, opposite Tezpur, should hereafter be desired, it can probably be most readily afforded by a branch of the Lumding-Gauhati line taking off from Baha or its vicinity.

9. Reliable estimates of traffic are, in this case, as in that of the others, not as yet available, but it is estimated that the 433 miles on this section from Badapur to Gauhati and Dibrugurh will, in themselves, pay 174 per cent. and 1 per cent. more from local goods traffic, and carriage of coal arising out of the sections between Badapur and the coast.

GENERAL REMARKS.

10. From the preceding remarks, it will have been observed that the financial prospects of the undertaking, as a whole, cannot be estimated with any precision. The rough estimates which have been made are, however, for the most part, based on present trade returns; whereas the opening of railway communication invariably leads to the creation of new traffic. Bearing in mind that the line will have the advantage of using excellent and cheap coal from the Makum coal-field, the estimates of 5·38 per cent. as mean net profit is perhaps not unreasonable.

11. The most important point brought out by the examination of the country that has been undertaken is, that a practicable route can be found across the North Cachar Hills into Assam; and there appears little reason to doubt that a railway following this route and serving, as it would, the important districts of Tylhet and Cachar, has enormous advantages over a railway simply running down a valley of the Brahmaputra, parallel throughout its length to a navigable river and commanding only a narrow tract of country.

12. That the sections from Chittagong and Chandpore to Silchar will prove very remunerative appears to be clearly established. The undertaking, as a whole, is estimated to yield 5·38 per cent. Before, however, any final opinion can be pronounced upon this point, it is necessary to have careful reconnaissances of the point lines from Lumding to Gauhati and Dibrugurh, and further inquiry into the traffic they are likely to obtain and to develop. Three survey parties are, during the present cold season, engaged upon this duty, as also one on the further examination and location of the line between Badapur and Lumding.

13. The success of the Engineer-in-chief, Mr. J. W. Buyers, and his party in having found out a passage for a railway through the North Cachar Hills is highly satisfactory, and their labours are fully appreciated by the Government of India.—Pioneer.

THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON INDIA.

THE time is fast approaching when the constitution of the special committee, the appointment of which has been promised by Lord Kimberley, will be made an open secret. But it is not too late for the authorities at Government House—having regard to the new ideas which almost day by day are being developed on the question of railway extension in India—to endeavour to convey to their correspondents, the India Office, some idea of the enormous responsibilities which will be incurred by the gentlemen who are about to act in the capacity of assessors to the responsible Ministers on the Indian railway question. Never in the history of commercial civilisation has there been a series of more potentially momentous problems presented for solution to any body of political students than those which are about to be submitted to Lord Kimberley's Committee. If the gentlemen who are appointed by the India Secretary to advise him as to the best method of extending the railway system in this country can succeed in formulating a scheme by which locomotion can be facilitated in this great country, they will have succeeded in introducing a new factor into the commercial conditions of the world. But the results of their successful labours would not end there. In the event of their being able fully to accomplish the task to the achievement of which their willing services are about to be lent, they will have the satisfaction of knowing that they have aided in rendering the lives of millions of the industrious people who inhabit the Great Indian Peninsula more tolerable than they have been, during long past centuries. Surely this is an ambition the realisation of which would well repay the most strenuous exertion on the part of the most eminent statesmen, financiers, and engineers who are creating in the "Greater Britain" the most wonderful aggregation of grand commercial and political realities with which the economic historian has ever had to deal, since the first savage began to exchange a piece of iron for a pound of rice. Great statesmen work for something more noble than the reputation of an hour. Lord Kimberley has now within his grasp the possibility of leaving his name printed on the hearts of myriads of the toiling sons of India, who, through long, burning hours, are wearing out the strength which God has given them in order to provide for their daily wants, without being able to reach the markets where the rich commodities which they produce would realise the price which would render their production profitable.

The duty which is now incumbent upon the Indian Government, both in Calcutta and in London, to provide adequate locomotive appliances which will enable the cultivators of the soil in this country to obtain the hire of which their labour is worthy, is almost a sacred one. We who, in this country have undertaken the task of guiding the destinies of almost countless millions of people who are swarming over a territorial area which is as large as Europe, have accepted a responsibility which, to the mind of any conscientious man who is engaged in conducting the administrative business of the country, is almost appalling. The difficulties which surround the financier or the legislator who honestly seeks, to the best of his ability, to assist in the rapid development of the commercial possibilities of the land—and the consequent increased material comfort of its people—sometimes seem almost insuperable. But it is the character of the typical Englishman to court difficulties, for the sake of overcoming them. The over-ripe plum which falls from the bough is never so sweet as that which is plucked by the climber from the topmost branch of a tree. If Lord Kimberley and his colleagues could fully realise the fact that every additional hundred miles of railway which—under good advice as to engineering and commercial considerations—are made in India means health and happiness to millions of homes, surely they would be willing to work until their last energies were spent, in order to destroy the obstacles which, at present, prevent the free flow of European capital into this country, which only requires financial irrigation in order to send back a flood of wealth which would float the irrigators into a haven of assured prosperity.

All the grand results which are thus suggested may be secured, if only Lord Kimberley and his advisers in Calcutta exercise sufficient care in the selection of the men who are to form the Committee, and of the expert-witnesses who are to supply the evidence on which the report will be founded. There will be no difficulty in obtaining more than a sufficiency of the strictly professional testimony, necessary for forming an opinion as to the actual construction of the required lines of railway. The Government of India is fortunate in having in its employ a body of military and civil engineers whose technical knowledge is not surpassed by that which is devoted to the service of any other country. But the evidence which is to be given to Lord Kimberley's committee should not be confined to the experience of engineers and financiers. There are, unquestionably, grave difficulties—such, for example, as arise from the fluctuating value of the Indian currency—which may possibly have to be considered before any scheme for the financing of a grand Indian railway scheme can be thoroughly formulated. On questions of this kind it will be necessary for the Home Government to take into their confidence the able and experienced gentlemen who at present control the business of the Indian Exchequer in Calcutta. And whenever an issue is raised as to the comparative merits of competing routes, it will be desirable to have the fullest information, as to the nature of existing engineering difficulties, which can be obtained from scientific specialists. But, with reference to the actual necessities and the commercial possibilities of the great producing districts of India, it is imperative that Lord Kimberley's committee should be assisted by the advice of men who have already shown their sincere belief in the commercial future of the country by the investment of their capital in the development of its resources; who know the actual value of a maund of Indian produce in the City—having regard to present and to possible future rates of transit—and who can explain to the committee the conditions under which such confidence in the substantial soundness of Indian commercial enterprises would be inspired in Europe that the capital of investor would at once begin to flow, with the strength of a torrent, into the markets of Hindostan.—Englishman.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT IN BURMA.

THE Local Self-government scheme, in its application to Burma last year, was limited to towns, and the rural districts have continued under the paternal rule of the local officer. Two classes of towns were dealt with under the scheme; the larger towns which already possess Municipal Committees, and the smaller ones, which were without that form of administration. The latter were forthwith provided with new and improved machinery in the shape of committees, consisting of the chief residents, who were nominated for the work by the Commissioners of divisions. The Burma administration report for last year states that the machinery worked "with fair success." It is not surprising to learn that the Committees showed a tendency to exercise "somewhat too freely, perhaps, the power which has been conferred upon them, of increasing the number and raising the pay of municipal employees." It seems also that in nearly every case they used the privilege of electing their own president by choosing the district or sub-divisional officer,—thus, in this matter, also realising anticipations as to their probable course of action. The towns where municipal institutions were already at work at the time of the introduction of the new scheme were seven in number, and to them was proposed the elective system in substitution for the appointment of the municipalities by the method of nomination. We are told that six of the seven declared in favour of election, the exception being the town of Prome, where, it is said, the balance of public opinion strongly inclined to the preservation of the status quo. The elections were duly held in the six towns. "Except in Rangoon," the report says, "the native communities displayed but little interest in the election of their representatives. It is possible that their apathy arose partly from ignorance of the nature and intention of the novel procedure introduced. And it may be hoped that in future years the importance of the privilege conferred on them will be duly recognised." The penning of this sentence shows that Mr. Crosthwaite has a hitherto unsuspected fund of humour in him. In Rangoon, where the interest over the elections was keener, we find that "a fair number of Europeans and Burmese came to the poll," but "the representatives of other communities were returned unopposed. All the new municipalities, with the exception of those of Henzada and Akyab, where the civil surgeon and assistant commissioner were respectively chosen, elected the deputy commissioner as their chairman. The new municipalities appear to have taken great interest in the sanitation of the towns entrusted to their care, and to have improved matters in that respect considerably; though the chief commissioner is apparently unacquainted with the state of affairs in Calcutta, when he writes that, as compared with towns in India, Rangoon was still very backward in respect of sanitation. The municipalities also seem to have devoted themselves with zeal to the education of their townfolk, and spent nearly four times as much on the schools made over to their charge than had been spent on those institutions by those who had the care of them before. The control of all hospitals within municipal limits was also made over to the new corporations, who spent on them nearly twice as much as has been spent during the preceding year. This extra expenditure they were enabled to make, owing partly to larger grants from the local Government, and partly to the fact that they were relieved from the charge of the police, a burden which their predecessors had borne. On the whole it would seem that the introduction of the election system, has made little change in the actual administration of municipal Government in Burma. The district officer, as hitherto, appears to be the recognised source of all initiative and authority.—Englishman.

FAILURE OF THE DECCAN RELIEF ACT.

WHAT is to be the ultimate fate of the Deccan Agriculturists Relief Act is a question which the public would like to have answered, and which the Bombay Government sternly refuse to reply to in the slightest degree. The Act is of interest to the public not only on account of its practical bearing, but also because it affected certain important economic principles. Has the Act given to the world one more illustration of the failure of all legislation in restraint of contract? Some time ago we suggested that Government should appoint a commission to inquire into the working of this Act. A commission consisting of Mr. Ritchie, who was a member of the Deccan Riots' Commission, and is acquainted with the state of the Deccan, a High Court Judge, and a revenue officer, acquainted with the districts in which the Act has been working, would have commanded the confidence of the public. Instead of appointing a commission, the Government appointed Mr. Woodward, a comparatively junior Civilian. He has had no legal experience, and therefore, cannot be well acquainted with the art of cross-examination, which is the art of putting searching questions, and he was totally unacquainted with the districts or the state of the people where the Act has been in force. It is, therefore, obvious that in a tour of four or five months over an extensive tract of country Mr. Woodward could not have had time to carefully sift a vast number of complicated facts and to form a ripe judgment on them. That Mr.

Woodward has formed some judgment is certain, because he has written a report on the working and effects of the Deccan Agriculturists Relief Act. Mr. West, who has taken much interest in the Act, and from the outset declared that it would be a failure, has written a minute in which he shows that his criticisms on the principles of the Act have not been in the least affected by Mr. Woodward. Mr. Ranade, the native most distinguished in the Presidency for wide reading and calm judgment, has answered this learned High Court Judge. The Chief Secretary to Government has also drawn up a very elaborate and learned minute on the whole question.

What substantial reason can there be for keeping these papers from the public? There has unfortunately grown up an idea in the Bombay Secretariat that the art of secrecy is the sole art of statesmanship. We receive more valuable State papers from a remote minor Government in the course of a month than we receive from our own Government in the course of a year. High officials are fond of attacking the Press for criticising measures without sufficient knowledge. But when the Press goes wrong, it is in error and not in crime. It is the officials who commit the crime, for they keep back information from an appalling dread of the slightest breath of criticism. They know not that "the ignorance of the people is a bottom pit for a temporary system; the interest of active men in the State is a foundation perpetual and infallible." However, secretariat secrecy is never very rigid. So far as we can gather Mr. Woodward's report fully confirms what we have always maintained, that the poverty of the ryot is not solely due to the money-lender, but chiefly to the tillage of poor lands. In the Deccan the population has multiplied beyond the margin of cultivation. Vast numbers cultivate fields which on an average of seasons will not yield them sufficient to subsist on. This is an evil which cannot be cured by legislation. We must teach them to break through tradition, and to learn to seek other employments and distant lands. The Deccan Act was an attempt to preserve the peasant from the action of well-known economic laws. The ryot, however thriftless he might be, was to be saved expropriation. We are informed by native gentlemen who have closely watched the working of the Act—and we hear that their remark is confirmed by Mr. Woodward's report—that the effect of the Act has really been to place land in the hands of few holders. The sowcar never cared to be a landlord. As long as the ryot paid the interest he let him be the owner. But when a cultivator lends money to a fellow cultivator—and since the sowcar has been deposed, the well-to-do cultivator is fast becoming a money-lender—the great object of the mortgagee is to dispossess the mortgagee and cultivate the land himself. We do not regret this, though it is the irony of destiny that the Act should have brought about that which is most tried to avoid. Small holdings passed away in England because tenants who could cultivate large farms could produce more wealth at less cost. The same must happen in India. It is the capitalist who is able to change the methods of his culture and raise the produce suited to the time. After the men of the very small holdings have been got rid of in the Deccan, then we may look for the growth of a more stable and healthy condition of rural society. Small holdings answer only in those countries where the people understand the value of migration and prudential restraints.

The insolvency provisions of the Act were also attempts to run counter to economic laws. The enforcement of contracts voluntarily entered into has been aptly described as a kind of protection to freedom:—"There can be no doubt that a refusal to enforce such contracts is an interference with the spontaneous organisation of industry which the system of natural liberty contemplates, in which the enforcement of contract is the one elementary process by the repetition and complication of which the whole fabric is bound together." The Bombay Government have expressed astonishment that the insolvency provisions should have remained a dead letter. But the ignorant ryot knew better than his civilised master that the payment of debts is essential to the cohesion of society. However, the ryot is suffering from the ignorance of his rule. The insolvency provisions have only proved that if you increase the risks of the money-lender, you intensify the hardships of the business. The sowcar no longer lends money on mortgage security, unless the land is exceptionally valuable, and he demands a transfer of the land. The poor ryots, who are in the majority, find it impossible to get loans, and to them loans are essential in order to buy seed and food and to meet the Government assessment which must be paid punctually. We shall be able to gauge the full extent of this evil when the next bad season comes, as in the Deccan it is certain to come. The ryot is not to blame for his loss of credit, for he has been too proud or too shrewd to avail himself of the insolvency clause. But his masters thought that they could despise the experience of ages. The result is that much land remains unsown, owing to the difficulty of getting bullocks to cultivate it. In old days the sowar would have advanced the money to buy the bullocks. The appointment of conciliators instead of judges was also an attempt to despise the lessons taught by experience. Experience has proved that arbitration, as a rule, is the most dilatory and the most uncertain of all forms of trial. If conciliation and arbitration supplied the needs of society, a refined system of laws could never have sprung up. The effect of the conciliation system has been in favour, not of the debtor, but of the creditor. In the majority of cases the defendant does not appear, and the creditor obtains that which is as good as a decree, without paying the costs of a decree. If our information be correct, Mr. Woodward's report and the minutes written on it have clearly shown that the Act on the whole has proved a failure, and the time has come when it should be thoroughly revised. If we be wrong the Government can easily put us right by supplying us with all the papers.—Times of India.

MEMORIAL MEETING IN HONOUR OF THE LATE BABU KESHUB CHUNDER SEN.

THE memorial meeting in honour of the late Babu Keshub Chunder Sen was held at the Town Hall on Jan. 30. The Hon. W. W. Hunter occupied the chair. There was a large attendance, amongst those present being the Hon. J. Gibbs, the Hon. C. P. Ibert, Mr. Justice Cunningham, Father Lafont, the Rev. Mr. Dall, Mr. H. W. Wood, Dr. Harvey, the Maharajah of Cooch Behar, Mr. Kristodas Pal, Rajah Hunendra Krishna, Nawab Abdul Luteef, Mr. Surendranath Banerjee, Moulvie Abdul Rahman, and other distinguished native gentlemen.

Mr. Wood as Sheriff, opened the meeting, and proposed that the Hon. W. W. Hunter should take the chair.

The Chairman, in an eloquent speech, said that they had met together to do honour to the memory of a great man. The list of gentlemen who desired to convene the meeting consisted of representative men of all races and creeds; of Englishmen high in the councils and administration of the Empire, distinguished at the bar and on the bench of the Supreme Court; Hindoos of every caste; leaders of the Mahomedan community; Christian ministers, Protestant and Roman Catholic; and merchants, editors, and men of science. The chairman dwelt on the unwearied public labours of Keshub, his blameless dignity, splendid public eloquence, and his private charities. His (the chairman's) duty, in opening a meeting representing in a special degree the East and the West, was confined to pointing out that Keshub represented in a special manner the fusion of European science with Indian thought. Death found him in the midst of his labours, but the concourse at that meeting and the messages received from many distant lands proved that India and England were alike resolved that his memory should not be forgotten.

The Hon. J. Gibbs then rose and proposed the following resolution:—"That this meeting, representing all classes of the community, records its sense of the loss sustained by the people of India by the death of Babu Keshub Chunder Sen." Mr. Gibbs said that it had been a source of sincere, though mournful, satisfaction to him to sign the requisition calling the meeting. He had for many years been deeply interested in the great movement over which Keshub so ably and wisely presided. He had heard of it before he came to this country, and he even remembered, when quite a child, seeing Rajah Ram Mohun Roy, who was a friend of his father's. He had taken personally a great interest in watching the movement, and had considered it a duty to attend there that day to bear personal testimony to the loss which India had sustained by the removal of the great religious leader.

The resolution was seconded by Nawab Abdul Lateef and supported by Surendranath Banerjee, and carried.

Mr. Justice Cunningham, in proposing the second resolution—"That public subscriptions should be opened for the purpose of perpetuating the memory of the deceased by a suitable memorial, the nature of the memorial to be determined hereafter, with reference to the amount of the subscriptions forthcoming," said that the reconciliation of faith and thought was if it be possible, beyond all question the greatest of human achievements, and he thought every attempt to achieve it demanded their sympathy, admiration, and affection. A native of India who was able, so far as was done by their deceased friend, to solve that great problem, must ever remain famous in the annals of his country. Common natures could not conceive such a thing feeble and cowardly natures would not attempt it, but a man who was able, among the ruins of creeds and faiths around him, to construct out of those débris a system of pure and lofty Deism, to place that before the minds and intelligences of his fellowmen, to shape it into a system, to trace a path in which their steps might walk, and a system by which their lives might be guided was, he thought, one that his countrymen might well remember with affection, and which other than his countrymen might long regard as one of the benefactors of his species. A man who enslaved by superstition, unbewildered by the blaze of modern knowledge, unaffected by those ties which hold us in the course of life, was able to minister to the spiritual interest of his fellows, was, he (the speaker) thought their greatest friend, and it was because he regarded Keshub as such a minister and such a friend, that he thought not only his disciples, but the public at large might take some steps, and he trusted steps worthy of the ocasion, to hand down his memory to the love and respect of times to come.

Father Lafont seconded the resolution. He said that Keshub was one of his best friends, and he had helped him whenever he could. He gave a short history of the many good works of the deceased.

Babu Kali Churn Banerjee supported the resolution, which was carried.

Mr. Ghose, barrister-at-law, proposed the third resolution, to the effect that a committee be appointed to carry out the foregoing resolutions.

Mr. Kumar Nil Krishna seconded, and Mr. Protap Chunder Mozoomder supported the resolution, which was carried. A numerous committee, with the Hon. W. W. Hunter as president, comprising members of all classes of people in Bengal, was then nominated.

The Maharajah of Cooch Behar proposed a vote of thanks to the chair, and this having been acknowledged, the meeting separated.

COMMERCIAL INTERCOURSE BETWEEN INDIA AND AUSTRALIA.

MR. J. BOSISTO, in the course of his lecture on Australia at Calcutta, on the 24th ult., said:—Australian productions, either as products or manufactured goods, are not meagre; her manufactures are extensive, full of the latest mechanical improvements; her artisans do not lack either knowledge, intelligence, or industry; her merchants and commercial men will bear comparison for upright conduct, strict probity, and liberal considerations in all business relations with any elsewhere. The yearly increasing magnitude of her resources, both in raw materials and manufactured goods, give her the power to go outside and enter into the other markets. Her rise and progress during the past three decades have been not only rapid, but her people are settled and fixed; nor desire to seek "fresh fields or pastures new;" the sequence follows—her industries and manufactures are firmly established, there is no desire, therefore, to keep her industrial labour confined within the radius of the Australian group; for, notwithstanding the variations of the tariff of the several colonies, and the principles which have guided each one in its separate policy, yet each is fully alive to the value and to the necessity of opening up markets in other countries for the disposal of their products and manufactures. The Australian colonies do not come here in the spirit of rivalry one with the other. As years have rolled on, Australia's public men have learnt that mere divisional lines on the map of Australia must not give strong class jealousies, envyings, or evil speaking. The iron horse has brought, and is bringing, more and more each succeeding year the great cities and country districts of each colony into closer ties of relationship. The well-being of Australia does not lie within the circumscribed limits of any one of her separate colonies; her wealth and influence is only to be obtained by united action, be it in the protection of her coasts from an enemy, or in the extension of trade and commerce. And now I come to a subject which, I am sure, possesses for all present a deep interest—viz., the development of trade between the Continent of Australia and this vast and wealthy Empire. I have attempted to show how boundless are our resources, and the special advantages which we may fairly claim to possess in the way of soil, climate, and powers of production. Forming, as we do, part of the same great Empire, and owning the sway of the noble lady who has so long and so honourably wielded the sceptre of State, it is but natural that many of our interests should be identical. At present Australian produce is forwarded direct to London and other great emporiums of the Old World, and then finds its way to India by circuitous channels. What is required to develop trade and draw us closer together is direct communication by means of fast and regular steamers; and I think, ladies and gentlemen, that the present is an opportune time to seriously consider the question. I find that, from figures recently published, the trade between the two countries increased last year by nearly eleven lakhs of rupees; and this, notwithstanding a decline in the number of horses supplied—and until recently horses, as you know, formed almost the only branch of trade with India so far as Australia was concerned. With the establishment of direct steamers between the Australian and Indian ports, new avenues of exchange would be opened up which at present are impracticable. Dealing with the question of food supply alone, it will be seen that Australia is in particularly good position. In the matter of cultivation, South Australia, with an area of 903,425 square miles, has 2½ million of acres under crop; New South Wales, possessing a territory to the extent of 309,175 square miles, has 733,528 acres; while Victoria, with 87,884 square miles, has no less than 2¼ millions of acres in cultivation. In respect to wheat and other cereals, we can hardly expect to supply India, herself a great grain-producing country, but such commodities as sugar, flour, and wines, can be furnished to any extent. Pursuing, however, the list of products which Australia is prepared to contribute, I will take next meat, tinned and frozen. Australian beef and mutton has already obtained a firm hold in the London market, and that you may better understand our producing powers in that direction, I will give you a few more figures. New South Wales, the oldest of our pastoral colonies, has no less than 2½ millions head of cattle, and 36½ million sheep; Victoria coming next with nearly 1½ millions head of cattle, and 10½ millions sheep; South Australia has 315,000 head of cattle, and nearly seven millions sheep; while Queensland, Western Australia, and Tasmania possess extensive herds and flocks. Australian wool command the highest prices in the world, some of the finest merino clips realising the value of raw silk. In the onward march of progress, the time may not be far distant when India will become a great cloth-manufacturing country, and it is not, therefore, premature to suppose that in the list of articles which we are to supply, wool will occupy a prominent place. Of the horses raised in Australia, most of you present can possibly speak from experience. Much attention has been paid to improving the breed of horses, as well as of other live stock in the colonies; and, judging of recent performances, there is every reason to believe that the "Walers" of the future will maintain their present high reputation. That there need be no reason to fear any diminution in the supply, may be inferred from the fact that New South Wales possesses 370,000, Victoria nearly 300,000, and South Australia 160,000 horses, the other colonies also possessing between them half a million more. To the horse trade we owe the only direct communication hitherto enjoyed; the steamers conveying these animals naturally avoiding any detentions on the way. They have demonstrated the practicability of the scheme, and as back freight to the colonies is nearly always available, it only remains for the Indian people to afford us the opportunity of consigning products other than horses, to commence at once. Fresh fruit, which forms a desideratum in hot countries, butter, and other dairy produce, could be supplied without limit, and at a remarkably small cost. If a direct steamer left at regular intervals, fitted up with a freezing-chamber, what a boon this would be in your hot months can well be imagined. Grapes of the most luscious varieties, and all kinds of English and tropical fruits are sold in Australia at prices which would admit of their being landed here at two or three annas per pound, and then leave a good margin of profit. Australian copper you already receive, and both coal, tin, antimony, silver, and gold can be supplied to a practically unlimited extent. Hides, leather, and all kinds of tweed and woollen fabrics are amongst the products for which a good market should exist, but the list is, in my opinion, almost inexhaustible. The pure natural wines of Australia are now finding an honoured place amongst the best vintages of Europe, and for India they may claim to be specially adapted. In return we offer the people of India a good market for their tea, rice, dye materials, silks, cotton, jute goods, paper-making fibres, and nearly all the products for which she is famed. Reciprocity is certain to follow any attempts made here to open up direct trade, and that such an attempt may be made I sincerely trust. I have lingered thus much over a country I have lived in for thirty-five years, and as I have no desire to weary you, suffice it for me, in conclusion, to add that her laws and government are thoroughly British, her people are manly and vigorous, active in labour and politics, are not morose, enjoy fun as much as they enjoy their daily bread, and maintain civil and religious liberty for all men. Her public men are outspoken, and watch well her present and future advancement. A strong and national feeling is gradually overcoming petty colonial differences, and legislation is tending in the direction of a federal union, binding her together as a nation, and so making her to become the power of the southern hemisphere. Do signs for evil appear from within or without?—her public men grasp the reins of state firmly, without flinching. Is it a foreign power hovering round her shores for the purpose of taking possession of New Guinea, that is close by, to pour into it her outcast and condemned?—they are as one man, put their foot down and say, "We will have none of it." Does such an action for the moment disturb the equanimity of the mother-country and give to the world outside the impression that Australia is wavering in her loyalty? The public men of Australia know their duty to her people and to the Crown of England. They know that views firmly expressed and royally addressed to the throne of Great Britain receive in these days of her enlightenment every consideration; and, whatever may be the ultimate decision, Australia will remain as ever loyal and dutiful to the Crown of England and to the Queen-Empress, revered and loved by her Australian subjects.

Mr. J. J. Keswick (who presided) then said:—"Mr. Bosisto has given us a most instructive and interesting lecture, and our best thanks are due to him. There can be no doubt that the establishment of such a line of steamers as he has suggested, would be calculated to promote and develop trade between the Australasian colonies and this country, and I know there is enterprise enough among steamship owners to establish such a line if they can see a profit out of it—but there is the rub—and I do not know how it is to be got over for some time to come, unless the Government of the colonies and our Government join in subsidising a line. If the Governments come forward, then all will be well. (Cheers.)"

M. Joubert, in proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. Bosisto, said that the lecture just delivered was most instructive and interesting. He was told that Mr. Bosisto had been a resident of Australia for a period of thirty-five years, and, under the circumstances, he thought that nobody could be more competent to speak on the subject than he.

Mr. Bosisto then proposed a vote of thanks to the chair, which being seconded, was carried unanimously. The assembly then dispersed.

THE LATE ARCHDEACON WARLOW.

THE Ven. Archdeacon Warlow died at Madras on the 25th ult. from the attack of typhoid fever from which he had been suffering. The Madras Mail, in the course of an obituary notice of the deceased, says:—"Archdeacon Warlow merited the warm esteem which was entertained for him at the various stations with which he was from time to time ministerially connected. Without being a distinctly clever man, he was well read, benevolent, and manly. Probably it was as chaplain of St. Mark's, Bangalore, and as garrison chaplain of Fort St. George, that his abilities obtained the most congenial and effective exercise. He had much solicitude for soldiers; and there was that about his cheerful manner, and his obvious sincerity of purpose, to gain for him the respect of a military congregation. The conditions of official life in India have this disadvantage for chaplains, that they cannot easily drop anchor in the stations to which they are posted, but have to keep more or less in light marching order, prepared to obey the mandates of the Government, or those of the doctor, that mean a sudden change of residence and of congregation. The close ties that bind minister and people for many years together in English parishes are to a great extent unknown in India, and chaplains, like most of their countrymen, are mere birds of passage, who have "no continuing city" in the land. The late Archdeacon would have done much justice to a rural parish in England. He was not insensible to the charms of cultivated society, or to the fascinations of art, and he was easily moved by the contemplation of the beautiful in nature. He was no half parson, half man of the world; but he lived in the world, with the world, and yet not by the rule of the world. His views of human nature were sympathetic, and his conceptions of the destiny of the human race were generous. He developed, as he grew older, a pronounced ecclesiasticism that might have been distasteful to him in his early evangelical days; but this change was in response to the movement that has done much to revivify the Church of England of recent years. His death is in one respect fortunate, seeing that it has occurred in the midst of people who are the best able to appreciate the goodness of his life; but it entails upon the Government the loss of a servant who brought admirable business habits, much clerical experience, and a warm heart to bear on the administration of the Ecclesiastical Department."

DEATH OF AN INDIAN HERO.

By the death of Major General Anstruther another link is broken which served to connect the present generation with those gallant soldiers who helped to place our Indian Empire on a sure foundation. Sixty years ago he obtained a commission in the Madras Artillery, and after some service took part in the first Chinese war. In the course of our operations against the enemy he had the misfortune to be taken prisoner, and for six months was kept in captivity. To be in the hands of the representatives of the Brother of the Sun and Moon was a serious matter in those days, and the young officer must often have had doubts whether he would not some morning be led out to death. But he had a long career before him, and his life was again risked in his country's service when he served on the staff of Lord Gough in the sanguinary engagement of Chilianwallah, when the Sikh forces, though defeated, inflicted a loss upon our troops of more than six hundred men killed, while fully eighteen hundred were wounded. But little more than a month elapsed ere a less barren victory was secured on the field of Goozerat by the army under the command of Lord Gough. Sixty thousand Sikhs led by Chutter Singh and Shere Singh, reinforced by fifteen thousand fierce Afghan cavalry, commanded by a son of Dost Mahomet, constituted a formidable array to encounter. "The Sikh guns were served with their customary rapidity," wrote the victorious Lord Gough to the Governor General in 1849, "and the enemy well and resolutely maintained his position; but the terrific force of our fire obliged him, after an obstinate resistance, to fall back." The Infantry was then deployed, and a general advance under cover of our Artillery inflicted an unquestionable defeat. In this action the brave Scottish officer who has just passed away did good service, as he also did in the Kafir war some two years later.—Daily Chronicle

The two Belooch Regiments, 29th and 30th N. I., at Kurra-chee and Hyderabad respectively, have been ordered to change stations, and are now carrying out the relief, by half battalions, by route march.

MAIL NEWS.

The Viceroy and Lady Ripon left Calcutta on Jan. 28 for Madras. They embarked on board the steamer Clive, at Diamond Harbour. Their Excellencies were accompanied by Mr. Durand, Lord W. Beresford, Mr. Primrose, and several other gentlemen. Great preparations are being made for their reception at Madras.

Lady Ripon will, we understand, accompany the Viceroy only as far as Madras, remaining there until His Excellency's return from Hyderabad.

The Hon. Mr. Gibbs, as senior member, has been appointed President of the Governor General's Council during Lord Ripon's absence in the Deccan.

After a debate of some length, though not apparently of much importance, the Ilbert Bill, as amended, was passed into law on Jan. 25. The amendment brought forward by the Maharajah of Darbhanga was withdrawn, so that practically the measure was passed without further difficulty.

The Lieutenant Governor of Bengal takes six months' leave to England early in March next, Mr. Bernard officiating. Mr. Rivers Thompson placed his resignation in the hands of the Viceroy, but Lord Ripon refused to accept it.

The Aka expedition may be looked upon as at an end. A telegram, which reaches us from the camp, states that the captives have been given up, and adds that the troops will retire in a few days. The chief Medhi has offered to give himself up; if he kept out of the way it would not be worth our while to occupy his jungles.

We regret to announce the death of the Venerable George Warlow, Archdeacon of Madras, which occurred on Jan. 25, the cause being typhoid fever.

We learn by telegraph from Moulmein that Mr. Hallett was to leave Hleneboay for the Shan States on the 23rd. Mr. Hallett is travelling in co-operation with Mr. Colquhoun, who by this time should be well on his way from Bangkok towards the Burma frontier, as the Siam Government have promised to assist his exploration. Mr. Hallett's party consists of Dr. Cushing, two interpreters, five followers, and six elephants.

The Juries are still busy at the Calcutta Exhibition, but no lists of awards have yet been published.

A further extension of the Rewari-Ferozepore State Railway to Sima will be opened for traffic on Feb. 1.

The Artillery officer whose singular disappearance from Delhi we noticed some time ago, has not returned, and we believe has not been heard of since. His property is to be sold by order of the committee of adjustment.

The winner of the blue ribbon of Indian rifle shooting, the Northern India Association's championship, is, this year, the well-known shot, Lieutenant T. Lamb, of the South Lancashire Regiment. Next to him comes Major T. W. Otley, R.E.; their respective totals being 822 and 786.

Surgeon-General Cunningham, the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India, will probably remain at his post till the expiry of his tour of service next autumn.

The prevalence of small-pox in various parts of India has attracted the serious attention of the sanitary authorities, and vaccination operations are being carried out with more than usual energy. These epidemics recur every five or six years, and the time seems to have come round for the disease to put in its periodical appearance.

It is understood that when Mr. F. R. Hogg, the Director-General of the Post Office, takes leave, it will be his virtual retirement from the service.

Colonel Collett, Deputy Adjutant General, has returned to Army Headquarters at Calcutta, from his trip to the Bangalore Camp with the Commander in Chief.

INDIAN MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

[From the Bombay Gazette, Feb. 1.]

It is not often, we are glad to say, that officers desert Her Majesty's service, but that Major F. N. Innes, R.A., has done so there is now no doubt. An advertisement appears in an up-country paper, and emanating from Delhi, on behalf of a committee of adjustment calling for claims against the effects of Major Innes, "who deserted from Her Majesty's service." The last similar case in our remembrance is that of Lieutenant Exham, 4th Hussars, which occurred at home. That gentleman deserted, if we do not mistake, from Aldershot.

Lieutenant Colonel Borradale, C.B., R.A., has been appointed Assistant Adjutant General, Royal Artillery, in succession to Colonel T. N. Holberton.

Colonel A. C. Johnson, R.H.A., has assumed temporary command of the Sirhind Division, vice General Hughes, who completed his tenure on the 22nd inst.

Major Dyke and Captain the Honourable C. Lambton, Northumberland Fusiliers, have been posted to the 2nd and 1st battalions respectively.

Major Gibbs, 2nd Royal Warwickshire, on leave in England, joins the regimental depot for duty.

Major General Sir Herbert Macpherson, commanding the Division, left Allahabad on Friday night for inspection at Cawnpore, accompanied by Lieutenant Colonel Palmer, A.A.G., and Lieutenant Childers, A.D.C. On returning from Cawnpore, during the present week, General Macpherson will leave again for the south of his division, going first to Mozufferpore.

Major C. J. S. Cahill, Bombay S.C., becomes Lieutenant Colonel on completion of twenty-six years' service.

The following officers proceed home on leave:—Captains Bather, King's Own Borderers, for 12 months; Wood, 8th Hussars, for 15 months; Hay, Royal Lancaster Regiment, and Montgomery, 1st Rifle Brigade, for 6 months.

Surgeon-Major T. B. O'Brien, Army Medical Department, remains in England, on extended leave, until 5th March next.

Lieutenant W. A. E. St. Clair, R.E., assistant engineer, P. W. D., has obtained two years' furlough.

The 5th Regiment N. L. L., from Deesa, at Mhow on the 18th inst., and the D Battery 2nd Brigade R. A., from Kirkee, arrived at Ahmedabad on the same date.

Colonel Collett, Deputy Adjutant General, has returned to Army Head-quarters at Calcutta from his trip to the Bangalore Camp with the Commander in Chief. Sir Donald Stewart proposed to meet the Viceroy at Madras, and proceed with His Excellency direct to Hyderabad.

A Calcutta correspondent telegraphs to an up-country paper:—"Officers who have returned from the Bangalore Camp give appreciative accounts of the manoeuvres, and their impartial testimony may be taken as a proof of the great success achieved."

We have to acknowledge the receipt of an admirable compilation on the subject of tactics by Captain M. Horace Hayes. The work is not only a handy work for students for the various examinations in the course of an army career, but is by its fine grasp of principles rendered interesting to the general reader. The "Student's Manual of Tactics" is published by Thacker and Co.

A Calcutta paper, speaking of the Aka expedition, writes:—"Those at the front complain of the performances of the 150lb. mountain gun. Its range is too short to be of use, and it is awkward to carry and to work. One of the gun carriages went all to pieces after only four rounds had been fired. A fact of this kind should cause the Ordnance Department to revise the equipment for the gun."

COURTS-MARTIAL.—Private Thomas Jones, West Yorkshire Regiment, was charged before a District Court-martial with conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline on board Her Majesty's troopship Euphrates on Dec. 27, 1883. The Court found the prisoner guilty, and sentenced him to be imprisoned with hard labour for one year. Brigadier General S. de B. Edwards, commanding the Bombay District, confirmed the sentence.—Private Syed Hoosein (lance naik) of the 21st Regiment N.I., was charged before a European District Court-martial with having at Bombay, on or about the 16th of September, 1883, altered a portion of a document authorising him to obtain a loan from the regimental schroff, after it had been signed by his wing commander, Major C. E. Echelaz, of the Marine Battalion, by converting the word "sixteen" into "sixty-two." The prisoner was also charged with disgraceful conduct, in having at Bombay done a thing with intent to defraud, to wit, that he committed criminal breach of trust in respect of different sums of money, aggregating Rs. 75, entrusted to him in his capacity as wing writer. The Court found the prisoner guilty, and sentenced him to hard labour for six months, and further to be discharged with ignominy, and in addition to forfeiture of arrears of pay and allowances, and other public money due to him, to the amount of Rs. 75-2-1, to make good the loss caused by his misconduct. The sentence was confirmed by Brigadier General S. de B. Edwards, commanding the Bombay District.

THE FATAL ACCIDENT ON A VOLUNTEER RANGE.—Captain F. R. Begbie, Adjutant, 1st Punjab Rifles, writes to the Civil and Military Gazette:—"Sir,—In your issue of the 23rd inst., with reference to the above accident, you remark that 'it must be observed that the regulations regarding the use of the Volunteer Rifle Range must be somewhat lax, unless it is proved that the deceased was authorised to act as a marker.' The accident alluded to occurred on a rifle range which has not been used by Volunteers for at least two years, and from which the usual accessories of a range had been removed long ago. The range was temporarily lent to the military authorities this season, and is occasionally used by one of the corps quartered at Rawalpindi, for putting its men through their usual course of musketry; but it has not been used for that purpose by the Volunteers. The marker, moreover, was in no way connected with the Volunteer-range establishment, but was, I understand, a private servant. To sum up the case:—An officer of the Regulars and a Volunteer officer practise on a rifle range which, although a Volunteer one, is, for the nonce, being used by the military; the marker is shot—not by the Volunteer officer, but by his companion."

Lieut. Colonel S. Penny has been appointed to the command of Royal Artillery in the Northern Division, Bombay Army.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1884.

THE ANNEXATION OF MERV BY RUSSIA.

"ENGLAND'S weakness is Russia's opportunity" is the first axiom in the politics of the Eastern Question. To this fundamental axiom, Russia herself apparently adds a second, "A Liberal Ministry means England's weakness." The Russian Government has manifested its belief in this latter statement by its action on at least two most memorable occasions. When Mr. Gladstone was last in power, and when France was rendered helpless by the crushing victories of the German arms, Russia tore up the Black Sea clauses of the Treaty of Paris, and politely informed the Liberal Ministry of the outrage as a fait accompli. And now, when Mr. Gladstone is once more Prime Minister of England, Russia, having steadily worked away at the completion of her military preparations up to the Afghan frontier ever since the success of the Midlothian campaign, takes formal possession of Merv, as quietly and comfortably as if the operation were a petty detail of domestic police, instead of a defiance of England that will ring through every bazaar in Asia. This view, doubtless, harmonises with the wishes and aspirations of Mr. Chamberlain and the Caucus-mongers of Birmingham. But does it satisfy the great Liberal party of England? It is of a piece with the policy that has made us scuttle out of Kandahar; that has turned the other cheek to the smiter of Majuba Hill; that has looked on with fear and trembling while Hicks, and Baker, and their brave comrades have been leading forlorn hopes doomed to destruction; and that finally has stopped the ears of our rulers to the dying appeals of Tewfik Bey, and the gallant garrison of Sinkat. But does all this really commend itself to the patriotism of that Liberal party that was proud to be led by Palmerston to the day of his death, and that has had so large a share in the making of the great past of England? The Quaker policy of a Bright, that cries "Perish India," that would sell our ships of war and disband our armies, and that would commit our national defence and our national honour to the keeping of Providence and a Committee of International Arbitration, is foolish, unpractical, and quixotic, but it is at least straightforward and intelligible. But what word of apology can any Liberal, with the spirit of a mouse, offer for a policy that bombards Alexandria, and then looks on at the massacre of Sinkat, and all the horrors of the last few months in the Soudan?—that sends out Gordon into the desert, with a stick in his hand?—that hurries off an expedition at the eleventh hour to relieve Tokár, whilst it proclaims a renewal of the slave-trade in the Eastern Soudan, and acquiesces in the final triumph of Russia in Central Asia? These, surely, must be difficult questions, to say the least, for any conscientious Liberal to answer. The seductive power of eloquence may lead a docile majority in the House of Commons to put these questions out of sight. But the skeleton is there in the cupboard, all the same; and the constituencies may be trusted to vindicate the honour of English Liberalism, that has been misrepresented and betrayed, but will not be permanently disgraced.

Of the ultimate condemnation of the traitorous apathy of the Government by the people of England, we entertain no doubt; but the question of the moment is, what will the Liberal supporters of the Government in Parliament say to this? If they say nothing, they are less patriotic than the friends of Mr. Gladstone in the Russian Press expect them to be; for the only point of anxiety discoverable in all the articles with which the Russian Press has been teeming since the annexation, is the fear lest the outrage should injure Mr. Gladstone in the estimation of his fellow-countrymen here in England. The Novoe Vremya hazards the assertion that—

"The annexation of Merv at such a critical moment for the Gladstone Ministry will, no doubt, contribute to its discomfiture in no small degree. It only seems strange that if the great affection which Russia always professes towards the Liberal Cabinet be sincere, she should choose such a moment to take a step that must still further embarrass."

Further, the Times correspondent at St. Petersburg says that the Viedomosti—

"Exults over the quiet indifference which Russia has shown for British interests, British arms, and British remonstrances in thus taking a favourable opportunity of effecting so desirable a coup in Central Asia. It also makes a very unfavourable comparison of English rule over the natives of India with Russia's more benign influence among Asiatics generally. English policy in India, it says, is one in which the rule of classes and adventurers is uppermost. But these bitter remarks of the Viedomosti form the exception, and are, no doubt, attributable to the association of its editor with that mysterious and inconsistent chief of the Moscow Press, M. Katkoff. In an interview which I had this morning with a distinguished Russian diplomatist, I was again told that the temperate and sensible opinions of the Times on the subject of Merv had been very much appreciated. My informant regretted that the event had occurred at such an inopportune moment for the present English Government, as there was not the least desire to add to its embarrassment. It came quite unexpectedly for the Foreign Office; yet, as your readers are aware, the decision of the Turcomans was known a month ago."

The last words are those of the Times correspondent; and sincerely as our leading journal approves of anything that must be regarded as an accomplished fact, it is clear that the professions of the Russian Foreign Office are not held to be above all cavil.

We are glad to observe—it serves to keep up one's faith in the English character—that the provincial Press of England is rapidly awakening to the magnitude of the revolution that is being defiantly carried out under the very noses of Mr. Gladstone and Lord Granville in Central Asia. We quote one or two articles in another column; and we note that numerous similar articles are appearing in various parts of the country.

THE BENGAL TENANCY BILL AND THE OUDH TALUKDARS.

THE Pioneer to hand by the last mail contains an article which warmly urges the Government of India to try its prentice-hand on the Land Question in Oudh, before tackling the far more difficult and complicated issues involved in the Bengal Tenancy Bill. Our contemporary writes:—

"The advisability, as a general principle, of proceeding from the simple to the complex in dealing with legislative or political problems is so universally admitted, that it might seem superfluous to insist upon it, were it not that the Government of India, in its treatment of the two principal land questions now before it, appears to be ignoring this primary maxim of inductive inquiry. Lord Ripon is pledged to a reform of the Rent Law in Oudh as well as in Bengal, and every consideration of theory and expediency alike seems to us to point to the desirability of disposing of the smaller and simpler, before taking up the larger and more complicated task. The agitation to which controversies about the Ilbert Bill and Local Self-Government has given rise, has found but a faint echo in the Garden of India; and it would surely be wise to allow heated tempers and strained relations time to cool down and re-adjust themselves, before proceeding with a matter of such vast importance as the amendment of the Law of Landlord and Tenant in the most important and populous province of British India. It is now more than a year since the rent inquiry in Oudh was begun; and six months have passed since the publication of the Blue Book recording its results. Delay in settling the questions that have been raised is likely to be disastrous to the cultivators in whose interests the inquiry was undertaken. While the state of suspense continues, landlords will remain disposed to use more stringently than usual the oppressive powers which yet remain to them. Each year of delay will probably do more harm to the Oudh peasantry than five years of an amended Rent Act will do good."

There is possibly another good reason why the experiments of Lord Ripon and Mr. Ilbert should at first be confined to Oudh. It will be remembered that some Radical gentlemen in London, headed by Mr. Seymour Keay, Mr. Borlase, of the "Farmers' Alliance," and other so-called "opponents of landlordism," met a short time since and passed a resolution approving of the principles of the Bengal Tenancy Bill. This resolution was published in the Daily News; whence we learn that it was either moved or seconded by the Raja Rampal Singh, the amiable and accomplished Oudh Talukdar who now resides at Rampur House, Sudbury, near Harrow. We do not know whether the Raja fully represents the opinions of his brother Talukdars in Oudh; but it may perhaps be assumed—when a respected Oudh Talukdar takes such a prominent part in advocating a tremendous extension of Free Sale of tenures, Fair rents, Fixity of tenure, Compensation for disturbance of tenants-at-will, and Abolition of Contracts between landlords and tenants—that the Oudh Talukdars, as a body, are prepared cordially to accept these views of Mr. Ilbert. If this is so, the advantage to be gained by the Government of India, in commencing operations in a province where the path of reform is already made easy for them, is so obvious that the representations of the Pioneer can hardly fail to have weight with Lord Ripon. Moreover, as the direct interest of the Government in the land is greater in Oudh than it is in Bengal, it will be an act of grace to apply the pruning-knife first of all in a province where its effects will not be felt solely by private owners. Perhaps the influence of the Raja Rampal Singh of Rampur with his brother Talukdars may be sufficient to induce them to come forward and invite the desired legislation.
